two appearances to the disciples occurred in an upper room in Jerusalem. All the events recorded in chapter 21 took place on the shore of the Sea of Tiberias.

"When therefore it was evening, on that day, the first day of the week." Between the Lord's appearance to Mary Magdalene early in the morning and his appearance to the ten disciples that evening, two the ten disciples that evening, two the morning and his appearance to the ten disciples that evening, two other appearances must be placed, though they are not given in John's Gospel, the appearance to Simon Peter (Luke 24: 34; I. Cor. 15: 5), and the memorable journey with two disciples on the road to Emmaus (luke 24) "And when the doors were shut where the disciples were." It is not said how many were present. Judas was dead and were present. Judas was dead and were present. Probably the to prove that new laws now ruled his body, that the earthur no longer was a limitation to it. "And said unto them, Peace be unto you." This ciples that he was the very same person who had been crucified and that he had risen with the same body in which he had died, as the parallel account in Luke (24: 39 indicates, It is I myself.

"Jesus therefore said to them again, Peace be unto you: as the Father hath sent me, even so send I you." (See John 17: 3, 23.) Christ had finished the work which the Father had given him to do on earth in his own person; henceforth he would work through others. The new commission is wider than the earlier one. (Matt. 10: 1-42, etc.), for it is not simited to the apostolate; the is not simited to the apostolate; the is not limited to the apostolate; the other disciples who were present are included and, with the eleven, they represent the whole church.

"And when he had said this, he breathed on them and said unto them, Ecceive ye the Holy Spirit." Christ's breathing upon the disciples would be an emblem of the Holy les would be an emblem of the Holy Spirit. This is, of course, a prophetic breathing, symbolic and suggestive. They did not receive the Holy Spirit then. In the course of these Lays, he told them to wait until they received the Spirit (Acts 1:4). He was indicating to them their responsibility in view of the resources at their disposal, telling resources at their disposar, them that they could not go except in one power, that of the Holy Spirit. "Whose soever sins ye forgive, they are forgiven unto them; whose soever sins ye retain, they are retained. Has the church them the power to remit or retain? The answer is unquestionably, Yes. To any man, to any woman, to any youth, man, to any woman, to any youth, or maiden who, conscious of sin, repents towards God, and believes on the Lord Jesus Christ.

In one self ought to have believed in the testimony of the rest, convinced by all he had known and experienced of Christ in past days. Our Lord all he had known and experienced of Christ in past days. Our Lord does not mean that faith has not its solid reasons, for faith is not blind acceptance of truth, nor the opposite of reason, but faith is the opposite of sight because it asserts what is not seen.

The questions of his own end. saying therefore went form among the brethren, that that disciple should not die; yet Jesus said not unto him, that he should not die; but, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?" Jesus speaks as one who is Lord of life and death, whose will is supreme in the state of the same of the s

"This is the disciple that beareth witness of these things, and wrote these things." The phrase may refer to the whole contents of the Gospel. "And we know that his witness is true." We probably refers to the Christians who surrounded John at Ephesus, who, having lived personally with John, know his sincerity and declare him incapable of relating anything false. The of relating anything false. The Gospel closes with a simple statement reminding us that its contents cover only a small portion of all the many things which Jesus did.

VANCOUVER — "Trusties" in Vancouver City Jail this week were without smuggled rum rations to which they had become accustomed, and police sought an unidentified woman believed to have been responsible for providing the liquor.

Motorcycle officers noticed a woman hurrying up a garage ramp between the jail and the city morgue nearby. She disappeared in the darkness of a downtown street. On investigation, the officers found a full bottle of run dangling from a cord lowered from a window high in the jail. They seized the container cefore it could be pulled into the building.

Several empty bottles were found in the "trusties" quarters, but all inmates denied connection with the rum-smuggling pot. VANCOUVER — "Trusties" in Vancouver City Jail this week were without smuggled rum rations to
