ON THE FARM FRONT

larly when it can be so easily prevented. "Treat your grain for extra gain" is a good slogan.

v v v

Vegetables for Victory is another good slogan for farm families to keep in mind. There is no doubt as to the importance and great necessity for ample supplies of vegetables in balancing the diet for our people and to contribute the minerals and vitamins that are so essential in providing the maximum mass human energy needed to carry on a total war. Every farm family should grow a vegetable garden large enough to supply both the summer and winter needs of the family. If a little extra can be grown for sale so much the better.

v v v

Did you order any forest trees for planting this spring? Orders should have been in by April 1st. Any property owner can plant 500 to 1000 trees and give them the proper care without interfering in any way with crop production operations. Do not neglect this very important project for home and community improvement.

CANADIAN CORPS HEADQUARTERS ENTERTAINED VISITING EDITORS

discussion about paint. Somebody said the English paint didn't last any more; the oils were all being used for making margarine. Another remarked: "Oh well, you can't eat your paint and have it too."

To complete the homelike atmosphere, there was a white table cloth and a great bowl of lovely English roses, picked from the garden beside the house.

Second Division Demonstrates

That afternoon, I saw a demonstration of the work of the Canadian Corps in the Aldershot area. There was a formal inspection of the Royal Canadian Regiment, drawn up with its motorized equipment in the background. In nearby fields, I saw the soldiers using trench mortars, a wide variety of weapons including tommy guns, once the favorite weapons of American gangsters, now useful in close-range fighting. There were portable wireless units, some small enough to be carried on a man's back, others mounted in trucks. The regiment had plenty of Bren guns and larger anti-tank weapons. Even the rifles with their shorter bayonets, have several uses now.

About one quarter of the Canadian troops were living in houses at that time. Some of these were nearby. They seemed to be quite new, and were certainly modern. They were used for sleeping only and every room, except the bathrooms, had blankets and equipment neatly piled up where soldiers had slept.

There were other things I saw that day. The Canadians have been building roads to eliminate hazards and obstacles that might slow up an army speeding towards the coast. We drove along the wide Ridge Road with broad valleys and chalk hills on either side. There was no speed limit. When we came to an ancient town with narrow, winding streets. The effects could be imagined.

To eliminate the worst of these, two sweeping by-pass roads have been built around English towns. They lack the picturesqueness of the old roads but they do speed up the through traffic.

Finally, Colonel Mann gave us a demonstration of the efficiency and speed of the Reconnaissance Battalion. He stepped over to one of the wireless units and said a few words. Inside of three minutes, a stream of universal carriers and armored cars was tearing down the road past the spot where we stood, slowing down for a corner and turning out of sight. I don't know how far away it was when that wireless call went out, but that battalion must be trained to standards that would do credit to a city fire brigade.

Conference With General McNaughton

It was in the late afternoon that our cars filed up a driveway bordered with hedges clipped in fancy shapes and stopped in front of another large mansion, this time the headquarters of General McNaughton and staff. General A. G. L. McNaughton, to be more precise. The ensuing two hours were among our most interesting in England.

While we ate tea and sandwiches, standing around a table in a room whose windows looked out on what must have been wonderful gardens in peacetime, General McNaughton moved from one to another. He was particularly interested in relatives and friends in Ottawa, for he had been head of the National Research Council there. As a noted scientist, as well as a soldier, I believe that the General has a right to place almost the whole alphabet after his name to indicate degrees and decorations. He did not look well at that time, and since then has been forced to take a month off to rest and recuperate. I have never met anyone who knew him, who did not characterize him as "a fine fellow."

After that day, I could understand.

Having fed us the customary English afternoon tea General McNaughton took us upstairs to his own office. It was large and airy. Maps hung on all the walls. A dozen editors and a few staff officers sat down at tables, with the General in the centre of the horseshoe, and he gave a short address and answered every question. There was no hesitation and no evasion. Occasionally, having told us something, he would say that was not for publication, but that was the only restriction. He kept no secrets from his visitors.

Of all the editors present, I seemed to be the only one taking notes that afternoon. They were fairly complete. Looking over them now, some months later, I find that they are still timely and valuable. At that time, Moscow and Petrograd were both threatened by the enemy. Since then, that situation has changed, but without altering what General McNaughton said of the Russians and of the war in general. It was in this talk he coined the famous phrase about the Canadian Corps being "a dagger pointed at the heart of Berlin." More valuable, perhaps, were his remarks on equipment, training and reinforcements.

Feeling that the important message which he asked us to give Canadians should not be condensed, I will devote a separate article to the things which General McNaughton said that day. It will be the next in the series.

On other days, during my visit in Britain, I met members of the Headquarters staff in London. One evening, I had dinner with Major Charles Stacey, whose task is to write the official history of the part which the Canadian Corps takes in the war. He is a nephew of Mrs. Perry formerly editor of the Express. Before he took over this present work, he was a professor of history. He will do a good job. Photographically, the story of the corps is also being well looked after, but there seem to be no Canadian painters on the job. That is a lack that should be remedied. I believe two young painters are with a unit in Canada, but apparently there are none in England or Scotland.

Captain Gillis Purcell, our guide that day, is back in Canada. He met with an unfortunate accident a few weeks after our visit, losing a leg, when a orbiter, being dropped from a plane, broke away from its parachute and struck him below the knee.

Hagersville Pilot Victim of Crash Near Vittoria

PLANE BARELY MISSED HOUSE AS IT CRASHED IN FIELD

LAC Otis Keith Nickerson, R.C.A.F., son of Mr. and Mrs. K. P. Nickerson, Yarmouth, N.S., a pilot trainee at No. 16 S.F.T.S., at Hagersville, died in the crash of his Avro-Anson plane in a field near Vittoria, a few miles south of Simcoe, on Monday morning.

