English Boys Liked Travel in Canada

LONDON — Deep appreciation of the hospitality and kindness extended by Canadians to a party of English school-boys toured the Dominion for six weeks in June and July is expressed by W. H. Stevenson, director of the tour.

Mr. Stevenson, writing to The Canadian Press, said: "The boys have had a wonderful experience which they will never forget. They have learnt in a short time a great deal about the politics, industry and life of the country generally and have gained knowledge which will enable them all their lives to take a real interest in Canadian affairs and the welfare of the Dominion.

"All of us hope to return to Canada some day and renew the many friendships we have made, but, whether this be possible or not, we shall all treasure the happiest memories of our Canadian tour and of the great kindness with which we were received by Canadians in every part of the Dominion."

Japanese Couple Make Vow of Love

TOKIO.—Divorce lawyers would do a slender business if all married couples were to take such an oath as was found on a piece of paper dropped inadvertently by a young Japanese waitress.

The girl had just been married and the paper fell from her purse while she was at work. It was an oath of love exchanged with her husband and read:

"We will not quarrel.

"We will shut our eyes to the defects of the other.

"We will understand each other."

Below were the signatures of husband and wife.

Faulty Brakes

The man or woman who takes out a driver's license performs a voluntary act which involves an implied contract with his fellow citizens. Surely one of the items of that contract is a declaration on the driver's part that he possesses and will exercise that speck of sense which tells him that brakes are lifesavers. It is no life-and-death matter if the engine won't turn over, but a car that can't be stopped within a reasonable distance is the equivalent of a mad elephant.—Winnipeg Tribune.

Tilted Workers

Colgate University research professors have made the astonishing discovery that the man who tilts back in his chair and cocks his feet on the desk can work faster than the fellow who sits in a normal position. Tests on a group of students revealed that the young men could add figures 7.1 per cent. faster and 14-1 more accurately with their feet elevated. Just the same if we catch anyone around our office with feet where arms ought to be we are afraid that what we say will sound rather old-fashioned.—Midland Free Press.

Try Common Sense

Another slogan which might be employed in an attempt to bring home to drivers, pedestrians and all others who make use of the highways the extreme folly of reckless and careless practices is "Try Common Sense," for it is lack of this ordinary, everyday, saving possession which lies at the root of a good many of the accidents which are occurring.—Brockville Recorder.

Dissenters

Strange as it may seem, there are still a few old-fashioned parents here and there who refuse to do what their children command them to do.—Windsor Star.

God Collection

The Metropolitan United Church of London was robbed of more than $800, representing two collections on Sunday. Congratulations mingle with condolences on the part of pastors with less generous flocks.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

An Australian Verdict

The leading women's publication of Australia took a straw vote as to whether the Dionne quintuplets should be return a to their parents or left in the charge of Dr. Dafoe. There were 24,000 answers with 16,000 in favor of the continuance of state care. This majority verdict would probably be substantiated in all other civilized lands.—Brantford Expositor.

Dr. J. W. Dafoe

Dr. J. W. Dafoe who is termed the Dean of western journalism, though 70 years of age, appears as stalwart and vigorous as a man half that age, and Mr. Brockington, in reporting to his long service to the people of Manitoba through his paper, the Winnipeg Free Press, stated that he believed he would go on so indefinitely that they would have to shoot him on the resurrection morning.—Coleman Journal.

Suspended for Life

In the expressed hope that it will make an impression on our own lawmakers and magistrates the Montreal Star reprints an item from an English paper which records the fact that

"Vivian Stacey Saunders, aged 30, dairy farmer, of Lane End High Wycombe, Bucks., was convicted at High Wycombe on two charges of driving a goods motor-van while under the influence of drink. He was suspended from driving for life and fined £10.

The St. Thomas Times Journal agrees heartily with the attitude taken by the Star. It observes that while suspension for life from driving a motor vehicle is a serious penalty it must be kept in mind that driving while drunk is also a serious offense.—Toronto Telegram.

A Busy King

The new King's automobiles are smaller than those used by King George, whose autos were exceedingly large and roomy. He had, in fact, the largest private cars in the world the wheel base being 157 inches, and the width 65 inches. Still, the new car which King Edward has purchased is large by ordinary standards, having a small desk in front of his favorite seat at which he will be able to write. King Edward is a busy man; indeed, he does not like to be idle. —Stratford Beacon-Herald.

