Fire Losses Drop

OTTAWA. — Fire losses in Canada continued a downward trend during 1936 and eclipsed the record established in 1935 when losses were the lowest for any year for which figures are available, said J. M. Ritchie, Toronto Secretary-Treasurer of the Association of Canadian Fire Marshals in addressing delegates to the annual conference of the association here.

The convention, attended by more than forty-five delegates was under the chairmanship of J. Grove Smith, Dominion Fire Commissioner.

Noted Weekly Sold

NEW YORK. — The Literary Digest, weekly news magazine, was sold outright this week to the Review of Reviews Corporation, headed by the veteran magazine editor, Albert Shaw.

The sale brings two of the oldest magazines in America under the same ownership. The Review of Reviews was founded in 1891 and the Digest in 1896.

Practically the entire ownership of the Digest had been in the hands of R. J. Cuddihy, the publisher, and Wilfred J. Funk, who has been editor-in-chief of the weekly.

B. C. Orders Compulsory Hospitalization for T.B.

VICTORIA. — British Columbia Government has passed an Order-in-Council providing for "detention" of persons with severe cases of tuberculosis who refuse to be confined to hospitalization.

The new regulation reads:

"That any person found with tuberculosis in an infectious or contagious stage, who should refuse to be confined to hospital or building provided for quarantine or isolation purposes, may be apprehended and may be detained in such an institution."

Hon. G. M. Weir, Provincial Secretary, said all cases coming under the new regulations would be subject to examination by the Tuberculosis Control Board under Dr. W. H. Hatfield.

Building Tops '36 Record

WINDSOR. — Business in the Ontario section of the building trade is 40.5 per cent. ahead of 1936 at the present time, O. M Perry, manager of the Windsor Hydro-Electric System, declared this week.

"As in every other line, conditions in the electrical contracting field are improving rapidly," Mr. Perry said. "Total value of building contracts for the first five months of 1937 amounts to $80,606,200, compared to $56,905,100 for the same period in 1936."

It Came True

For several weeks the King of Denmark had been trying to find a Silver Jubilee march. One day the king was riding in Copenhagen. His horse, upset by the traffic, threw him. Christian Thomsen, a poor composer, was among those who rushed to help him. Although in pain, the king mounted his horse again and rode off. That inspired Christian Thomsen. He composed a march, submitted it. As soon as King Christian heard it played he as King Christian heard it played he exclaimed: "That is the very thing!" He sent for Thomsen and decorated him. And a poor composer has become famous. A true "fairy tale" come famous. A true "fairy tale" come from the Hans Anderson country at last.—Halifax Herald.

Rivers Under the Earth

A cottager near Goderich, on Lake Huron, received word the other day that a well-driller had got water on his property.

"How do you know that the water you found isn't lake water that has seeped through the soil?" inquired the skeptical owner.

"Well, to begin with," explained the driller, "the land here is about eighty feet above the level of the lake water, and I had to drill down nearly twice that distance before I got water. But if that doesn't satisfy you, consider that the water in the well has risen to within sixty feet of the surface, although, as I have said, the lake level is eighty feet below us. In other words, the level of the water in the well is about twenty feet above the level of the lake. So I must have struck a different source, a subterranean river under pressure sufficient to push the water high up in your well."

Convinced, the cottager listened to the driller's claim that he could drill a well in the lake and get a column of well water whose level would be higher than that of the lake itself. All of which is easy to understand, if you can understand it—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

Barber Signs

Most of us must have wondered at some time or other how it came about that barbers display red, blue and white striped poles outside their shops. Well, that question mark has been answered by an explanation we came across recently. It is pointed out that the local barber used to be the local surgeon, where patients were bled and bandaged. The pole was the symbol of the splint to which a broken arm was bound, the white stripe the bandage, the blue the veins that had to be opened and the red the blood.—Kitchener Record.