The plane crashed on the farm of E. A. Johnstone, and barely missed a tenant house before crashing in a field. The side of the house was plastered with mud and three windows were broken out by flying debris. A portion of one wing came through the bedroom window and landed on a bed, while another piece knocked a coal oil lamp off a dresser.

Probable cause of the accident was not revealed. Members of the Norfolk Civil Guard mounted guard over the wrecked machine, and a call to No. 1 B. & G. School, brought a crash party to remove the wreckage.

Grateful Sailor Sends Thanks to Local Knitter

Lieutenant Sydney Raincar, R.N.V.R., commanding officer of H.M.S. Harvest Hope, writes to The Globe and Mail acknowledging a sweater knitted by Ethel Leathong of Jarvis, who enclosed a pencil-scribbled note expressing the hope that we would enjoy it. The officer says:

"The enclosed slip of paper was discovered in the sleeve of a blue woollen sweater. Will you kindly publish a few words of thanks for me? In reply to her I say: 'Many thanks, Old Dear, you certainly know how to knit. The sweater is as warm as toast and fits and looks well.'" He adds that the sweater was one item in a parcel, presented by the Canadian Red Cross, which contained also a scarf, two pairs of seaboot stockings, two pairs socks, a pair of mitts, and a helmet.

WEDDINGS

POND—GARBER

On Saturday, April 4th, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Garber was the scene of a pretty Easter wedding when their elder daughter, Ruth Irene, became the bride of Russell Clarence Pond, son of Mr. and Mrs. Byron Pond of Jarvis. To the strains of the Bridal Chorus played by Mrs. Muriel Hunsinger, the bridal party entered the living-room and took their places beneath an arch of pink and white streamers centered by a cluster of wedding bells and banked with ferns.

The bride was dressed in a floor-length gown of triple sheer, with full-length veil and coronet of orange blossoms, and carried American Beauty roses. She was attended by her sister, Blanche, who wore a matching gown of pale pink with fingertip veil and carrying Johanna Hill roses. The groom was supported by Paul Bartlett, also of Jarvis. Rev. J. S. Burn officiated.

During the signing of the register, Mrs. W. Lang and Miss Verna Martindale of York sang "I Love You Truly."

After the ceremony the guests, including only the immediate families and intimate friends of the bride and groom, sat down to the wedding dinner, which was served by four girl pupils from S.S. No. 5, Walpole, where the bride taught.

After receiving the congratulations and best wishes of the guests the bridal couple left amid showers of rice and confetti for a short honeymoon, the bride travelling in a grey tailored suit with rose accessories. On their return they will reside at the home of the groom in Walpole.

NO TRUTH IN REPORT STATES LOCAL M.P.P.

Mr. Eric Cross, M.P. for Haldimand-Norfolk denied absolutely the rumour that he and Controller Lewis is Duncan of Toronto were working for the formation of a second Liberal party in Ontario.

Mr. Cross stated his case in the Legislature last week, and while he stated he was not in agreement with Premier Hepburn on some points, there was absolutely no foundation to the rumour, he is associated with any other Liberal Group.

On The Farm Front

BRIEF NOTES FOR THE BUSY FARMER

There is no excuse for using poor seed at any time, much less during war time. The heavy precipitation of rain and snow last week, is giving Haldimand farmers, who have not yet cleaned their seed a chance to get this done. Clean, plump seed of the right variety can be responsible for an increase of at least one-quarter to one-third in the yield.

v v v

The spray calendars for 1942 have been issued now for some weeks and copies may be obtained from the Agricultural Representative at Cayuga. No fruit grower should be without the two calendars for (1) apples and (2) stone fruits and bush fruits.

v v v

An increase in the acreage of corn is indicated for 1942. Haldimand farmers are evidently finding the value of corn both as a silage crop and as a grain crop. During the series of meetings in February it was shown that next to hay and pasture, corn is one of the cheapest crops to produce, from the standpoint of total digestible nutrients per acre.

v v v

Results of research work at Ottawa show that the cost of producing a ton of digestible nutrients from various crops is as follows:

Improved Pasture mixture	$ 5.66
Natural Bluegrass pasture	7.57
Alfalfa hay	11.83
Red Clover Hay	13.50
Red Clover silage	15.49
Corn silage	19.16
Mangels	33.19
Oats	36.81

None of these crops should be neglected as most of them are essential for a well balanced feeding program but the value of corn is very evident from a cost basis.

v v v

As a grain crop too, corn has a very definite place in our present day set-up. A yield of 40 bushels of shelled corn (which incidentally is the average given for Haldimand county according to the latest statistics) is equal to 2240 pounds of grain per acre. To produce an equal number of pounds to the acre of oats the yield would have to be almost 66 bushels which in turn would be 30 bushels greater than the average for the county for this crop to say nothing of the percentage of hull to be found in the oat crop.

v v v

In the case of hybrid corn the yields have been much higher than that quoted above. The average as given in the 1941 progress report by the O.A.C. Guelph, is better than 60 bushels per acre.

v v v

In further support of hybrid corn comes the report from the United States that the acreage of hybrid corn has increased from 486,000 in 1935 to 32,511,000 in 1941. During the same period the total area sown to corn was reduced by ten million acres. In spite of this the total yield of corn during the same period has increased by more than 600 million bushels.

v v v

Great exception has been taken in many quarters to the growing of corn on account of the labour involved. When looked at in the above light and taking into consideration the costs and yields it is doubtful if other grains can compete or, at least with it, as after all, this is in reality the business way of considering the crop.