Natural Pose

A farmer, visiting his son at the university, took the boy down town to have his photograph taken. The photographer suggested that the son stand with his hand on his father's shoulder.

"It would be more appropriate," remarked the father, "if he stood with his hand in my pocket." Rural Progress.

Comparatively Simple!

The Marquess of Willingdon, recently returned from a five-year term as Viceroy of India, has been offered the presidency of the British Broadcasting Corporation. Having made the Hindus and Mohammedans behave fairly well, His Lordship shouldn't experience much difficulty with interference, static and swing music.—Windsor Star.

"Good Will"

A large Japanese fleet has arrived at Amoy, China, on what is termed a "good will tour." On the other hand it is more than probable that the animating idea is to impress upon the Celestials the folly of displaying too much will on their own account.—Brantford Expositor.

Works Both Ways

Isn't this amused condemnation of the geographical ignorance of our visiting tourists being overdone? It would be just as possible, no doubt, to make a collection of the "faux pas" committed by Canadians on tour in the United States. Poking fun at the "innocent abroad" is an ancient and rather discredited pastime.—Hamilton Spectator.

EMPIRE

A Great Leader

Welcome to Sir Robert Borden, war-time leader of Canada, a splendid statesman in the Empire cause, foremost of the Empire Prime Ministers who ruled us in the dark days. He departed from the scene after the war, taking with him the deepest respect and love of the people. He was compelled during the war to do many stern and determined acts. There is now no man more admired and respected for his courage. The Empire wishes well of this devoted public servant who has contributed so much to the well-being of the British peoples.—London Express.

An Old Complaint

British goods may be the best in the world, but our salesmen need sales methods, says Mr. Poorenlung-Jensen, a big Danish retailer, are the world's worst. It is chastening for us to learn our short-comings from foreigners. Once was the time when British goods were so good that they sold themselves. Now they have to meet the blast of high-powered salesmanship. Since we as a nation are skilful enough to make good stuff, we ought to be able to acquire the skill to sell it, at home and abroad.—Manchester Chronicle.

The Song of the Shirts

The fable of the melancholic Sultan who was told he would not recover till he had slept in the shirt of a happy man and, sending forth his emissaries to the four quarters of the earth, found only one happy man—who had not a shirt to his back—has a very apt modern application, particularly as to the end. Happy, indeed, is the country nowadays that is not plagued with shirts, or "blessed" with them, for the blessing has very much the appearance of a plague in disguise. Unfortunately, "shirtomania" is catching. Even Egypt has developed it, and from the very beginning it is causing trouble. At first, there was merely an insignificant body of "green shirts" who found that the adoption of their underwear as a uniform gave them an importance that they would never have been able to obtain, or merit ,otherwise. Then the Wafd founded a counter-organization of "Blue shirts," and the trouble began. The Egyptian Army is shortly to be increased in strength. Now, if these young lads must needs wear a uniform, as it seems, and if they are so bursting with patriotic energy as they maintain, let them have their uniform by all means (a shirt if they insist), but let it be khaki.—Cairo Sphinx.

Women in War

After witnessing a battle in Spain, Mrs. Ruby Beach of Washington, D.C., (cousin of Author Rex Beach), reports:

"I saw girls in beach pyjamas carrying ammunition up to the men behind barricades. I saw women with rifles in their hands, fighting and firing from these barriers.

"Women were the worst and fiercest of fighters. They demanded that their men comrades kill prisoners, and often the men were horrified and refused to do what their women comrades demanded they do."

Rudyard Kipling said the same thing long ago: "The female of the species is more deadly than the male." —Cleveland News.

New Robot Signal System Facilitates the Traffic Flow

Important Step in Safety Program — Already Installed at Strategic Points—To Be Standardized Throughout The Province

Adopted by the Department of Highways for Ontario and deemed by traffic experts to be an important step in the Department's new highway safety program, a traffic-actuated signal system is now being installed at several Ontario points which will obviate the necessity for the motorist's waiting for a green light when there is no cross-traffic in proximity. According to tests, the new robot system reduces accidents, facilitates traffic flow, lessens the municipal cost of traffic control, as well as saving the motorist's time and temper.

Its use is expected to be standardized throughout the province at heavy intersections, traffic experts state. The first installation in Ontario went into operation at Niagara Falls, Ontario, at the Bridge and Victoria Sts. intersection, believed to one of the most dangerous in Canada in that this presents a network of railway and street-car tracks over two bisecting highways that are thoroughfares for a heavy flow of tourist traffic to and from Canada at this border point.