Canada's Highway Accidents

Every Canadian citizen will agree that there are too many accidents on the roads, yet it will come as a surprise to learn that the number of deaths in the Dominion is the third lowest in the world in proportion to the number of cars in use. A table compiled by the Automobile Manufacturers' Association of New York shows the following percentages of deaths per 10,000 vehicles:

New Zealand	7.4
Union of South Africa	8.9
Canada	9.9
Denmark	12.5
United States	13.6
Australia	13.9
Norway	14.0
Irish Free State	22.1
Sweden	26.0
England and Wales	30.6
Belgium	36.5
Chile	40.9
Netherlands	44.0
Scotland	44.8

There Are Too Many Guns

Our experience is that it is useless to protest about the number of revolvers in this province. Nothing has been done to decrease the number and we seem quite content that nothing shall be done.

It is difficult to recall where a householder has been called upon to seize a weapon and fight it out with an invader. Truth is, he would be poorly advised were he to try to do so because the invader would probably be a much better shot than the householder.

There are teeth in the law now regarding possession of weapons, but the trouble is the teeth do not seem to come together and bite.—Peterboro Examiner.

Wedding Attire

The Dean of Johannesburg is gloomy. He looks askance at weddings to which the bride comes resplendent and the bridesmaids and pages appear in bright array, calling such ceremonies "extravagant and tawdry." What then would he have? Not, surely, the drabness of a register office? Solemn vows will not be heard less reverently if those at the altar are joyously attired for life's most joyous day. With marriage goes jubilation and feasting; why not wear brightness in the dress as well as in the heart? For a woman, especially, this is the day to which memory turns back, and her wish is that the recollection should be gay and pleasing. We want no pensiveness at weddings, and it would be as incongruous to muffle the bells as the bride in homespun.—London Daily Mail.

Quebec Bars Trucks From Highways on Sunday

QUEBEC. — Motor trucks will not be permitted to convey merchandise of any description on highways of the Province or on city streets on Sunday in future, officials of the Attorney-General's Department announced last week.

Traffic officers throughout the Province have been instructed of the new ruling, effective on Saturday, and have been ordered to see truck drivers and owners conform with the regulation.

Tariff Cut for Brazil

OTTAWA. — Brazil has been accorded most favored nation tariff treatment by Canada under an Order-in-Council announced this week.

Previously goods from the big South American Republic entered Canada at the intermediate tariff rates. They will now enter at the lowest tariff rate accorded any foreign country by treaty. Brazil will thus receive the rates prescribed in the trade agreements with France, the United States and Poland.

No charge has been made in the tariff rates applicable to Canadian goods entering Brazil. For some time Brazil has accorded Canada most favored nation treatment in exchange for the Canadian intermediate tariff rates. But with four other South American countries, Uruguay, Argentina, Venezuela and Colombia already on the most favored nation treatment the Canadian government considered it desirable to place Brazil on the same basis.

The balance of trade between the two countries is heavily in favor of Canada. Canadian exports to Brazil are about four times Brazilian exports to Canada. In 1936 Canada shipped $3,711,000 worth of products to Brazil, and bought from that country $900,000 worth. In 1935 the figures were $2,769,000 and $835,346.

Sixteen Die In Ontario Week-End Accidents

Thirteen Lives Are Lost In Highway Crashes—Man Killed by Fire and Boy Is Drowned—Others Near Death

TORONTO.—The worst accident records of the year took sixteen lives over the week-end, fourteen of them in highway mishaps in various parts of Ontario. As if to give tragic variety to the picture of death, an elderly man was trapped by fire in his island home and a 10-year-old boy slipped and fell into a canal, losing his life.

The death toll may lengthen, there being a dozen or more victims lying critically injured.

Two level-crossing accidents took four lives, three of the victims being in one car.

The dead:

Mrs. Ina Brown, 585 Oakwood Avenue, Toronto.

Frank Welsh, Huron Street, Toronto.

