LOOKS AT LIFE

"A CHEER FOR THE LOSERS"

A few years ago the High School in the "Little Town" had an "All-star" football team. It was invincible; composed of a group of players who went through the whole season without suffering a single defeat, and who played a fabulous amount of points it was our pride and joy. To watch that team in action was a sight for the "good" and "men." Players were selected with clockwork precision, every man on the team knew his job; and with uncanny accuracy they could guess the plays that their opponents were about to make, and successfully foiled them up at the end of the season.

But the custom of giving the team a dinner at the end of the season, as the town in its enthusiasm, tendered them a banquet as a recognition about to make, and successfully foiled them up at the end of the season. The team was broken up at the end of the season, and the players were scattered abroad over the length and breadth of the land. The majority of them are in college, and according to the latest reports, are giving a good account of themselves academically as well as in the fields of athletics.

THE SPORTS TRAIL

By A.R.P.

Professional hockey isn't what it's cracked up to be. There are one or two players in the "All-American game" who are really good. Aside from the odd player, big time hockey is played by a number of big, slow fellows, who make it their job to be as tough as possible to handle.

Friday night gave us our first glimpse at a couple of the "All-American game" players. The "All-American game" is played by a number of big, slow fellows, who make it their job to be as tough as possible to handle.