The system is also in operation at Newmarket, Ontario, where the Yonge-Eagle intersecting highways are important traffic arteries to Muskoka, Lake Simcoe and other vacation areas. The robot signals are also in use near Grimsby, Ontario, where provincial highways No. 8 and No. 20 cross. Installations are also planned in Toronto and Ottawa urban intersections.

While the signal light system, at present in general use, changes the stop and go lights on a fixed schedule, the new robot system has the passage of the vehicles themselves actuating the signal lights, explains A. V. Armstrong of Northern Electric, who is supervising the installations throughout Ontario. Waits for the green light at intersections where there is irregularity in traffic flow will no longer be necessary and there will be no inordinate delays for cross-traffic motorists. When the car crosses over traffic detectors, placed flush with the highway surface well back from the signal-equipped intersection, this passage establishes a contact with the control mechanism and assigns the right of way by means of the standard traffic signals —green, amber and red.

The safety and time-saving factors are particularly noticeable where there is a marked irregularity in traffic volume. Cars approaching the red light are given the right of way immediately unless traffic on the other thoroughfare is using the intersection. The waiting cars receive the right of way at the first break in the opposing traffic, this reverting at the first opportunity to the thoroughfare on which the countinuous traffic was interrupted. By this means, the intersection will be in constant use when traffic offers, and there will be no irritating delays for either the main stream of traffic or the cross-traffic.

Meaning of "Ottawa"

Observes the Brantford Expositor—Q.—What is the meaning of the name "Ottawa"?—T.Y.

A.—The word Ottawa comes from the Indian word "adawe" meaning "to trade," "to buy and sell," a term used by the Cree, Algonquin, Nipissing, Montagnais, Ottawa, and Chippewa Indians. It was supplied to the Ottawa tribe because from the earliest times, traditional and historical, they were noted as inter-tribal traders and barterers. They mostly dealt in cornmeal, sunflower oil, furs and skin, rugs or mats, tobacco and medicinal roots and herbs.

We can't figure out how it is that nature insisted on putting all the vitamins in spinach and liver and onions instead of apple pie and chocolate cake.

1-2-3 Method New for Diet

One Food For Breakfast, Two For Lunch, Three For Dinner Allowed

The 1-2-3 permits us to eat one food for breakfast, two foods for lunch, three foods for dinner. Tea or coffee counts as a food. Even a piece of bread or toast with dinner counts as one food. The only consolation in that within this limitation is the variety of meals, almost any quantity within reason is permitted.

These are your day's meals under 1-2-3 diet:—

Breakfast: One food. Quench thirst with hot lemon-water or fruit juice (unsweetened). Take bacon, ham, kidney, sausage, cereal, or any other food dish. Cook without seasoning. If you take tea or coffee, no other food as these beverages count as a food.

Lunch: Two foods. Any meat, fish or egg dish without seasoning. Potatoes, green vegetables, or a vegetable and sweet, or soup, fruit and sweet. Bread or toast may be substituted for one of the other foods.

Tea: Afternoon tea is not permitted, but unsweetened lemonade may be drunk plentifully between meals.

Dinner: Three foods — any meat, fowl or fish (without seasoning), vegetable and sweet, or soup, fruit and sweet. Bread or toast may be substituted for one of the other foods.

Airoddities

Air freight traffic by Pan American Airways, in and out of the Miami airport, Florida, often provides remarkable contrasts. One parcel, the other day, weighed only two ounces and contained a single false tooth which the owner had left behind in a hotel Bedroom. As a contrast to this tiny parcel was a 500 pound consignment which contained a mining machine crankshaft. This was being sent to a mining plant in the Andes Mountains over a route which involved only a few hours' journey by air, but would have taken nearly three weeks if traversed by pack mule. One strange consignment which passed through Miami recently came from a surgeon in Mexico. It was a tiny piece of living tissue from a patient, and it was being rushed by air for analysis in New York. The patient arrived at Miami at 5 o'clock one morning, and was on its way to New York two hours later, reaching a Manhattan hospital the following morning. There the laboratory workers carried out their tests so quickly that they were able to telegraph the results of their investigations within a few hours, and the surgeon in Mexico was able to carry out a prompt and successful operation.

Mr. Newrich: Let's go see "The Last Shot." They say it rivets your attention from the start to the finish.