Nerlon Little, Peterborough.

James McCullough, Peterborough.

Mrs. Emma J. Niblake, Bloomsburg, Pa.

Robert Cook, Hamilton.

John McKenzie, McKenzie Island, near Kingston.

Georgina Coulet, 479 Armadale Avenue, Toronto.

Kenneth Bloomfield, London.

Oswald Bigras, Carleton Place.

Mrs. William Bigras, Carleton Place.

William Laverdue, Carleton Place.

C. A. Leitch, Ridgetown.

Mrs. Elizabeth Faltner, Windsor.

Harry Shaw, 12, London.

W. R. Watson, 16, Galt, killed by car.

Tragedy on Highway

Three of the accidents were responsible for eight of the fatalities. One of the worst traffic accidents in years took three lives on Highway No. 3, about fifteen miles west of St. Thomas Sunday morning. The double fatality occurred near Peterbrough, when an open roadster somersaulted, killing two men in the front seat.

The collision between two cars near St. Thomas may result in the death toll being increased from three to four or five. Four victims are in a critical condition and one or more of their number may succumb.

Harlow Estate May Not Exceed $100,000

HOLLYWOOD. — Jean Harlow's estate may not exceed $100,000, it was reliably reported. Unfortunate investments and heavy taxes on her salary during the past several years were given as the reasons why Miss Harlow died worth far less than the million dollars credited to her.

The will is understood to name Mrs. Jean Bello, Miss Harlow's mother, as principal beneficiary.

Despite her tremendous drawing power, Miss Harlow's salary was said to have been $5,000 a week only for the past two years. Had it not been for her relatively moderate scale of living she would have left practically no estate, the same source reported.

Insurance policies comprise about half of the estate, it was understood.

Ambrose Pare, proclaimed the greatest surgeon of his time, had the courage to write his book on the treatment of wounds not in Latin, but in everyday and "vulgar" French, much to the horror of the surgeons of the long robe.

NEWS PARADE

Commentary on the HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEKS NEWS...

By Peter Randal

Seventy three day of the most terrible siege in modern history ended this week as the insurgent columns of General Devilla began the task of "mopping up" the ancient Basque capital of Bilbao. Fighting from house to house, the defenders still hang on grimly while refugees have moved down in thousands as they attempted to flee the city under the murderous fire of the Italian "Black Arrow" column. An indication that the siege was actually over and that hope of starving off the advancing mercenaries was over, was the departure of the British consul from the turn of the British sailor-city. He was rescued by British aircraft from awaiting ship just outside the death swept harbor. Latest reports say that General Franco is transferring his hordes in thousands to the Madrid front where another terrific push is forecast by the orders of the Loyalist commander who has requested all civilians to leave the city.

Financial Courage

After ten months of comparative stalemate, the Fascists seem to be getting somewhere in their attempts to subdue the will of the Spanish people. Just prior to the fall of Bilbao, new hope was injected into their councils by the announcement of a new loan obtained abroad for $1,500,000. The announcement was made by a former tobacco smuggler, illiterate Juan March, chief civilian backer of the revolution. No one seems to know where it is to come from but there are many close guesses.

Germany and Italy are in the position of having to throw good money after bad. So far, the campaign has not been much of a success but further expenditure may turn the day. The fall of Bilbao seems to bear out this statement.

Beauty in Distress

And in Germany, all is not well. Chancellor Hitler's close personal friend and the Director German State Motion Pictures, Leni Riefenstahl has been accused of having "non-Aryan" grandparents. In most countries, such a fault would not be of any particular importance but in Germany where the Nazis are engaged in stamping out their Jewish intellectual the accusation is the next thing to ruin. The charge was made by Propaganda Minister Goebbels at a mass gathering. It has since been denounced as "pure invention". The interesting fact for conjecture is just what Chancellor Hitler thinks about it all and what action he would take if the charge proved to be true. It is null and void that all of the women he may be known, which is not many, the beautiful actress is the favorite.

