THIS CURIOUS WORLD By William Ferguson

The dinosaurs, once rulers of the earth, had some characteristics common to birds, lizards and alligators, but they have no near relatives living today.

CARBON IS FOUND IN NATURE IN MORE THAN 100,000 COMBINATIONS.

ALTHOUGH the dinosaurs varied greatly in many respects, they shared certain anatomical characteristics which place them all together in one great order. In size, they varied from the size of a rabbit to almost 100 feet in length. Some were carnivorous, others vegetarians; some had hundreds of teeth, while others were toothless. Some walked on all fours, while others were upright.
