When the United League season opens Pop Clark's New York Blues are a 200 to 1 shot. Terry Burke being the only sports writer to give them a chance at the pennant. In the Blues' first game Whitper, Philadelphia's star pitcher, is killed with a bullet through the heart after smacking out a home run. Both Burke and Larry Doyle, the Blues' rookie shortstop, for whom Clark's pretty daughter Frances was named, are suspected at first by Detroiters. It is Burke who discovers it was a notorious gunman who sent four Boston players to the hospital with a bullet through their first fire. Doyle is killed in the ball park during a game. It looks like Clark's mystery is solved. He had a letter from Larry the other day and he says the team is beginning to get nervous. "Will you keep me posted on your plans, but I'll have to watch the standings of the teams carefully. In the meantime, keep your eyes open." "It hardly seems possible that you can be right," Kelly said doubtfully.

The next day Terry began a new series of articles reviewing the earlier series of articles on the wrong track. The murders have been carefully planned and executed to fool the police and to mislead attention. Why aren't the police convinced by now that it is not gangland in the case? Kelly asked. "I'm not convinced by now that it is not gangland in the case," Kelly said. "I'm not convinced by now that it is not gangland in the case," Kelly said. the schedule and every fan in the country focused his attention on the outcome of the four games to be played.

"It's now or never," Terry said to Kelly as he started for Washington the afternoon before the first game of the last series was to be played. "Just what are you going to do?" Kelly asked.

"I'm going to see Doyle and have a long talk with him and tell him what I suspect, so that he can have his eyes open and be prepared. I want Doyle watched every minute of the time."

"But why should he risk his life because you have an idea?" Kelly was insistent. "I'm going to tell Doyle the whole story, so that he can be on his guard."

"I don't know what they will do or how they will do it. They may not even try. If the Blues win the first game, they may make no effort on the other hand, if the Blues take the first and the Reds the second it will be bad. The Blues must win three out of the four games. Would you quit now if you had been operating this thing?"

"I don't think they will quit, either. We've got to be on the jump for anything that might happen."

3 To 1 Chance That Flyers Still Alive

Viljalmur Stefansson, Noted Explorer, Holds Out Hope For Russian Aviators

Chances are about 3 to 1 that the Russian trans-Polar flyers are still alive. Viljalmur Stefansson, Arctic explorer, said this week as he rushed additional purchases of silk tents and concentrated food for the rescue expedition for Sir Hubert Wilkins' rescue expedition.

Weather reports prepared by Stork Stefansson, at the spot where the expedition landed, while drifting on ice in the Arctic ocean at this time of year, have shown the ice is fairly level, whereas south of that latitude a landing would be difficult. The ice being furrowed by channels of rain.

Stefansson said Sir Hubert's search party passed close to the spot where the expedition landed, and his five companions were believed to have been forced down. He reached longitudes 52 1/2 north and latitude 145 west but for was so thick nothing could be seen. Sir Hubert is now waiting for favorable weather before taking off.

The Russians should have no difficulty in finding food, Stefansson said, the Polar bears, camp at a distance of 12 or more miles, would be able to investigate. Seals also would be obtainable, while the ice beneath the ice is full of marine life, such as shrimps.

In midwinter of 1918 Stork Stefansson made a journey north from the Alaskan coast by dog sled and arrived at the ice for about six months. During September and October he drifted along a line about 45 miles long. He found the Russians are believed to be.

Stefansson obtained a copy of Stefansson's report from the Canadian Department of Mines and Resources at Ottawa and forwarded a summary to the rescue expedition.

Women Drivers Muscle-Bound

Charles Jackson, 26, charged with killing his father after a quarrel, is comforted by his mother, Mrs. Edith Jackson, who surrendered to San Francisco authorities after a battle with her conscience.

Women drivers do more accidents than men, not because they are less skilful, but because they are muscle-bound. It is their lack of physical strength that makes them more prone to accidents.

Paint Sold In Rolls

Paint can now be bought in rolls, like wallpaper, which means that you can dispense with brushes and messiness on certain jobs. Roll-paint has a backing of very thin oil-cloth. First coats are applied to the surface to be painted with a layer of rubber cement; the roll is laid on. It is extremely pliable and can be moulded to take the form of any irregularities.

Home Hints

Dressed Up Fruit. At this time of the year your family will want fresh fruits morning, noon and night. Between meals and for breakfast they will want it plain and unadorned, but at dinner and supper they want it in desserts that look "dressed up."

There are a variety of ways in which you can serve the fresh fruits that are so plentiful right now and one of the simplest is by combining them with jelly. It is easy to use and you can make inspired desserts in a few minutes. Another advantage of combining fresh fruits with jelly is that sometimes you get a batch of fruit that is not so flavourful as usual but the fresh, fruity flavour of the jelly will live up to the fruit and make a tasty dessert combination.

The following dishes are party looking concoctions made out of simple things. The children love them because they are so pretty and you will love them because they are so good for the children.

Two of these desserts are fluffy, pastel colored mousses in lovely-shaped and two are clear, colorful and jewel-like plain jelly powder combined with fruits in out-of-the-ordinary, attractive ways. Fresh Plum Snow, Pear Whip, Peach Nests and Apple Cider Tarts—tempting names and the desserts are just as tempting as they sound.
