Sir William Mulock.

Sir William Mulock, Grand Old Man of the Canadian Bench, recently observed his 90th birthday. One of the ablest jurists Canada ever produced, Sir William at fourscore and ten is just as active mentally as most men are at the half-century mark. All Canadians wished him many happy returns of the day.—London Free Press.

Thirteen.

Brooklyn court has rendered judgment in a lawsuit which had been going on for thirteen years. The plaintiff, who won, will now have different ideas about the number thirteen from those of the defendant.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

Killing More People.

The National Safety Council of the United States reports that in 1933 there were 30,500 persons killed in highway accidents. That was less than the high figure reached in 1928, when the deaths totalled 32,675.

And yet no person seems to have become unduly alarmed. The cars are allowed to run just the same, and there is no talk of taking them off the roads. The killing of people seems to be accepted as something which is to be expected.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

That Kindly Word.

We are apt to reserve our kindly word of appreciation until the ears of the one concerned can no longer hear; we pay homage when the eyes are closed and cannot see the tribute. Perhaps we shall yet learn to do better.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

Spinach Got a Good Start.

When an editor can't find anything else to do he can start and look at statistics. Readers always like to get a few figures and facts and it gives a paper a certain standing to publish them. The Kingston Whig-Standard editor was impressed by prunes and he wrote:

"Consumption of prunes in United States has taken a great rise in recent years, but it has not yet become a rival to spinach as the subject of jest."

We have become convinced that jesting is not going to halt the march of spinach. The spinach crusade got away to a good start. The doctors spoke of a certain vitamin it contained which could not be secured elsewhere; health clinics favored stoking away great bales of the stuff, and men who write health articles for the newspapers chipped in and began telling the masses what spinach would do for them. People have the notion that they need more vitamins. They have no particular idea what vitamins will do to them or for them, and that is why spinach managed to skewer itself on popular fancy.

You can jest at spinach if you like, but you can't spot it. The people are all for it; if you detest the stuff that makes no difference; the rule is that it's good for you. All that is necessary to make any particular thing popular is to have the right people say it contains vitamins.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

P...ng in a Tip.

In Kansas City a minister was paid with a fake $3 bill after he had performed a marriage ceremony. This recalls the experience, some years ago, of a Brantford minister. He had successfully tied the knot when the groom drew him to one side and whispered that he hadn't any money for a fee, but he could show him how to fix the meter so that it would only half register.—Brantford Expositor.

Saying It With Flowers.

If there were such a thing at Huron College as a chair of Caristian Charity, undoubtedly it should be filled by Principal Waller, who in the annual booklet for alumni writes as follows: "Unfortunately our library accommodation is by no means adequate, and books are sometimes borrowed in the absence of the librarian without any memorandum being left of the transaction. I should be very grateful if every one of the recipients of this letter, who has at any time been at Huron College, would look over his shelves and see if by any accident there are some of the college library books which should be returned and at the same time if there are any belonging to myself."—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

Japan Finds Nickel.

Tokio reports, with evident elation, that a large deposit of nickel ore has been found in Korea. The ore is said to be rich enough to pay the working, and contains other minerals which will help to bear the cost. That will consolidate Japan's position as the industrial country of the East. Nickel is being used in a constantly increasing variety of ways for manufacturing purposes, chiefly for hardening steel. Until recent years Japan had to import both iron and nickel, or nickel-steel. Now that it can draw iron and coal from Manchuria and nickel from Korea, it will be independent of foreign sources of supply, and its competitors will know what to expect in the way of increased competition. The greatest advantage, from Japan's point of view, will be the possession of home supplies of hardened steel from which to manufacture guns, battleships and other war equipment.—Edmonton Bulletin.

THE EMPIRE.

Aviation and Empire.

None of us surely doubts that aviation will play as vital a part in the future of the Empire as shipping has done and still does today. Each additional thread spun in the great web that draws closer the distant outposts must, therefore, be hailed as a major achievement in imperial progress. While the work has certainly been done in this great branch of transport, one with such infinite possibilities, we are far too inclined to pat ourselves on the back and turn a blind eye on the rapid advance made by others. When we consider the special significance of transport to a far-flung Empire and grant the vital importance of Great Britain being in the forefront of every branch of world transport, we must admit we have by no means made the rapid strides in mercantile aviation that we might. —Hong Kong Press.

Ceylon's Need: Statistics.

The time has come when Ceylon, like other countries, has to begin to think in figures to a much greater extent than it has been accustomed. Hitherto this country has displayed a lamentable distaste for statistics which is evidenced not only by the absence of any well-organized statistical service, but also by the lack of independent and serious students of the economics of the country. The newspapers cannot perform the functions of economic and trade journals and statistical departments. A well organized social statistics service, dealing among subjects with domestic production, retail prices, unemployment and the cost of living, is clearly necessary if current problems are to be effectively tackled.—Ceylon Daily News.

