"The Leashed Guns of Circle L"

by Perry Westbrook

SYNOPSIS

Slim Loyale is paroled from prison after serving 18 months for a crime he did not commit. He re-turns to his Circle L ranch to find his father dead and sinister forces at work, trying to make him vio-at work, frying to make him vio-late his parole so that he can again be railroaded to prison.

The Brockwells and their gang are plotting to gain possession of Circle L ranch and the property of Mona Hall, a neighbor and life-long friend of Slim Loyale.

Slim discovers that Sheriff Star-buck has joined the plot against him. With the help of Dakota Blue and his cowboys, Slim Loyale defies the land-grabbers to do their Dakota grunted assent. So they squatted down, their backs against a friendly wall close to the mouth of the alley. From time to time Slim would stick a and survey the street. The bank was some fifty yards away on the opposite side. Two doors from it was a Mexican cantina. The windows of the Mexican joint glowed oncos slouching at the hitching rail in front.

"Brockwell an' his gang are in that greaser joint," observed Slim softly. "I recognize that buckskin hoss of Cinder Alton's. Hope Roy and Stoney don't take any chances with Alton. That crooked little devil is poison with a gun."

"I wouldn't do any worryin' about them two," answered Dakota. "They know Alton as well as we do. The first lead they throw will be haided his way. Wonder when they'll pull the job?" "Gonna Get Caught"

"'Most any time now. The town is pretty daid. I reckon they're figgerin' on doin' it plenty quiet. They won't have an alibi in the world, should they get caught at it. Knowin' this, Brockwell will play his cards careful."

"Won't do him no good," chuckled Dakota. "He's gonna get caught. But somethin' tells me that he won't have no use for an alibi anyhow. Then things don't mean a darn to a daid man." "Yuh must expect Roy an' Ston-

"Roy's good, but Stoney is forked lightnin'," grunted Dakota.
"Yuh've never seen him in action like I have, Slim. I tell yuh, he's a holy terror. He ain't got those quiet, cold eyes for nothin'. Besides, yuh an me oughta come in handy ourselves." Dakota yawn-ed and stretched. "Wish they'd get started," he grumbled. "I'm gettin' sleepy and cold."

> of the shotgun, Brockwell's crowd scattered wildly. Slim, edging in beside Rooney, snapped shot after shot at this one and that. He saw two of them go down. From the livery stable corral came a whoop of triumph and a sputter of words.

"Whurroo! Give it to the spalpeens! Away with 'em the rderin' devils. Smoke 'em out!" Surprised and confused, the bandit crowd were quick to realise that there was nothing to be gained by trying to fight matters out along this line. Any chance of looting the bank was entirely gone

In another minute or two, the entire town would be about their ears. The only thing to do was ride and ride fast. As this idea caught hold, they raced for their horses which were rearing and plunging with fright. They split, some riding north, some south. In the lead of those passing the Wild Horse, came Cinder Alton, crouched low over his buckskin's he was snoring softly. Slim was having trouble in keeping awake himself. The let-down in nervous tension, after the long day of mo-mentous happenings, found him weary. Several times his head began to nod, his eyelids growing

And then, like a thunderclap, a single report echoed down the street. Following it came a shrill, yammering, high-pitched yell. A pair of guns began a staccato rumbling, in such cadence that it was easy to tell that one man with a practised pair of hands was They're Cornered Thrump thrump! Thrumphrump! Thrump-thrump! Slim and Dakota were on their feet in a bound, guns drawn, poised in the alley opening. The measured roll of those first reports was now shattered to bits by a ragged roar of other gunfire Slim saw shadowy figures darting about the bank in what appeared to be aimless confusion. Then a stentorian yell echoed in a voice easily distinguishable a

Immediately Slim and Dakota Blue became the centre of a lashing hail of lead. Dakota grunted, cursed and went down in a heap. Behind Slim came a bawl of warning. "Get him inside! Get him inside, Slim. I'll help yuh." The next moment, fat Spud Dillon, still encased in his white bartender's apron, was bending over Dakota, tugging at his shoulders. "It's my right laig," snapped Dakota through set teeth. "Ge side. Give 'em hell, Slim, an' back The Bandits Surprised

Quick to grasp the idea, Slim shot with smooth precision, backing up a step at a time. Just as his guns snapped empty, his shoul ders struck the wall of a building. Then hands grabbed him, jerked him to one side and through an open doorway. The door slammed shut. He and Dakota were inside the Wild Horse Saloon. Old Joe Rooney was the man who had the 18th century (remember reading about him in Byron's poem?) was kidnapped by the Devil, so the legend goes, and spent the rest of his eternal life in Hell. Miss Warner, one of the firstrank writers of 1939, refuses to believe this story, suggests that Don Juan instead of remaining in Hades, came back to his native Spain to plague the dusty nobles of his castle, the lusty peasants of the village. . . The unexpect-ed return of Don Juan after his reported death throws them all in-

Paris Collections Show Generally Youthful Line In Fashion

It can be stated generally that the new silhouette for spring is molded and youthful, with skirts about 17 inches off the floor and flaring at the hem.

There is a prevalence of shirtmaker dresses in wool, linen, cotton and silk, usually cut with pleated panels and showing a variety of detail work.

Clear colors, preferably pas-tels, have edged out most of the sombre shades. Especially popu-lar are lime-green, nattier blue, sun-yellow and rosewood. Gay prints feature flower mo-tifs in soft spring shades. Polka dots are tiny in surahs, medium-sized on crepe, and become large pastilles on muslins and organdies. Period Styles

The two period lines featured in most of the new shows, are 18th century and romantic. The roman-tic period is reflected in gowns with tightly fitted bodices and flowing skirts adorned with pan-els, flounces and ruching, often accompanied by evening capes in
