Toronto's School Stir
It is surprising sometimes what Toronto folks can do in the way of political and religious intolerance. A row has just developed over the dismissal of a public school teacher because she is alleged to have a Roman Catholic boy friend, to have been a bridesmaid at a Roman Catholic boy friend, to have even attended a Roman Catholic service. She is a member of a United Church.

What the narrow-minds forget is that the public schools are not Protestant schools. There are many Roman Catholics who are teachers in public schools. No religion is taught in them, therefore, the question of the private religious life of teach to the manner of the private religious life of teach to the manner of the private religious life of teach to the manner of the private religious life of teach to the manner of the private religious life of teach to the manner of the private religious life of teach to the manner of the private religious life of teach to the manner of the private religious life of teach to the manner of the private religious life of teach to the manner of the private religious life of teach to the manner of the private religious life of teach to the manner of the private religious life of teach to the manner of the private religious life of teach to the manner of the private religious life of teach to the manner of the private religious life of teach to the manner of the private religious life of teach to the manner of the private religious life of teach to the manner of the private religious life of teach the manner of the private religious life of teach the manner of the private religious life of teach the manner of the private religious life of teach the manner of the private religious life of teach the manner of the private religious life of teach the manner of the private religious life of teach the manner of the private religious life of teach the manner of the private religious life of teach the manner of the private religious life of teach the manner of the private religious life o