Disaster Echoes

Strange how echoes of distant disaster come close to home. Two years ago, financial circles were startled by the announcement by Canadian gold producers that prices for fabricated gold would be raised from $30 to $10 per ton. Among the reasons given by manufacturers for this action (amounting to 8% over last year) was the scarcity of sulphite is the bleaching agent in the making of chemical wood pulp. Sulphite is also a prime ingredient in explosives. Apparently, the manufacture of explosives is of such importance in this unsettled world today than the manufacture of paper.

Crisis Averted

And in France, a milk famine has won an amazing victory over the strength of his party. Faced by a financial crisis headed by a steady drain of gold because of unequal trade balances, Leon Blum has just won a vote of confidence. Votes of confidence are a feature of the French governmental system and supporters of the government more often than not vote against their former colleagues on the slightest pretext. Such was the case when Premier Blum's own deputies banged up against a crisis to be met with surprising support from other section of the house. The Government is now confronted with extraordinary financial problems to support the franc by regulating the discount rate and a capital levy might have been of worth while in view of the delicate state of affairs has been averted, at least for the time.

Death Takes James McLean

Long One of York County's Most Outstanding Citizens

RICHMOND HILL.—James McLean, one of York County's most prominent citizens, and Past President of the Ontario Fairs and Exhibitions Association and the Ontario Seed Growers' Association, died at his home here Friday, after an illness of a month.

A native of King Township, he was in his sixty-fourth year, and selling his farm on Yonge Street sixteen years ago, has since lived in Richmond Hill, where he continued to take part in many agricultural activities. He was a former President of the Richmond Hill Agricultural Society. For eight years he sat on the Richmond Hill Council, and was an active worker in the Presbyterian Church, and later in the United Church. He was a skilled bowler and curler. Only last winter he was prominent in the Ontario Bonspiel, being a member of a rink of ploughmen's rink.

From his boyhood he was a student ploughman and won many trophies, including the Ontario Canada championship. He made President of the Ontario Ploughmen's Association, which he helped to organize twenty-odd years ago along with J. Lockie Willson, who valued his advice and counsel for thirty years," declared Mr. Willson. With Mr. McLean he was a long standing field crop competitor in Ontario.

Surviving are his wife, one daughter, Mrs. [illegible] Richmond Hill; and two sons, [illegible] a teacher in Toronto, at home.

Four Cylinder Wins again!

For the fourth year in succession, a car powered by a four cylinder engine won the American racing classic at Indianapolis, at the rate of 113.580 miles per hour for the 500 miles. The second winning car in this race was similarly powered; the third car had an eight cylinder engine. The real importance of these wins is the stamina and durability over the competing six and eight cylinder cars. These qualities can be readily seen when the Willys 37 engine is studied against other engines of similar capacity.

SCOUTING

Here There Everywhere

A brother to every other Scout, without regard to race or creed

Contests in bridge building and tent-pitching were competition items of a Brantford District Boy Scout Jamboree. The bridge-building contest was won by the 7th Brantford (Saint Jude's) Troop, and the 10th Troop proved the speediest in erecting the tent.

A Northern Ontario country boy accidentally wounded by a gun-shot bled to death because no one knew how to apply a tourniquet. The average Boy Scout knows all about such First Aid, and one on the scene probably could have saved this boy's life. Which indicate the desirability of having all lads enrolled in an organization that provides this necessary training.—The Peel Gazette.

Continued evident of the practical practical value of the Boy Scout training has recently brought the gift of Headquarters Building to Scouts in three Ontario towns. A new clubhouse for the Scouts of Parry Sound was recently opened by His Worship Mayor Jackson and members of the town council, the building in Agricultura Park having been given the Scouts by the Council. At Sarnia Mrs. W. J. Hanna presented a frame building at Elgin Street for use as a Headquarters for the Local Boy Scouts Association, to be known as Coronation Hall. At Tillsonburg the Bell Telephone Company were the donors of a building on the condition that the Scouts removed it to a site given by Miss Cora Anderson. The structure was frame, with a brick veneer. The thrifty Scouts negotiated a sale of the bricks, and at once began stripping them off.

