Meditations From The Editors Desk

Even though the meeting held in the Town Hall last Friday night, for the purpose of formulating plans for the Shrine Circus to be held here this winter, did not attract many local citizens, it was gratifying to see those present who are usually willing to add to their many burdens, additional tasks, which in some way might tend to be of assistance to others.

It was particularly gratifying to see such a splendid representation from the various Institutes throughout the Township. Their willingness to assist in making the Short Course a success was exemplified by their apparent interest in the great possibilities of the Course to the Young People in their district.

Hallowe'en, that one night during the year that is usually given over to frolics, mischief and entertainments of a hilarious nature and most generally mischief of a damaging nature in this centre, passed very calmly last Saturday night. A regular army of little tots made their rounds early in the evening for the Hallowe'en goodies that were generously passed out. Their attire ranged from mickey mouse to the old witch. Frankly, we believe and hope that such a manner of observing hallowe'en should be perpetuated. But when damage to property becomes a necessary part of the festivities, for the sake of fun, we believe some means of discouragement should be invoked by the arm of the Law.

A peculiar situation arose this year in the Village of Richmond Hill The chief of police exerted his position to the extent of jailing seven juveniles, who he apparently felt, had overstepped the line of mere fun when they among other things, splattered tomatoes on a freshly painted veranda. He did not, however, take into consideration the wrath of the parents (proud parents no doubt) for they immediately decended upon the jail in a body, broke the lock of the cell, and released the prisoners. Personally, we feel the parents should all be locked up for at least a seven day term, or until such time that they really become aware that the halo does not permanently hover over the heads of their off-spring.

But the difficulty of the affair is that the "chief" suddenly realizing no doubt, that his bread and butter comes from the rate-payers of the village and that the parents of the seven angels might have a damaging influence on his retaining office for another term, states that he was merely trying to scare the offenders The deduction is: Can a Village Policeman do his duty and retain his job to provide the lucre for his bread and butter ? Depends on where and how he exercises his authority.

We have from good authority that the program next Saturday night at the Merchant's draw is going to be something. Not merely of course, because the "Record" is listed as one of the sponsors, But.... well all we can say is be sure and be early and get your seat. Satisfaction guaranteed or your money refunded.

The Local Newspaper The Village Barometer

Yes and in the bustle, strife and speed of the present day life, few of us ever pause to think and give credit where credit is due for the real worth and value of our Local Newspaper.

Unlike the idle gossiper who by the thoughtless use of the power of their god given speech, spreads unreliable and harmful news, while the local editor diligently at his desk, carefully writes, prints and circulates in the community reliable facts beneficial to the spreading of good will and good citizenship.

Just turn back over a few pages of history if you will, and see if there can be found a modern, progressive, thriving Village without the assistance of the local Newspaper and further if a local Editor ever became a retired Millionaire.

Did you ever leave your home town for a few weeks and have the local paper mailed to you ? If so, you must surely admit not wanting to be disturbed until you had gathered from it's columns what had been going on back home.

Valued yes by Father, Mother, Son, Daughter, Uncle, Aunt, Nephew, Niece and friends who have gone to far off fields, what enjoyment they receive by persuing the Home Town Paper.

Valuable to the Clergy and their congregations, to the teachers and their pupils and as the one all important means of stimulating trade for the Merchants, the Banker, the Baker, the Doctor, the Lawyer, the Agriculturist, the Agent, the Auctioneer, the Music pupils and Teachers, the sports and baseball fans and as well the Ratepayers' source of information as to the workings of Boards of Education, Village, Township and County Councils and also to all those desirous of knowing and understanding all that is best in the community.

And if not valuable, is at least interesting to the non-subscriber who perhaps has little praise for the publication and reads his neighbors paper.

We will all serve our common interests best by lending our support to the local Home Town Newspaper.

WHEN DREAMS COME TRUE

(By Percy F. Clemons in The Canadian Sportsman)

Early in June, during a Sunday visit of Leonard and Mrs. Owen at Maple Hill Farm, came the announcement: "Lee Hanover is entered in the Walnut Hall cup race at Lexington. If he starts we are going to see him race and we are going to take you along." On Thursday night, September 18th, genial "Joe" Owen, of Jarvis, called on the telephone, saying: "Be in Tillsonburg early next Thursday morning, September 24th, ready to start for Lexington." This was the way that a lot of my dreams came true. For 25 years it has been one of my fondest dreams to visit Lexington for the fall trots, and to visit some of the noted horse farms in the blue grass country, but something always interfered. At last this dream was to be realized.