Mrs. Newrich: No, let's go to something that's not so exciting. It's bad society manners to be interested in the show.

PROBLEMS OF EVERY DAY LIFE

By Dr. M. M. Lappin

Seeking Escape

An anxious mother has written for my advice regarding her little girl, and it seems to be a case of what the psychologists call "defence mechanism." She writes: "Some days our little girl (aged 12) complains of various kinds of pains and does not want to go to school. I have had her examined twice by our doctor who says she is quite fit and there is nothing wrong with her. We have noticed that these pains come regularly on the same days and if I allow her stay from school, the pains she complains of seem to pass away after a few hours and she is all right . . . "

If you are doubtful about your family doctor's decision have another doctor look her over just to make sure. Then proceed to think he is right, and I am sure I have said before in this column, I do not give medical advice.

It may be that, if you go into the matter you will find the cause of all the trouble in school. Perhaps there is a teacher whom she fears, or a subject she does not like, and the wish to escape, working subconsciously or consciously within her, produces the symptoms of which she complains. Then, when she has escaped the dreaded ordeal, the symptoms disappear and she is all right again.

Now it is not quite true to say that such pains are imaginary. They are very real, but they are produced by fear, so do not harshly accuse the child of shamming or of deception. Get to the root of the matter by inquiring what takes place at school on those particular days when your little girl complains of these symptoms, and you will probably discover it is something that can be easily rectified.

If you discover that it is some difficulty at school which she ought to face up to and is seeking to escape, then you must encourage her to face up to it. Show her there is nothing to fear, and make her feel that even her teachers do not expect from her more than the best she can do. Should you find that it is some particular teacher of whom she is afraid, a talk with the teacher might put the matter right and create a better understanding between teacher and child.

At all events, children ought to be trained to face life and that can never be done by over-indulging them with kindness and sheltering them from every difficulty and hardship, it will not do to give in to your little girl. If the doctor insists there is nothing organically wrong, then he is probably right, and you must look for the cause elsewhere. You will probably find it just where I have indicated you will.

Of course you must not be cross with the child and scold her. That would be cruel and would only tend to aggravate the symptoms. Be kindly, firm and reasonable and show her how these fears must be overcome, otherwise she will never be able to meet the problems of later life.

NOTE: The writer of this column is a trained psychologist and an author of several works. He is willing to deal with your problem and give you the benefit of his wide experience. Questions regarding PROBLEMS OF EVERY DAY LIFE should be addressed to: Dr. M. M. Lappin, Room 421, 73 Adelaide St. West, Toronto, Ontario. Enclose a 3 cent stamped addressed envelope for reply.

Alleged WIT

The customer gazed pensively at the barber. Something about him seemed rainer odd:

Customer (at last)—I say, isn't it unusual to see a barber with long hair and whiskers like yours?

Barber (nodding) — Yes, but it's good business. Every man who sees me they look on me asks for a hair cut and shave.

A rising young artist was showing a critic through his studio:

Artist (stepping in front of one of his early efforts)—This picture is one I painted to keep the wolf from my door.

Critic—Indeed! Then why don't you hang it on the door knob where the wolf can see it?

A man injures himself every time he avenges another.

Distracted Wife (at bedside of sick husband)—Is there no hope, doctor?

Doctor—I don't know. What were you hoping for?

How true it is that half of the men who look at their watches don't know what time it is after they have looked.

Cynthia—Daddy was quite pleased to hear you starting out to be a poet.

Her Newest—Oh, is he? That's great.

Cynthia—Yes, the last boy friend I had he tried to throw out was an amateur prize fighter.

Most things come to them who hustle while they wait.

If things are not coming your way . . . . . get in their way.

Teacher—Junior, tell me the definition of the word 'widow'.

Junior—A widow is a woman that lived so long with her husband that he died.

Mathematics Professor — If there are 52 weeks in the year, and superheated steams equals the distance from Bombay to Paris, what is my age?

Student—Forty-four, sir.

Mathematics Professor — Correct, and how did you prove that?

Student—Well, I have a brother who is twenty-two and he is only half nuts.

Host—I shall have to put you two fellows in the same room.

Guests—That's all right.

Host—Well, I think you'll have a very comfortable night. It is a feathered bed.

At two o'clock in the morning one of the guests awoke his companion.

Guest—Change places with me, Dick. (groaning) Its my turn to lie on the feather.

