Lake Simcoe To Be Angler's Paradise

Lake Simcoe is destined to be the greatest lake in Ontario from a fishing standpoint. That's the opinion of the department of game and fisheries. D. J. Taylor, deputy minister stated. Five million white fish fry are being released there and the trout, rainbow trout, bass, pickerel and perhaps muskellunge will be added later.

"The fact the lake is so close to Toronto and already produces good fishing is encouraging us to restock heavily," he said. "Lake trout fishing has been particularly good in recent years and this year we expect it to be better than ever."

At the same time, he said, efforts would be redoubled to prevent illegal netting and comply authorities anywhere from $100 to $500.

One large-eyed, round-faced Eskimo beauty modeled a short packed packet made of oiled, trimmed with wolverine. Proudly she displayed the Spring fishing outfit she had on the front opening and for the necks where she kept cosmetics that had been brought by slow mails from the "Outside." Gracefully she demonstrated how the Hood tightened around the face, and shyly she showed it was just the thing for skiing or sports wear. She wore lynx mittens.

New Zero Hour Approaches For Europe's Small Neutrals

Since the outbreak of armed conflict between Germany and the Allies, September 1, 1939, three distinct waves have been fought in Europe—in Poland, Finland, and in Norway—and Germany has won two of them. The signs were unmistakable that a fourth war was about to begin, with Germany launching attacks against Britain on two or three fronts, possibly in the Mediterranean Sea by Italian armed action. Every country in Europe had a No. 1 case of the jitters.

GREAT BRITAIN, Assailed by public opinion, the press, Opposition leaders, critics within the Conservative ranks for having "missed the bus" in the Norwegian campaign, Prime Minister Chamberlain's administration was changing last week on human chestnuts out of the fire. The question was, would the British House of Commons, press, public, be satisfied with promises henceforth to wage the war against Germany in more vigorous fashion, or would they demand a change of governments "so that the same thing may not happen again next week in any one of a half-dozen other countries of Europe." (Hugh Dalton, Labor M.P.)

REPLACEMENT
It is a good plan, old gardeners state, to use started annual flowers for planting among tulips and crocuses. Spring flowering bulbs will be past their best in a few more weeks. Something is needed to take the place of the bulbs. Quick growing annuals will always be useful for filling in any blind spots in the perennial beds where winter has been unusually severe.

FIRST VEGETABLES
First of the garden peas, leaf lettuce, radishes and spinach will be among the earliest vegetables to be sown. These may be planted as soon as the ground is fit to work. All of the seeds should be sown at least three times at intervals of ten days so that there will be successive crops. The second sowing will be carrots, beets, onions, potatoes, etc., which can stand a little frost, and then beans, corn and tomatoes, cabbage and cauliflower plants, etc., which are tender.

War Responsibility to Preserve Liberty at Home — Strengthen Democracy, Urges Principal of Queen's University

Individual responsibility is necessary for the preservation of freedom, Dr. R. C. Wallace, principal and vice-chancellor of Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., told a recent meeting of the Ottawa Women's Club.

"If the forces against us are victorious, the growth of personality, which is the important thing in life, will not be allowed," he said.

If all individuals did their best to strengthen the system existing today, they would be helping to ensure its continuation, Dr. Wallace declared. He urged persons with minority views to be courageous enough to express them.

The fact that there is no unemployment in dictator countries is due to military enlistments, he said. If the men under a dictatorship were asked whether they preferred

Monday: Exploration of the spot which begins the first day in Blanco Canyon, when Holliman rode the bucking horse, but he was hired as a workman.

He thought her shy. All at once, though, a new thought struck her. Was Holliman, after all, a "man's workman"? Wasn't he hired rather to be one of a scientific party, on an equal footing with the others? Was it fair to expect Dr. Barry to maintain town standards of employers and servants? Hades Jones had been accepted as a social equal, surely. And the West is famous for its democracy, she knew.

Holliman mistook her pause for shyness, and thought she was pleased at the compliment. "Anytime you want anything,"

Hired Love-making
Nobody had any suggestions. They had thrashed it out before, without results. When 9:30 came, the party went to bed.

At breakfast, Bob had already been up two hours, making entries in his notebooks, and outlining work for the next few days to come. "First thing, Uncle Hades," he addressed the others, "you'd better take the pack mules to the spring and bring back the waterer you can. Take it easy. It's a 12-mile jaunt, you know."

"Holliman, I think you'd better ease out more poles and construct a wider and more permanent bank in our tent houses here. Make 'em well and Honey Bee's first. We'll need comfortable beds. You might take a chair or two, and a larger table, if you have a knack for it. We may be here for a while."

