PERSONALITY Perfume has been called the royal road to Glamour. It gives pleasure to the wearer (and those around), and it also gives you a potent "lift."

Perfume is most enchanting when it suggests its presence in a subtle and unobtrusive way, and the secret is to scatter many light applications, instead of one heavy application in one place. Start with your lingerie; spray your undergarments after laun-dering, because the scent lingers. And so with your dresses. Spray it an hour or two before wearing. When you're dressed, add a drop or two, if you desire. It was the fashion in Elizabethan days to wear perfumed gloves, and smart moderns follow suit. A

Unsurpassed As Source of Wood Pulp — Grows And Thrives Under Unfavorable Condi-

black spruce is the subject of inves-tigations being conducted by the Dominion Forest Service of the Deat the Petawawa Forest Experimen tal Station. Black spruce is unsur passed as a source of wood pulp and is in constant demand as a raw material for use in the production of sulphite pulp for newsprint, ray on, and other materials. Black spruce has the ability to grow and thrive on areas where owing to excessive moisture and un-favorable soil conditions, other commercial tree species will not grow. It is foun, across Canada on the vast areas of swamps and mus-kegs that otherwise would be waste lands. Studies show that black spruce may reproduce either from seed or from basal branches which, when covered with moss, requently take root, sending up shoots that develop into trees.

Because of the imp rtance black spruce to the economic life of Canada, it is extremely necessary and of its growth with a view species in order to utilize its bene-fits to the full extent and to assure a permanent supply of the species