The man of character cannot do inferior work and keep his self respect.

Say what you please a belt was really never made for a man with a rotund abdomen.

Friend — How interesting. What part is he taking?

Harris — He is the furtive step heard retreating in the distance.

The "Countess" Is Dead

Springbank Snow Countess, S1871, sixteen-year-old Holstein cow, the world's greatest life-time producer of butterfat is dead. She died at the Springbank Farm of her owner, Mr. T. R. Dent, Woodstock, Ontario, on Sunday August 9. In December of last year at 15 years of age she completed her latest R.O.P. test with 18991 lbs. of 4.80% milk, 882 lbs. of butterfat; setting a new lifetime mark over all breeds, with a total production of 9062 lbs. of fat. Her highest year production, 1125 lbs. fat from 25,768 lbs. milk, was made in her 6-year-old form. She is the only cow that ever lived to have made three records above 1100 lbs. of fat. She is one above 1,000 lbs. fat; six above 900 lbs. fat or eight above 800 lbs. fat.

Mining Flashes

Big Master Consolidated Gold Mines announce that no further offering of treasury shares will be made at the present time. Diamond drilling has now commenced on the new shoot found lying 1,115 ft. north of the shaft to determine its downward extent. This shoot is 140 ft. long, with a width of 2.9 feet and has an average value of $21.49 in gold per ton. Drifting continues on the second and third levels. A new compressor and hoist recently purchased has now been delivered to the property.

Following the recent inspection of the Jubilee Long Lac Gold Mines property, a further group of men are on their way to the property to augment the crew already engaged on the ground for stripping and trenching purposes. The company is reported ample financed to thoroughly prospect the property adjoining Roche Long Lac in the eastern section of the Little Long Lac area.

A new vein showing good values has been uncovered between the No. 1 and 2 veins on the Red Lake property of Faulkenham Lake Gold Mines, according to T. W. Dean, vice-president and managing director, who is visiting the property. No. 1 vein, which is a feldspar porphyry dyke, has been sampled for a length of 750 ft. Some 23 ft. sampled gave an average value of $21 over an average width of 56 inches. The dyke, which is from 10 to 15 ft. wide and well mineralized, has been traced for 1600 ft. No. 1 vein, which is widening to the east, has been opened for another 100 ft. Drilling has started on the Faulkenham Lake group of claims, and it is expected the vein will be cut shortly. A crew of men have started further surface exploration on the Pipestone Bay group of claims, and it is planned to drill this property as soon as possible.

The new vein intersected in the 201 crosscut at Golden Gate Mining Co. has now been drifted on for some 30 ft., with the last face assaying $46.55 over 24 inches. At the point of intersection the vein assayed $13.30 over an equal width. The crosscut is being continued to intersect the high-grade discovery opened on surface some 200 ft. from the shaft. It is expected that the vein will be reached within the next three weeks. Recent results at the property group of financial interests, and it may be expected that an enlarged campaign of underground development will be started at an early date.

Darwin Gold Mines has opened up spectacular values in raising operations in the new east-west vein on the 6th level, according to Mine manager Frohberg's report on July operations. Raising had progressed at the time of the report, to 36 ft. above the drift with the vein consisting of high grade quartz with large amounts of finely disseminated gold. Work for the period ended Aug. 8th has opened up 108 ft along the 8th level of the Grace vein, with the vein continuing in a strong condition and showing medium values. The Grace vein was only recently intersected on the 8th level. The Nyman vein was exposed at surface as an orebody 100 ft. long and carrying good values across a 3 ft. width.

Making Progress With Live Stock

Cannot Be Made Properly On Poorly Farmed Land

There are quite a number of farmers who still view the breeding of pure-bred live stock as a sort of specialized farming. Until such an opinion is discarded there is little hope for speedy progress towards a better farming movement. Stock raising is not a specialty, or at least should not be viewed in that light.

The breeding and raising of pure-bred cattle or cattle of the highest quality is inseparable from practical and up-to-date farming. Live stock cannot be raised at a profit on poorly farmed land. All breeders are farmers, and farmers that go in for keeping live stock should be skilled in farming as well as in breeding.

The poorly bred stock that a farmer could struggle along with a few years ago, and enjoy the conditions of a primitive existence, cannot now even give farmers that comfort. In the near future this truth will be more evident on farms that market high priced crops through ill-bred live stock.