Holliman went out to start for the necessary poles, and Mary Melissa went toward the central saddle her horse and take a ride. Holliman saw her there alone, and angled across the area, carrying his ax, to speak with her. Right as well get on with his hired love-making. Besides, after due consideration, he was liking the idea very much. He had given it much thought during the night.

Bob ingested at the breakfast table, sketching and making notes. He wanted a complete record of every move made on this expedition. Every piece of pottery, every bit of rock or artifact collected, had to be properly classified and labeled. Honey Bee brought him more coffee, then ingested.

PINEAPPLE CHAT
The secret for canning pineapple is now with us again. It is rather a difficult matter to be sure when pineapples will be at their best,—always there seems to be a diversity of opinion. My best advice to you is, "Be a canny buyer and watch for the best pineapple as well as the best price." By all means "shop" and do not telephone.

I have been requested to repeat the canning methods of last year so I shall give you the method for first the cooked, and then the uncooked or raw fruit when canning all requirements. The uncooked is ever a favorite, and if properly done keeps indefinitely and is the ideal way for fruit cups and cocktails.

The acid content of fruits plays a considerable part in the keeping qualities of fruit when canning. Pineapple has a high acid content and as a result does not require as long cooking time as other fruits. Canned pineapple when reported as having too strong a log of being hard on the throat is usually fruit overly cooked.

I am giving the oven-cooked method (which so many of you wrote me about last year saying you were delighted with the results).

Oven-Canned Pineapple
Always test jars for leakage. Place in kettle and sterilize thoroughly. Prepare fruit either in chunks or thin half slices, whichever you desire. Omit any soft or over-ripe fruit. Place fruit in hot sterilized jars. Fill with syrup to within 1/4 inch of the top. Place in rubbers, being sure they are new and sterile, next the glass top and then screw tops. Screw down tightly to be sure it fits properly, then loosen one turn back to allow for expansion. Place on rack in oven about 1 1/2 inches apart. Process at 275 deg. Fahrenheit for 35 minutes for pints; 40 minutes for quarts. If possible allow jars to cool in oven until easy to handle, then screw tops down tightly; leave inverted for 24 hrs. Store in a dry and cool place. Under no circumstances reopen jars to fill with syrup.

Points to Remember
If using an electric oven do not use top element at all, never for preheating. If your oven has no heat control use the same oven as you would for a fruit cake.

The fruit should never boil rapidly in jars. Use a very slow boil (an odd bubble will be noticed travelling to the top). If the fruit boils over, the oven is too hot, then place a pan of cold water in the oven to cool it down.

Syrup for Canning Pineapple
Place one layer cake meringue side down on serving plate. Whip cream until stiff. Add sugar, pineapple, lemon extract and marshmallows and fold in lightly. Spread between layers. Place second layer meringue-side up on top of filling. Cut in squares or wedge shapes for serving.

and employers were more exacting in their demands, with the result that greater maturity and better training was required for those starting work.

EDUCATE UP TO 17
Child labor was rapidly disappearing because of this need of more maturity and better training, and school authorities had to arrange the curriculum as to keep the boys and girls in training until they were suited for employment. Industry had little use for untrained boys and girls, and the community must make up its mind to educate children up to 17.

"If pupils leave the elementary schools at 13 and cannot find work until they are 17 something must be done for them during the intervening four years to prevent them from running around idle if they are not to qualify as inmates of our penal institutions," said Mr. Darragh.

David Low, Britain's great cartoonist, pictured Prime Minister Chamberlain and his colleagues digging themselves in for a last stand behind the barricaded doors of the cabinet room at 10 Downing St. Mr. Chamberlain, armed with an umbrella, Sir John Simon and Sir Samuel Hoare, with inkpots for ammunition, were seen crouching at the end of the cabinet table jammed against the door. Scattered on the floor were papers marked "eight years of dilatoriness." The caption says: "One position that isn't going to be evacuated."

NORWAY. With Central and Southern Norway abandoned to the Germans, it remained to the Allies, aided by the Norwegians, to capture the port of Narvik from a garrison of 4,000 Germans, and seize the railway leading from Narvik to the vital Swedish iron mines at Kiruna. Prime Minister Chamberlain declared that the government was keeping in mind the fact that British forces at Narvik were open to grave risks until Allied air supremacy in the area could be established.

DON'T HANDICAP THE POOR

The war should not be a means of maintaining the status quo in which the well-to-do have so much and others have so little. There are standards of living which should improve whether the country is at war or at peace. The financial sacrifice of war should be borne by those who are able to bear it, and to the greatest degree by those who are best equipped to bear it. All war taxation should be framed with that view. Those who are struggling upwards from the financial depths should not be handicapped by war burdens which others are better able to shoulder. — Toronto Star.