How Britain Did It.

To determine the precise causes of an industrial revival is never a simple task, but, unquestionably, the policies of Britain's National Government have played a large part in her convalescence. British manufacturers are certain today of the home market, and the tariffs have provided Britain with an exceedingly valuable weapon of bargaining. States which only two or three years ago turned a stony face to all the demands of British Governments and manufacturers for easier access through their tariff walls are pleading now for a similar favor from Britain. Her commerce with Germany, with the Argentine and with Russia has been, or is being, brought to a condition of equilibrium. The Ottawa Conference has given her a hold on the Dominions, whose attitude to British manufacturers formerly had been little different from that of foreign nations; and all parties are deriving solid benefits from their bargain.—Weekly Irish Times.

A Uniting India.

The Indian representatives at three Round Table Conferences, extending over two years, have had their critics. They have also had their dark days, when prospects from their point of view looked as black as could be. There were faint hearts in this country who at one time doubted whether any good purpose would be served by Indian collaboration with the Select Committee, unique as the opportunity offered to them was. One important fact is the team spirit of the Indian delegates. There was greater cohesion between them than ever before. On most issues they were able to present a united front, and at the close they presented a joint memorandum. This display of unity by Hindus, Muslims and other minorities is bound to have its effect, since nothing weakens India's case and strengthens the hands of opponents of the White Paper in England so much as conflicting claims by various communities, which lend color to the old story of a house divided against itself. The moral of the Indian delegates' unity should not be lost on the country at large.—The Times of India.

Preparedness and Peace.

The Imperial Government is exhibiting the utmost patience in its efforts to preserve the peace and to cultivate a spirit of peace; but it is acting with wisdom by beginning to make ready to meet "the peril that nears." It is no more inconsistent to do both these things than it is to follow the shrewd advice of Cromwell to "trust in God and keep your powder dry." Faith with damp powder courts failure; dry powder and faith may work wonders. There is something grand and inspiring in the spectacle of a mighty nation armed and ready, yet continuously and consistently preserving the policy of peace and urging it upon peoples of character more impulsive. The influence of such a nation in world politics is not calculable; it is the surest guarantee of universal peace. Such in the not remote past has been the British nation, never more influential for peace than when she was ready for war. Conversely, when she is less ready for war she will be less influential for the peace which she so ardently desires. —The Australasian (Melbourne).

Composer Injured in Cab

Film Contract is Signed By Soviet With Americans

Moscow.—The first contract allowing Americans to make films in the Soviet Union for release throughout the world has just been signed between the Soviet Kino Trust and a group of young Americans, William Field, Jr., Louis Bigelow and James Withrow, Jr., who recently spent several months taking pictures in the North Caucasus.

The contract does not cover "regular film dramas" here but semi-educational and folklore pictures, like "Chang" or "Grass," and there is a stipulation that no part of the reels may be sold for incorporation in other pictures. The contract runs until the end of 1934.

The American covered Dagestan, Swanetia, Georgia and other Caucasian areas this Summer to illustrate the "old and new" and the Soviet policy toward minor nationalities. They are covering life in and around Moscow during the Winter.

B.R.—Before Railways

Sixty-five years ago the village of Camilla, six miles north of Orangeville, had 150 inhabitants and today but two dozen people live there, observes the Toronto Star. Camilla is now to lose its post office. That is the final blow—it is to be served by a postman going his rounds on a rural route. In the days when the nearest railroad station was at Brampton, Camilla, no doubt, had its post office, its hotel (or two,) its general store, its blacksmith and wagon shop, is buyer of grain and its dealer in square timber. It was one of the centres of business in a pioneer society. Oxen, with heavy loads, dawdled along its main streeet.

"The United States to-day is ruled by organized minorities."—Emerson Fosdick.

Accounting of Hutton-Mdivani Estate is Safely Recorded

New York.—Princess Barbara Hutton Mdivani and her husband, Prince Alexis Mdivani of Georgia, left for the Orient recently with an accounting for her $40,000,000 estate tucked safely away in the records of a Suffolk County court.

The accounting was made by her father and guardian—Franklyn Hutton—and has just been revealed.

It showed that Barbara was allowed $400,000 a year for living expenses while she was preparing to marry Prince Alexis. Previously her allowance was $250,000 annually.

She inherited the $40,000,000 estate last November when she was 21.

Her father was allowed $7,000 a year for her upkeep while she was a child of tender years. He purchased for her a $120,000 private car so that she and her friends could travel between resorts.

In one of her petitions to the court, Barbara said that her fortune "is so large I see no necessity why, upon my marriage, I should not immediately enjoy the luxuries which a fortune, such as mine, will enable me to have." She asked and obtained $26,600 for unemployment relief.

"I shall be more than repaid," she said then, "by the realization that it will be expended in aiding those whose needs are greater than mine."