Leaving Brantford by bus on Wednesday afternoon, September 23rd, I got to Leonard Owen's at 6 o'clock and found Audrey, shy but smiling, waiting to conduct me to the house. Leonard was racing Leone Hanover, at Stratford, that day and was late getting home, but Mrs. Owen and Audrey gave me supper and entertained me until his arrival.

I found our party was to be eight grown-ups and two children. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Owen and daughter Mrs. Clarke, with her small daughter, Joyce, and Mr. Cyril Saunders, of Jarvis, occupied Joe's new car, while Leonard, Mrs. Owen and Audrey, with Morgan Hewson, of Jarvis and the writer, were passengers in Leonard's car.

Joe's car, being nearly new, was conceded to be entitled to start from scratch, so it left Tillsonburg at 9.45 A.M. on Thursday. Leonard, immersed in last-minute business, took a one-hour handicap, getting away at 10.45. Leonard was, in imagination, sitting behind Lee Han over and caught up in just sixty-seven miles. We stopped at Blenheim for dinner, then set out for Detroit, crossing the Ambassador bridge.

Leonard was setting the pace and, after breasting the heavy traffic in the city, and getting well on our way on No. 25 highway for Toledo, we found we had lost our other car and had awful visions of Joe crashing red lights and getting jailed.

After idling along for over two hours with no sign of the others, we mentally said "good-bye," we will meet in Lexington!" and drove steadily south through Toledo, Miami, and down through a beautiful strip of farm land, prairie-like in loveliness and seemingly devoted mostly to corn, steers and hogs. One singular feature of this country was the almost total lack of orchards of any kind after leaving the Toledo district. Also we saw scarcely any barns and fouls of any breed. Toward dusk we pulled up at a filling station and Mrs. Owen walked out for a few yards toward the highway. In a few minutes she came running back with the cry "they have just gone by." We set off in pursuit and caught them in ten minutes, to find that the new car had developed a case of the jitters in the compressor while they were in Detroit and had stopped to get a soldering job done. It was 50-to-1 shot against seeing them, but we did.

We drove to Findley, where we had supper, and Joe, Morg and Cy each got outside of the biggest T-bone steaks I ever saw ordered in a restaurant, and then drove on to Lima, where we remained all night at The Norval Hotel., named after the trotting stallion. Several of the party had their rest badly broken and in the morning there were heated discussions as to whether the cause or (causes) was due to all the trains in Southern Ohio going through the city or if it was Joe's snoring. The decision was a combination of both. After having breakfast in Lima we drove for several hours, finding Ohio below Dayton much more rolling and broken due to the meanderings of the Great Miami River. Of particular interest was the succession of cities on the route about thirty or forty miles apart, making a fine chain of race meetings and fall fairs. Ohio is also noted for the marking of its highways—it is almost impossible to go wrong even in the large cities.

We had dinner in Reading, a few miles north of Cincinnati. This great city is notable for the two great hills within its borders covered with great buildings, and also noted for beer signs and a large colored population. Crossing a toll bridge over the Ohio River a sign board read "Kentucky," and this passenger got a real thrill when he read it. The small city of Covington is at the Kentucky end of the bridge, and a few miles outside we saw a field of blue grass in bloom and knew we were in the blue grass region of Kentucky at last. After a few miles we got into foothills of the Alleghenies and the way the highway wound and twisted between hills and ravines provided plenty of thrills. Most of the section seemed given over to sheep farming, large flocks being seen on both sides. Just before reaching Georgetown, the country flattens out and the real blue grass pastures begin, dotted with mares and foals, sheep and Jersey cows.

After driving a few miles beside the Southern Railway we saw a small station marked "Domerill," and on a signboard beside the highway read "Walnut Hall," and we were running along beside the fine stone walls of the most famous of the Kentucky stock farms, just eight miles from Lexington, which we reached at 5 o'clock.