When presenting a large Union Jack to the town of Brampton at a meeting of the town council, Mrs. M. Sharpe, Regent of Peel Regiment Chapter I. O. D. Following the example of Scout Reforestration Work carried out for some years at Angus, Ont., the Scouts of Fort Erie this spring planted 700 young saplings near the Scout Cabin on Ridge Road, and the Boys of the 1st Beamsville Troop planted 600 trees in the game preserve south of that town.

Raising Colts Is No Cinch As Luck Plays A Big Part

(By Rusticus, in the Stratford Beacon-Herald.)

Horses like men, get old. No one would expect an old man to be able to keep up his end of the day's work as easily as a young man. Nor can we expect an old horse to pull the plow up and down the field with quite the speed and keenness of a five-year-old. Just as age creeps upon a man and weakens him long ere he is quite ready to admit that he is getting old, so age comes to our horses while we still think there should be a few good years left in them.

During the winter one of the older horses on the farm came to the end of the number of days that were allotted to him. Two more of the farm horses are getting to be very near the same age, and a day's work tells on them to a far greater extent than it does on the younger animals. At best it will be only a few more years till they, too will have reached the end of their period of labor.

On farms where no colts are raised the death of one horse usually means the purchase of another and younger one to take his place. Reasonably sound and typy horses are in good demand and good prices are realized on this class of stock. In theory at least it should be a good policy to raise a few colts to replace the worn out animals. In fact, if colts are regularly raised there ought to be a horse to sell every year or so, and none of the animals need be kept until old age weakens and finally kills them.

* * *

Now mind, that is all theory. It doesn't take into account the number of colts that will for some reason or other, not survive those first trying days of colthood. Raising a colt, as we understand it, is a very different matter from raising a calf. The birth of a foal is a real event on farms where they are raised. Perhaps that is because farmers are more attached to their horses than to any other class of stock they keep.

This spring it was necessary for us to buy another horse. Realizing that in a few more years other horses must be replaced, we decided to find out if raising our own work horses would work out in actual practice as attractively as it does in theory. An in-foal mare was therefore purchased and a week or ten days age, she presented us with what promises to be a fairly good colt. This youngster is the first foal to be born on this farm in the last 30 years.

Normally the foal should grow and in two or three years become a valuable work horse. That is according to theory, but theory doesn't take into consideration the diseases and accidents that may be visited upon a farm horse of the youngest generation. Today though she is a playsome colt, that shares the box stall with her mother or gallops round while the mare is out on grass a few hours each day, up to date the experiment is 100 per cent successful.

* * *

When you buy a horse you can always ask the previous owner what he calls it, for a horse must have a name. With the foal you raise one has the privilege of picking a name. Now a horse does not want a big family name. Something short and easy to say is far more appropriate. Some horses are inclined to be a bit lazy at times and the driver may feel inclined to give them a yell. At such times a short name like "Mike," "Bill" or "Tom" comes in very nice. If the teamster is inclined to do a of "cussing" should one of the plow steam step over the traces, he does not want to be bothered with a classified name.

So here we are right up against a brand new experiment, as far as this farm is concerned, and since we bought that brood mare we have re-

Arousing Child's Interest in Work

It's One of the Many Duties Parents Must Undertake

To get children to tackle a job often takes all the ingenuity the mother can summon, not because they are children, but because they are human, and of every child who hates to pitch in, there is his counterpart in the adult world.

There are two kinds of work, the routine occupations of daily life that become second nature and require no particular shove, and the extraroutine tasks that take will and determination.

