Canada Highway Rights

In Florida it is the rule that a car has as much right on the highway as an auto. In the majority of cases the average driver is not prepared to dispute that fact any more.—Windsor Star.

No Scribblers Now

Old-fashioned "scribblers" are now described in schools as "work books" because the term "scribblers" had a bad psychological effect upon primary school pupils and gave them queer ideas, many of which are just coming to light now that former pupils of the scribbler era are taking an active part in affairs. Some of the ideas dating back to the time when school children did their lessons on slates and were even queerer, such as the idea of drawing pictures of the teacher during school hours in the comfortable knowledge that they could be instantly expunged should discovery threaten.—London Advertiser.

20,000 People, Not 400

They told me not to call at Kirkland Lake, as it was only a village of about 400 people. The speaker was a young traveller from some Toronto house who was talking at a restaurant table recently to a member of the Northern News staff who was having supper. The young man had already made a trip to Timmins, and on his way back had dropped into the village about 400 people more or less out of curiosity.

He also sits in Toronto for his firm, and told his visa-vis that he had sold more wares here than he can in the Queen City.

At this point, to overcome the simplicity of those from outside who start to read this editorial, let us work in the fact that Kirkland Lake has a population of about 20,000, and that the annual payroll of its largest mine is over $2,000,000 a year.—Kirkland Lake Northern News.

Where But in P.E.I.?

What other province country except this could take as a matter of course the announcement that a married couple were celebrating in good health and activity their 70th wedding anniversary; and another lady enjoying life to full in her 102nd year.—Charlottetown Guardian.

Out of the Parlors

A return to favor of the rocking-chair is being predicted. People driving along rural roads and witnessing individuals at their ease on the farm-house verandahs will doubt if it has ever been eclipsed.—Trookville Recorder and Times.

Three miners came into the Advance office one evening recently to leave this message: "There should be a tag day every second Saturday where the miners so that they might have money for the tag day which being held nearly every pay day."—Timmins Advocate.

Casts Vote for Wool

The idea of getting into a pair of shoes or underwear and starting off toward the barn in early morning is not very comforting. In the house on Lot 4, Concession 10, it was cold when we got up in the morning. The first thing that to light the fire in the kitchen. Forth creature steaming. Softly down to drink. If the weather had turned every cold it was necessary to throw out the pump at the side of the house before domestic service could be well under way for the day.

12 Ducks a Day

Surely 12 ducks a day is a reasonable limit, and surely a conservation program which is a hedge-podge of programs which tend to cancel each other out and tend to destroy the impulse toward observation. The regulations, such as have come from the Manitoba Game Association, represent a more truly sportsmanlike attitude than does the debatable

Canada can pioneer again and this section of Ontario can provide a message and a leadership for the nation.

Eighty-five Members Congregate From All Parts Of Canada and Overseas

Preceded by a four-day house party at Niagara Falls at which known leaders of the movement from all parts of the dominion came together, a large number of the Oxford Group is moving into Brantford to inaugurate the most intensive campaign Canada has known since the first army of "off-changers" came from the Old Country four years ago.

In their declaration that nothing short of a spiritual revolution is their objective, a revolution which will change the social, political and industrial thinking of Brantford will be definitely changed, the 85 or more members of the team are opening the campaign with large public meetings.

"Although this will signalize the first arrival of a large group, Brantford has been aware for several weeks of quiet activity on the part of its reformers. Pelham Reid, Winnipeg. Mr. Eric Bentley, Mr. George Heintzman and his daughter Mrs. Goodwin Gibson, all of Toronto, and Jan Claassen, South African lawyer and former member Transvaal Provincial Assembly.

Striking cross section of Canada will be represented in the team which is to move into Brantford. From Ottawa will come the wives of two senators and Colonel James B. Robertson, leader of the Mount Logan expedition. Robert Muir and his motor car became a major attraction. Albert farm. B. M. From overseas there will be such men and women as Mr. Chaasom, Garth Lean, special correspondent of the London Sunday Chronicle.

"Besides," continued the hen, "I don't think you are very polite. You haven't criticized you because you eat chickens." "That is true," said Dorothy. "I beg your pardon, Mrs. Mrs.—by the way, may I inquire your name, ma'am?" "My name is Bill," replied the hen, gruffly. "What? That's a boy's name," replied Dorothy. "Well, it's a better name than eating dead things like you humans do," replied the hen triumphantly.

"The little boy on the farm named me Bill," continued the hen. "Bill I have remained." "I see," said Dorothy. "But I shall call you Billina, because Bill is too undignified for you." "As you please," said the hen, and returned to her pecking. Finally, down by the water's edge, Billina stuck her bill in the sand and then drew back and shivered. "Ow!" she cried. "I struck metal that time and it nearly broke my back."

"It probably was a rock," said Dorothy, carefully. "I know a rock from metal," said the hen. "There's a different feel to it." "But there couldn't be any metal in this deserted place," persisted Dorothy. "I'll dig it up and prove it." Billina showed her the place where she had stubbed her bill as she expressed it. Dorothy dug away the sand and then drew back and shivered. "Ow!" she cried. "I struck metal that time and it nearly broke my back."

"The things which unite us are infinitely more precious and valuable to us than the things which divide us." That sentence deserves a place as a motto on the walls of every home in this country.

EVERY DAY LIVING

A SPEECH HANDICAP.
I wonder if you could help me. I graduated from high school at seventeen and then went to college. I have been in business ever since. I am able to get minor positions and I cannot see any hope of my ever getting into a job with prospects of advancement. A friend of mine told me it is due to my speech. I have ways of making myself understood. I can speak in certain ways. I can speak in a way that I think is better. I can speak in a way that I think is better. I can speak in a way that I think is better.

Philosophy of Unity

Writes the Halifax Herald.—Hon. Charles Dunning has put the case for Canada and Canadian unity just about as succinctly as it possibly could be stated. Speaking to the Maritime Board of Trade at Charlottetown, the Minister of Finance said:

Now Ease Neuritis Pains Fast

"Aspirin Tablets Dissolve Almost Instantly" is a fast relief for neuritis. It is a fast relief for neuritis. It is a fast relief for neuritis. It is a fast relief for neuritis.

Culling Ewe Flock

Extremely old ewes frequently fail to do the best by their lambs. When it gets hot and dry and pasture is short they fail to do so well. They soon run down and are never able to catch up with those whose mothers are young and in prime condition. This gives a lot of extra lambs in the flock at weaning time.