The hotels were jammed, so we ran out South Broadway to the vicinity of the trotting track to hunt for rooms. At the second house we met Mrs. William Young just in front St. Charles, Illinois, where her husband, formerly second trainer for B. F. White, now manages the horse interests on the farm of Mr. E. J. Baker, owner of Greyhound, 1.57¼, etc. Mrs. Young formerly resided in the South Broadway district and she and her hostess gave us a real exhibition of what Kentucky kindness and hospitality really is. They canvassed the block either personally or by telephone and we were all settled inside of half an hour in three different houses, Morgan, Cyril and I electing to share one big front room where the board was included in the bill. After getting settled we took a run out to the stables to see Lee Hanover and to find out if all was well with him on the eve of his most important race. After feeding him sugar, etc., and finding out that he had won his 12th race at Louisville the week before, we went downtown to a "Canary" restaurant where the eating was excellent and the price better, and "Cy" at least seemed quite struck with the natty-looking mulatto girl who waited on us. At least we told him so, anyway.

After sight-seeing a bit we boarded the cars and hunted up our rooms again. Upon preparing for bed we found Morgan had a real passion for fresh air, and as my bed was in the direct air and his wasn't, there was a real argument every night about how far the window should be opened. I believe "Morg" lived in Montreal for years and that the Kentucky climate was too warm for him.

Saturday morning, after a real breakfast of oatmeal, coffee, bacon and eggs and toast (Cy and Morgan getting most of the toast), we were off to the track to tour the stables scattered all over the grounds, also a number of private stables out on the entrance gates. The first one viewed was the Arden Farm stead, with Farr, Calumet Erie and Fez being the headliners. The next was the Hanover Shoe Farm stable, where the majority of the fillies are decended from Miss Bertha Dillon and are intended for matrons in the stud at the farm. Dusty Hanover, stocky and fat, who has dominated the two-year-old pacing stakes, is also one of the stars. Incidentally, Miss Bertha Dillon, the immortal dam of the three two-minute full sisters, died last year and is buried in the infield of the track where a fine monument has recently been erected to her memory.

The next stopping point was the Walnut Hall barn, where the fillies and on a signboard beside the high-way read "Walnut Hall," and we were running along beside the fine stone walls of the most famous of the Kentucky stock farms, just eight miles from Lexington, which we reached at 5 o'clock.

The hotels were jammed, so we ran out South Broadway to the vicinity of the trotting track to hunt for rooms. Knocks & Boosts

SIDELINER

The boys finally have had their annual get together and still we are very much in the dark as to what league Jarvis will enter this year. It was quite apparent at their meeting that they were just a little foggy on the rules and constitutions of the O.R.H.A. They, however, decided to communicate with headquarters and polish up a bit. It was very plainly stated by those present that they favored entering a possible league of Hagersville, Caledonia, Cayuga, Jarvis, Port Dover and perhaps Waterford. However, no one was prepared to say whether any one of these former O. H. A. Stalwarts would enter the Senior section of the Rural Organization or not. We feel safe in saying that more than one of them will and a very active league could be formed. If such a league is formed, it is certainly going to give smaller towns a real chance to get somewhere. The next step should be to set a date and hold a general hockey meeting with all the aforementioned centres represented and organize.

—:—:—:—

HOCKEY BRIEFS :—

The big time hockey opens this evening with the world champion Detroit Red Wings opposing Ontario's representative, Toronto Maple Leafs.

In a pre-season exhibition game the Leafs clipped the Red Wings' feathers with an overwhelming win. This game may mean a great deal or very little. However, the Leafs look a great deal stronger than last year and they ought to go places. At this time it looks as if "Turk" Broda is to be the netminder instead of Hainsworth. Yep, we called George, but don't forget we also called Syl Apps for Primeau's position.

Tommy Gorman claims that Bill Beveridge is still the property of the Maroons. Tommy now has enough goalies to form an entire forward line. Lester Patrick thinks that his new line of the Colville brothers and Alex. Shibicki will be a sensation in the N.H.L. Lester likes Neil Colville especially well. Eddy Shore states that he was never an actual holdout but he also contends that the plough is not only mightier than the sword, but also mightier than the hockey sticks.

Jawn" Adams thinks that his line of Kerr, Jackson and Conacher, Apps and Jackson this year. Well confidence is half the battle, Jawn.

