in this way he has acquired a great deal of knowledge. He talks in a clear voice and says he cannot recall the time when his voice ever failed him. One of his strong points is temperance. He has absolutely no use for strong drink and has never used anything in that line and believes that is why he enjoys his three meals a day now. He is in the best of health and loves to visit and talk about the days when he was a lad.

He is the proud father of two sons and is greatly interested in his ten grand children.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bier and Rue ful of grain, teaches us that if we live without work we must live without food. The thirty and the lazy cricket. So it is with people. Those who toil do not suffer for food and fuel.

If we had no idle people in the country we would not have to pay such enormous amounts of money for relief. Surely these people on relief would be happier if working than being idle.

Our great English writer Carlyle was a lesson for the "Honourable Tolly" which emphatically tells us that one who turns his back on toil is not a man.

For example he writes of the toll-town craftsman, that with earth made implement laboriously conquers the earth.

A hand that is hard, crooked and coarse is venerable. For it is too that is rugged, weather-beaten, belated, etc., is also venerable. For it is the hand that has made the world what it is today.

Another writer tells us that all who work are happy, but all else is chaff and dust which let the wind blow whither it listeth.

Since the first of the world, it has been man's lot to earn his living by the sweat of his brow. Charles Martin has been when we are busiest we are happiest.

Of course the best work is done when we are happy doing it. No matter what the occupation, one who works at it happily will do more in the same time and do it better than one who follows the same pursuit with a grudging heart.

Each student was given a sermon by the Rev. J. H. Mohlenbacher, of Jarvis, who said that the beauty of the church is in the service of the community.

It is a duty of parents to do their very best for their children. After all our life work is for our children. We believe as then to educate them for what they wish to become so that they will be happy while at their work.

It is a duty of parents to do their very best for their children. After all our life work is for our children. We believe as then to educate them for what they wish to become so that they will be happy while at their work.

Whether the son wishes to be a doctor, a lawyer, a farmer, or a tradesman, the father should encourage him to follow his own path, but with the understanding that he must be a good citizen and a good worker.
