DEATH ON THE DIAMOND

When the United League season opens the gamblers are offering 200 to 1 that Pop Clark's New York Blues will not win the pennant.

Clark, the Philadelphia pitcher, is killed with a bullet through the heart after smacking out a home run. Both Burke and Larry Doyle the Blues' rocky shortstop, for whom Clark's pretty daughter, Frances, was supposed to marry, are suspected as first by Detective Kelly. It is Burke who discovered it was Sid Stream, notorious gambler, who wrecked a taxi with a bullet through a tire and injured four Boston players as the Blues are to open a series. Then Dirkin, Chicago star, drops dead, after hitting a home run, from poison on a photograph needle fixed in the handle of his bat.

The policeman ran into the room and into the bath in a moment they could be seen through the open door carrying a limp body in their arms. It was the maid, bound and gagged. They placed her on the bed.

"She's all right," Sherman said. "She's just stiff and sore. Get a glass of water." They untied her wrists and ankles and took her out of the room. They placed her in the bathtub, Sherman explained to the manager as he chafed her wrists.

"How are you feeling, Louise?" "Terrible, Mr. Clayton," she replied after a moment. "I thought I was just going to lay there and die."