No Children At All Predicted For 1970

College Park, Md.—Dr. O. E. Baker, senior agricultural economist of the United States department of agriculture, predicts that "if the present trend of depopulation continues, in 1970 there will be no children at all."

Dr. Baker made his prediction while addressing the annual convention of the state's extension service workers at the University of Maryland.

Speaking on "use of land for the welfare of the people," he said only in the rural sections of northern New England and some rural sections of New York has the birth rate shown an increase recently.

Frances Perkins Gives Brief Report

Washington.—This would seem to refute the oft-heard statement that females form the wordy sex.

The first annual report of the first woman member of a United States Government set a new low on wordage, and cut a new pattern. What Frances Perkins had to say about the Labor Department consumed in print but six pages and five lines.

Instead of simply summarizing a 12-month, with some recommendations for the future, she put down a skeleton labor program; and made a prediction that six specific temporary gains would last.

The late William N. Doak, former Secretary of Labor, wrote 20 pages and eight lines in prelude to the 1932 report of the department, 15 pages and six lines in 1931.

James J. Davis, in 1930, wrote a 32-page introduction.

Miss Perkins recommendations were nine in number, dealing with employment service, mediation, unemployment insurance, stabilization of employment, low cost housing, safety of workers, state and federal cooperation, old age security and conference methods.

Presently a plain but well dressed woman came down the steps, was treated with every deference and, after giving some instructions to the management, entered her car and was whisked away. The Princess Hermoine, as she was then called, is a pleasant little woman; much nicer than any pictures I had seen of her. She was staying at the hotel for three weeks and the ladies of our party had the opportunity to study her more closely in the drawing-room that evening. I personally went into the town, heard a zither band in a beer garden and enjoyed myself in another way.

To come back to our luggage car. Just as I was beginning to worry about some possible mishap, the driver apologetically pulled up to the hotel and showed me three flat tires that had impeded his progress. So that ended well.

The Grand Hotel at Berchtesgaden was, apparently, a favourite resort for German royalty. In a large dining-room there was a life-sized portrait of William II. and in the office there were framed and signed photographs of other members of the family. The town has assumed new importance in the past year. It is the favourite summer place of Herr Hitler and many visitors were attracted there in the hope of seeing him. This illustrates the tremendous change that has come over Germany, a change not noticeable to the outside observer, except for the deductions made through festival and seemingly unimportant happenings.

"Open Air Opera in Rome" is the subject for next week—a considerable jump from Germany, but these articles are nothing if they are not informal. I would like you to write in and tell me how you enjoy them. It isn't always possible to correctly guage the reader's point of view.

Rise in Gold Price is Feature of Year

Any review of the past year in Canada would fall short if special emphasis was omitted on the manner in which Canada's mining industry held up. Taking in all minerals, value of production was $198,253,000, an increase of eight percent. over the 1932 total and this does not provide for an extra $3,000,000 approximately for the higher price obtained by the marketing of Canadian gold on the London market. The rise in the price of gold stood out as the prevailing between $32 and $33 at the end of the year 1933, compared with around $25 the end of 1932, in Canadian funds. While the permanency of the higher figure cannot be guaranteed it is not expected, according to well informed mining officials, ever to sell back to its old figure.

Was Difficult Year For Both Railroads

Canada's railways experienced difficult times in the past year, but by dint of internal economies succeeded in making a fair showing despite decreased revenues and competition. Exports of agricultural and animal products also increased last year very substantially, according to Hon. Robert Weir, Minister of Agriculture, exports to the United Kingdom alone amounting to $143,000,000 as compared with $139,000,000 for the previous year.

Better prices were being obtained by the farmer for his products, although there is room for much improvement before agriculture resumes a normal state. Forestry operations are also on the increase with larger gangs going into the woods this winter to carry on work.

Lumber Exports Gain to United Kingdom

Canada's lumber export trade during 1933 experienced a decidedly substantial gain and statistics to the end of November showed total exports of planks and boards amounted to 955,987 million feet, an increase of about 38 percent. Value of this export business was $16,365,544, an increase of $3,300,000 over the preceding period or more than 25 percent. There were also sharp gains in the export of Douglas fir, hardwood, white pine and other squared timbers from British Columbia and New Brunswick.

Production of newsprint by Canadian mills during the first eleven months of the year amounted to 1,831,828 tons as compared with 1,769,279 tons in the same ten months of 1932, being an increase for last year of 3.5 percent. Although the output was much below 1930 and 1931, the increase last year over 1932 is regarded as encouraging.

The Hills and the Sea

Alphonso went down to the ships and the seas;
Paulinus stayed home with the garden and bees.

Alphonso would dream in his hammock at night
Sweet dreams of the groves and the swallows in flight.

Paulinus would sit with the stars and the trees
And dream of white sails on soft swelling seas.

Said he of the ships to the man of the hills.

"Joy's for the rover, but sorrow's for me,"
Said he of the hills to the man of the sea.