Farmers raise live stock as a means of converting certain crops and crop residues into marketable products. Then why choose the worst market, which a poor quality of live stock sets up, and cast aside the good markets with unlimited demand which a well-bred herd can provide on every farm. The great co-operative movements that are now engaging the attention of organized efforts with farmers, are largely over the marketing of farm products to best advantage, and the same principle must be taken up by the individual farmer in organizing his farm business, so that his farm crops are marketed to best advantage by keeping the best class of live stock.

Grain is Reported In Immigration

5,252 Newcomers Enter Canada During First Half of 1936

OTTAWA. — During the first six months of the present year 5,252 immigrants entered Canada according to a report issued this week by the department of immigration. While slightly more than the corresponding period in 1935, the numbers indicate the bars are still up high against newcomers. In the fiscal year 1912-13, when immigration was highest, the 12-months' figures were 382,841.

Most of the immigrants this year were women and children of men already in Canada. Adult females totalled 2,163, children under 18 years 1,853, and adult males 1,236. The immigration for the corresponding period last year was 4,961.

There was a slight falling-off in immigrants from the British Isles and the United States and larger contributions from the 48 other races from which Canada drew population.

The British Isles sent 512 persons, two less than the corresponding period last year, and United States sent 2,129, which was 167 less than the first half of 1935.

Of the 48 races and other than from the British Isles and United States, Ruthenian headed the list with 243. The Northern European races was headed by German with 143. Dutch was next with 79.

The number of insured workers in Great Briton on April 27 reached a new high record of 10,712,000.

Give Good Measure In Binder Twine

There has been little complaint as to the quality of binder twine sold in Canada in recent years. The law requires that each ball of binder twine sold, whether Canadian made or imported, bears a label showing the number of feet per pound in the ball. These statements as to length, for example 500, 550, 600 or 650 feet to the pound, are checked by inspectors of the Seed Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

A certain tolerance is allowed under the Act in consideration of variations which naturally must occur. However, of the three hundred samples or more tested annually, more than half have shown a greater length to the pound than the label called for. In samples which did not meet the guarantee, the deficiencies in length per pound were inconsiderable, and only in occasional cases did the deficiency exceed the limit allowed. Since 1930, the proportion of samples found to have shortages has not amounted to three per cent of the total number of samples tested, the proportion in 1935 being less than half of one per cent.

The Fear of Insanity

The tragedy of Marion Ziencheck is not without its lesson for everybody. The unusual publicity of the case is immaterial. What does matter is that another career, and ultimately another life, have been sacrificed to the Moloch of inherited, unreasonable fears. That Mr. Ziencheck was mentally unbalanced has been alleged by medical men and other authorities, presumably competent. It was not proved in court and accordingly cannot be asserted. This is precisely the point of the tragedy and of the lesson. Only a senseless relic of barbaric thinking could cause something which, after all, is a disease, often completely curable, usually amenable in some degree to medical treatment, still to be regarded in this enlightened twentieth century as though it were a crime and a disgrace.

Students of folklore might find it interesting to trace the origins of this curious delusion. Nothing like it existed in ancient or pre-historic times, for insanity then was deemed a god-sent gift of second sight. Even in the medieval centuries Walsh and others have proved a considerable understanding of insanity, no small skill in curing it and absence of the present popular myth that any brain disorder is disgraceful. This belief may have for parent the false dogma that insanity usually is inherited. Or perhaps it came from former theories of witchcraft, holding the insane to be possessed of evil spirits and such a possession a sign of criminal communion with the devil.

Whatever the origin of the belief, it certainly is time to banish it. People with symptoms of stomach trouble, exposed to smallpox, threatened with arthritis or actually afflicted with a broken leg do not wait to be tried in court and proved infirm before seeking medical advice. Instead, everybody does precisely what the victim of threatened brain disease should do. A physician is called instantly. A return to common sense which would let people look on brain disorders precisely as they do on other bodily infirmities would save thousands of lives and avoid untold suffering.

Plaid Woolens in Light Weight for Early Fall

NEW YORK — Brightly colored plaid woolens in a light weight are used for that first fall outfit.

The plaid in the short box coat is as colorful as Jacob's coat. The main shades are plum and amber, but innumerable other tones are flecked into the weave—there are vermilion, light and dark blue, white and black. Under the coat is a dress of navy wool with a round collar like the velvet one on the jacket. It is a fine school dress that looks well without the jacket.
