The Toronto Kiwanis Club with a wonderful cause behind their effort are endeavoring to present Casa Loma one of the rare sights in Toronto that every visitor should see. For this privilege they charge the nominal fee of 25c, the revenue from which goes to hospitalization work for needy children. For this reason the public will not regret the charge made for a tour of Casa Loma Castle. Otherwise it might be said that this is just another of the many city rackets to get next to the pocket book of the unsuspecting visitor.

conditions, administration economies and revision of the power purchase contracts. The cost of power in the power derived from the Niagara system was $3,110,848, whereas the corresponding cost in 1935, before power contracts were revised, was $3,232,960.

Hydro statisticians calculate that if Ontario Hydro users had to pay for power at the same rates as prevail in commercially operated United States system about $40,000,000 would be added to their bills.

While Hydro consumers, of course, could never have afforded to have purchased at old private power rates the quantities of and cannot now, they have consumed the difference between Hydro bills down through the Hydro years and the cost of the same amount of power bought at private rates now totals roughly $1,000,000,000.

WHAT PRICE HEALTH?

A recent article appearing in Maclean's magazine sets forth some very interesting facts concerning health. It states that 35,000 Canadians die yearly from causes other than old age, also that Canada's spending $200,000,000 yearly on cures, but only $500,000 on prevention.

SO THIS IS CASA LOMA

About every resident in the Province of Ontario has heard a good deal about Casa Loma, the one palatial residence of Sir Henry Pelly, in Toronto, Ont. It has also been a common knowledge of almost every one that the undertaking resulted in financial disaster for the builder, although his dream castle became a reality to be enjoyed for a very short time by himself.

A Weekly Review Of National Affairs

(By Wilfrid Eggleston)

Ottawa, August 31st—Canada's trade with other nations is rising to levels that compare with the best in her history. It is always observed that when Canada's external trade is active, domestic property is most apparent.

Imports Rising Also

Imports are, of course, keeping pace pretty well with exports. In the early days of recovery, there was a heavy demand for goods from behind exports, adding to the "trade balance" but now on the other hand, the demand for goods from abroad is expected for a while to be 50 per cent of Canada's total exports.

A Statement by the Ontario Department of Health on POLIOMYELITIS ("INFANTILE PARALYSIS")

In view of the prevalence of "infantile paralysis" in Ontario at the present time, and in recognition of the deep concern felt by parents over the protection of their children, the Provincial Department of Health is issuing the following statement concerning the nature of the disease and the question of what can be done to reduce the danger of infection.

Nature of the Disease

Like measles and scarlet fever, "infantile paralysis" is a communicable or "catching" disease. Like them also, it is mainly a disease of childhood. Yet the term "infantile" is apt to be misleading. While it is true that the majority of cases occur among children under ten years of age, the disease does occur, especially in rural districts, among older children and young adults.

The term "paralysis" is likewise misleading since it conveys the impression that some loss of muscular function is characteristic of every case of the disease. This is not true. It is now known that only a small proportion of those who contract the disease actually develop paralysis.

Since the disease is not limited to infancy and since on an occasion, as in the case of the name "infantile paralysis" is now regarded as a misnomer. The correct name for the disease is "polio-myelitis", which simply means acute inflammation ("itis") of the grey matter ("polio") of special portions of the spinal cord which control movement of the muscles. This inflammation is believed to be due to a special sort of infection which probably gains entrance to the nervous system through the upper part of the nose and throat.

Cause of the Disease

Poliomyelitis has been definitely recognized as a communicable disease since 1909 when investigators succeeded in securing from humans, ill with the disease, a minute living substance called a "virus" which was found to be capable of producing poliomyelitis in monkeys.

Much remains to be discovered about the nature of this virus but a good deal has already been learned. In size, it has been found to be less than one millionth of an inch in diameter. The virus is present in the nervous tissue of humans who have died from the disease. It is also found in the nose and throat, not only of persons ill with the disease, but also of persons who have been in contact with the diseased individual.

How the Disease Spreads

The exact manner in which the disease is transmitted from one person to another is not known. However, the disease does not arise spontaneously. The source of infection is a human being who is carrying the virus. Such a person need not necessarily be suffering from the disease. Yet the mere presence of the virus in the nose and throat affords ample opportunity for spread of infection. In such cases minute particles are given off by coughing, sneezing and talking. Figures are constantly being carried to and from the mouth and nose and in this way articles, such as improperly washed eating and drinking utensils, common towels, children's toys, etc., may become contaminated.

Any set of circumstances which permits the frequent and rapid transfer of nose and throat secretions from one person to another increases the possibility of infection.

There is no evidence that flies or other insects play an important part in the spread of poliomyelitis.

Chlorination of municipal water supplies as now practiced, and the pasteurization of milk have eliminated water and milk as possible sources of infection.

Signs and Symptoms of the Disease

The early symptoms of poliomyelitis are neither constant nor regular in their appearance, but certain of them are sufficiently suggestive to warrant the summoning of the family physician.

The onset is usually sudden, with rapidly rising TEMPERATURE, fluctuating between 101-103 degrees HEADACHE is another common symptom. The young child is apt to appear irritable and restless when disturbed. The patient is usually willing to stay in bed, appears drowsy and takes little interest in his surroundings.

Precautions in the Care of Those Ill

When a diagnosis of poliomyelitis has been made, the patient must be isolated for a period of at least three weeks. Since other members of the family are likely to be carriers of the virus, the protection of the community requires that they be quarantined until the danger of further spread has been eliminated. Care should be taken to see that articles which may have become contaminated by the patient are disinfected or burned. Special precautions should be taken in regard to the disposal of nasal and alimentary discharges. Those who are handling the patient should exercise special care regarding their hands and person before coming in contact with other people.
