Mourn Chamberlain

LONDON— This week the House of Commons raid tribute to the memory of a great Parliamentarian, Sir Austin Chamberlain, who died last Tuesday.

From all quarters—from the right to the extreme left—came no words but those of affectionate remembrance of Sir Austen Chamberlain, his loyalty, his nonesty, his chivalry, his studied courtesy, his unfailing belief in democratic institutions. Reports from the Mine Superintendent to-day say that the No. 1 vein, which was intersected at the 250 foot level during February has been blasted into for several rounds to the west of the cross-cut and shows to be over four feet wide and is heavily mineralized. His opinion, from present indications, is that this vein should prove to be a very large ore body at greater depth.

The miners continue drifting to the west at the 250 foot level on the No. 2 vein and it continues strong. Some very interesting assays have been taken from this vein, returning

Some years ago there was a featherweight champion named Eugene Criqui, who fought his way to a boxing title despite the fact that part of his jaw had been shot away in the Great War and he had a sheep nose bons grafted into the remaining part. That old time battler, John L. Sullivan, toured the country playing Si-mon Legree in "Uncle Tom's Cabin".