Now, all children will do the former rather willingly, according to training. Nothing becomes routine, or habit, unless repeated until it becomes part of life. But the trouble with the exceptional job is legion.

School, errands and a few easy chores comprise the child's usual program. Such things are good for him, for otherwise, he would never establish any work habit at all. He is likely, however, to consider any added task outside of his expected responsibilities an imposition.

There are several ways of getting 'round his prejudice, but each mother will have to study her child's disposition and reach deep into his interest and emotional make-up.

Weird Collection Shipped to C.N.E. Zoo

There is now being assembled in Georgetown, Demerara, South America, a large consignment of strange animals and birds for the children's zoo at the Canadian National Exhibition. Native hunters and trappers have been engaged for months in the rounding up of the collection. It will include giant ant-eaters, jaguars, tapirs, many specimens of gally plumaged birds and a wide variety of reptiles.

A feature of the collection that promises to "steal the show" as far as the children are concerned is a shipment of tiny marmosets, smallest of the monkey family. The consignment comes in compliance with this request of William Charles, Canadian representative of Booker Bros. & McConnell, Limited, of Georgetown. After the Exhibition the animals and birds will find a home in the Riverdale Zoo.

The Empire's Way

Another coronation visitor from South Africa belongs in a different class from King Yeta III of Barotseland. He is General J. B. M. Hertzog, Prime Minister of the Union of South Africa. He seems to be enjoying himself greatly in the picture with George VI and a couple of other Prime Ministers, Stanley Baldwin and Mackenzie King, all in civilian morning dress.

Thirty-five years ago, more or less, General Hertzog, at the head of a Boer commando, was doing his best to make himself disagreeable to George VI's great-grandmother, Victoria, and her son and successor, Edward VII. The best British Prime Ministers that South Africa has produced got their start in life fighting the British Empire and almost fighting it to a standstill; like General Smuts. After the war Generel Hertzog went into politics and continued to make himself disagreeable as the leader of the Nationalist opposition. But time has been known to work wonders and the British Empire has a way with it.—New York Times.

Ten of Pancreas For One Pound of Insulin

TORONTO.—The chemical process by which a ton of beef pancreas is transformed into a pound of insulin, invaluable in the treatment of diabetes, was described by D. A. Scott of the University of Toronto before the American Institute of Chemical Engineers in convention here.

Insulin has been a household word since 1922, when it was discovered by Sir Frederick G. Banting and Dr. C. H. Best, University of Toronto researchers. Diabetes sufferers in all parts of the world are treated with it, but the substance must pass rigorous tests before it leaves the laboratory for distribution, Mr. Scott exxplained.

In 100-pound lots, pancreas from freshly killed beeves is minced and put through a purifying process. The purified insulin is dissolved and sterilized in a gold-plated filter which prevents a metallic contamination. The potency of the insulin solution is measured by the reactions of rabbits and mice inoculated with it.

Still more tests follow and the insulin is passed upon by a committee where the tests are duplicated. Bulk insulin is diluted to the desired strength and the solution is again filtered and assayed. It is then filled into hard glass vials, tested for sterility once more and is finally ready for distribution.

The Skunk as a Pet

. . . And the skunk, whatever his virtues, is not just the kind of a pet one would like to have running around the garden. He is reputed, among other things, to be a great raider of chicken-coops.

It is with his bad habits, not his virtues, that we have unfortunately become familiar in this province. At the last session of the Legislature there was a somewhat heated debate as to whether the Minister of Agriculture was not being "swpped" in paying the provincial bounty on skunk snouts bootlegged in from the other provinces.

This was a question affecting solely the value received from the money expended. Nobody suggested that the bounty should be abolished for the skunk's benefit.— Charlottetown Guardian.

Nice Headwork

When two Philadelphia reporters were recently caught in a wholesale raid of a night club, they whipped out their pencils, showed their police cards and convinced the cops they were only covering the event.