—:—:—:—

Just when everyone thought that the football situation had been cleared up, along comes another tough situation for the officers of the C.R.U. In short, Regina Roughriders are practically in an Western class, having defeated Winnipeg Dominion titlists and have only Calgary and Moose Jaw to overcome. They are highly favoured to meet the eastern champions in the Dominion finals. Now, the stumbling block is the fact that Regina have at least five American players on their roster that are considered ineligible by the Canadian Rugby Union. Regina has been warned that they cannot use these players in the Canadian finals. Al Ritchie, Regina mastermind, states that he will use them and if the eastern representatives are willing, go through with the game. in that case, the C.R.U. in order to back up their organization will be forced to declare neither team champions. However, we feel safe in saying that the eastern representatives will refuse to compete against ineligible players.

ODDS AND ENDS :—

There is no doubt that the hockey season is on in earnest. Norman White, of points west is in again. What does he get per column, Mr. Mumns ? . . . The highlight of the softball season as far as Jarvis and Walpole league is concerned comes this Friday evening when all the players and officials of the league are to be entertained at a banquet. It is regretable that two of the leagues most valuable players will not be present. Dave Banks, Varency's most valuable player has moved to Tillsonburg. Bank's record throughout this past season was very enviable. Including the play-offs he won eleven games and lost two. Not a bad hurling record. He also was the league batting champion with an average of .642. The other player, Edward Brennan, hard hitting first baseman, of the Renton team, has obtained a position in Windsor. He was fourth in the batting race with an average of .451 . . . Jarvis will certainly going to be plenty tough for Sam to present the Tip Top Trophy, he offered to the winner of the league, to Ollie Hill, manager of the champion Jarvis team. Tough luck, Sam, we wanted it too. . . . A couple of questionnaires are out of the year is, where is Howard Aaron, and with whom is he going to play hockey ? Whassa matter, Howie, losing that old press appeal ? Our mythical rugby team has a wonderful addition in Harry Hilbert, former Kitchener intermediate star. We now have quite a team, look at 'em: Tweedie, of Western University; Brett, of Bishops College, Quebec; Bourne, former Regina player and many other more mediocre players. Look out Tigers, Argos, Ottawa, Montreal, etc., here we come !

Hoover Struck by Car

Mrs. Hoover Struck by Car

A serious accident occurred on Saturday afternoon, about 4 o'clock, opposite the Evangelical church on Talbot street. While returning home from Sunday afternoon service, Mrs. Hoover, a guest son of Mr. Bert Hoover, was struck by a motor car driven by a Mr. Goodale, of Mount Pleasant. The boy was cut about the face and shaken up. Mr. Goodale, an expert driver, and his car in good condition, was able to stop before serious damage was done. The accident was attended by Dr. George Slocomb and then to his home. We hope this finds the boy in some of the child ward and make the streets around the ground. Accidents will happen when people are careless.

Enjoy Real Comfort While Securing a Lasting Permanent Wave

The de Milo method pictured above entirely eliminates the old style heavy overhead apparatus. Now you can get up from the chair, move around—even telephone—during the process of waving.

The de Milo method ensures a better permanent wave too, because of its patented features, which include a genuine oil vapor treatment of the hair.

All types of hair, including dyed, bleached or white—long or short—are given a deep, natural, enduring wave with soft ringlet ends—a wave which is unsurpassed for sheer lustre and beauty.

PEEPS INTO RADIO-LAND

(By Basil J. Donnelly)

BARON MUNCHAUSEN COMING BACK

The Baron Munchausen, fabulous figure of the microphone, is coming back to the air.

Jack Pearl, creator of the Baron, will resume that long popular role when he returns to the coast-to-coast NBC-Blue Network on Monday November 9th, after a year and a half absence from the airwaves. During that time, the man who made "Vas you dere, Sharlie?" a national catch-phrase, has been traveling in Europe and South America. "Sharlie" will be "dere" too, again in the polysyllabic person of Cliff Hall, who has for years been at Jack's side as his straight man.

The new series will be heard every Monday from 9.30 to 10.00 P.M.

Although he will return to the character which made him a favorite from coast to coast several years ago, Jack promises an entirely new program idea, with situation comedy as its keynote.

Jack Pearl, like several of his outstanding contemporaries of stage and radio fame, was born on New York's lower East Side and was a seasoned trouper by the time he reached his teens. Together with several of those now famous Baronial temporaries, he was for some time a headliner in Gus Edward's vaudeville troupe of talented juveniles. His years of seasoning in show business encompassed far-flung experiences in burlesque and v
