COST OF BRINGING UP CHILDREN

Much is heard about the high cost of education, but figures prepared by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics go to show that it costs only about $755 to keep the average child at school for eight years, but it costs more than that for clothing, twice as much for food and three times as much for housing. Altogether, it is said to cost $5756 to bring up a child to the age when he is self-supporting. Next to good health, a good education is the greatest asset a youngster can have.—Gragas News Record.

YOU SEE IT EVERY DAY

What chances men take of being severely burned and even losing their life, is seen at almost every service station where gasoline is fed to the tank of a car. The danger of the car will stand over the tank and watch the inflammable fluid being poured in with a lighted cigar or cigarette between his lips and he will have even seen them strike a match to light their pipe. In the open air the danger is not so great, but it is nevertheless a great danger and once the fumes of the gasoline become ignited, the explosion follows and the man standing nearby is liable to be the most severely burned. We have frequently noticed young men, while the gas tank was being filled, strike a match and light a cigarette. Accidents do occur, and often lives are lost by such carelessness, but those who do escape do not seem to heed the many warnings. Recently we read of a man who was removing gas from a car with a lighted pipe in his mouth. In a few hours he was being cared for in an hospital, and is probably disfigured for life. Fire and gasoline don't mix any more than alcohol and gasoline will mix.—Wingchester Press.

WEED DESTRUCTION

Farmers can do much toward the elimination of weeds from their properties and their district if they will give more attention to the destruction of this menace to good crops. It was pointed out at a meeting of agricultural men at Essex recently. While some farmers realize the necessity of destroying the weeds on their farms, others are lax in this, and render ineffective all the work that has been done. The sow thistle and dodder are the enemies on which the farmer should wage war and he will not be worsted, unless he farmers do their utmost to prevent the weeds from gaining a foothold on their farms. It is to their own advantage to do so, for it means less work and better crops in the end. Testing their seed before sowing is one way of preventing the spread of weeds. Destroying the weeds as many times a year as it is necessary is another method. It is up to every farmer to co-operate with the weed inspectors, and help make their task easier.—Amherstburg Echo.

AERIAL FREIGHT TRAINS

Who knows, but that, as now proposed, engines pull the freight train, a powerful plane will pull the freight train of its heels.—Herald Chronicle.

LIFE AND KISSES

A would-be creep-charger has informed an individual and unresponsive world that every kiss indulged in shortens one's life three minutes. This chap has the correct dope, he has certainly suggested a delightful method of leaving this vale of tears. If the pleasures of kissing must be given up in order to reach a ripe old age, a referendum on the subject would undoubtedly be unanimous in favor of an early but blissful demise.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

ON THE HIGHWAYS

There are just as many discourteous drivers in Canada as anywhere else. We have the road hogs. We have the people who never stop at a red light, but expect everyone else to. We have the "fender scraper" and the obnoxious horn-blowers and the unreasonable cutters-in and all the rest who make driving more of a nightmare for decent citizens with some sense of their obligation to society. Motorists courtesy—what a change its general adoption would mean to the whole business of driving.—Border Cities Star.

FAMOUS FAIR PASSES

Passage from the contemporary scene of some of Old England's most ancient traditions and customs. An example is the pending abolition of the famous Stourbridge Fair at Cambridgeshire. The fair dates back to the year 1211. In the Middle Ages it was one of the most famous fairs in the world, bringing merchants and travellers from all over Europe. Milton mentions it in "Paradise Lost" King Henry VIII levied on the fair's profits in 1539, to relieve his own financial stringency.—Guelph Mercury.

FLOODS UPON DROUGHT

Nature seems to lose no opportunity for an ironical comment on our present distress. In the midst of widespread flooding we are in drought. At the moment when Parliament is conferring drastic emergency powers to deal with water shortage, Nature is uncomfortably profuse in her assurances of water in abundance. Yet the fear of shortage is real and justified, and the proposed emergency powers lose none of their point.—Glasgow Herald.

THE BRITISH MARKET

The Bingley Reorganization Commission, whose report is published today, although nominally concerned with the textile industry, covers the whole of the most supplies of raw materials, such as wool, cotton, silk, and other commodities. The report is a far-reaching scheme for their control. The recommendations are to be established to prescribe the methods and conditions of all sales of raw materials. The commission is to be composed of representatives of the British wool, cotton, and silk industries. THE EMPIRE

TIT FOR TAT

An amusing "Sunday observance" deadlock has occurred in the little Berkshire town of Farnington between the members of the Farnington and the local council. For years the butchers of the town have been in the habit of killing animals on Sunday, but the District Council are considering taking action to stop the practice. The members of the Farnington and the local council are in a deadlock. The butchers say that if they are prosecuted they will keep a watch on members of the council, and will inform the police of any member who does not attend church.—Banffshire Journal.

AN INDUSTRIAL BAROMETER

Facts and figures show beyond dispute that Great Britain is now over an area which is constantly widening. Two of the surest indicators of the state of the output of steel and the production of coal, the output of British steel last month reached the highest figures that it has attained since October 1929, before the slump abroad became acute. The production of coal for the first quarter of the year, though not yet published in detail, is known to have been markedly in advance of that for 1933 or 1932.—London Daily Mail.

HOW RESEARCH PAYS

To those who are still sceptical as to the practical value of scientific research in the development of industry—and the migratory nature of the provision that is made for such work by most countries—suggests that they are many—we commend personal of the Report of the Department of Scientific and Industrial Research. In it there is told the arresting tale of how the grant of £1,000,000 made by the British Government in 1917 for the encouragement of industrial research, which is now exhausted, was not only well but most profitably spent. It is admitted in the report that it is inadvisable as a rule to assess in terms of money the value of the work done by research in industry. A result of experiments by the Electrical Research Association costing £200,000, annual revenue accruing to £1,000,000 have accrued while the Iron and Steel Research Council's investigations are expected to result in saving about £300,000 worth of coke per annum in the production of

HADDONFIELD, N.J.—Pants on men and skirts for women, a decree of the local government. The decree is a result of a long and bitter struggle. THE ENLIGHTENMENT

We are visiting the British Isles this summer and the prospect has a glamour and allurements that it is difficult to put into words. We enter a different world, full of the romance and history of the past; unbelievable castles, hedges along the winding roads, green fields that merge into the landscape, the quaint villages with the steeped church-doling the whole, thatched cottages and the old stone bridges. We can see this all in no other country but England. There is no other country where you can take a walk in the country and see so much of the past. Human Historie

Stegfried Sassoon in the Spectator. The multitudes dead, like books unread, are somewhere in the library of Time. Glimpses we get of what they felt and thought, and how they lived. Humdrum and homely, or loftily sublime; but mostly they are ghostly, nameless, thoughtless. Whose journeying shadows fell and left no trace; Whose words in worlds of woe and wedded thought. Are now the language of a vanished race. Nothing exists in life more strange than these. Lost lineaments of human histories.
