Why Township Fairs Should Be Supported

Editor's Note -
We regret very much that the essay appearing in last week's edition was not the first prize essay at the township fair. The essay was written by Miss Myrtle Johnson of Walpole was the winner of first prize.

As fair day comes around once more many people are asking questions concerning the benefits derived from our fair. Is the fair a good thing for all concerned? Do the people get knowledge, enjoyment or training from it? Will it help them to be better citizens?

Let us consider these questions by township fairs. Perhaps the most important factor in the township fairs is the people's interest. People have planned many things for big or for part in the annual show, so if you wish to give greater interest in agriculture you should hold a township fair. The people of the township should be given a chance to demonstrate the results of their labour.

If such fairs were not held how could one expect to stimulate thrift and industry in maintaining such work on a higher plane. It would be very likely to get into decline and bring about a wave of negligence indifference and waste. The fair helps people to think logically and use good judgment in making selections which exhibit. This training is most important for we shall always be making judgments or decisions and practice will certainly help to make perfect.

The township fairs are also a great help to the community socially. We cannot work together for a common closer bond of friendship and so the fair tends to unite the various members of the community and gives the people a chance to meet relatives and friends from a distance that perhaps they have not met since last fair day.

So the supporting of such fairs are not only urgent but are a necessity to provide a higher standard of community stability for the present and coming generations.

Editor's Note -
We regret very much that the essay appearing in last week's edition was not the first prize essay at the township fair. The essay was written by Miss Myrtle Johnson of Walpole was the winner of first prize.

As fair day comes around once more many people are asking questions concerning the benefits derived from our fair. Is the fair a good thing for all concerned? Do the people get knowledge, enjoyment or training from it? Will it help them to be better citizens?

Let us consider these questions by township fairs. Perhaps the most important factor in the township fairs is the people's interest. People have planned many things for big or for part in the annual show, so if you wish to give greater interest in agriculture you should hold a township fair. The people of the township should be given a chance to demonstrate the results of their labour.

If such fairs were not held how could one expect to stimulate thrift and industry in maintaining such work on a higher plane. It would be very likely to get into decline and bring about a wave of negligence indifference and waste. The fair helps people to think logically and use good judgment in making selections which exhibit. This training is most important for we shall always be making judgments or decisions and practice will certainly help to make perfect.

The township fairs are also a great help to the community socially. We cannot work together for a common closer bond of friendship and so the fair tends to unite the various members of the community and gives the people a chance to meet relatives and friends from a distance that perhaps they have not met since last fair day.

So the supporting of such fairs are not only urgent but are a necessity to provide a higher standard of community stability for the present and coming generations.
