HONEY CROP NOT HEAVY

With sugar now rationed to half a pound per week per person, honey has an added value, for it can be used in many ways to replace sugar. The honey crop this year is not too promising however, according to J. W. Hodgson, local Apiarist. In some sections he states the crop is a complete failure, while in others sections it is not up to standard.

A Weekly Review Of National Affairs

(By "Spectator")

Ottawa — Parliament which is swinging around the curve towards adjournment at the end of the week has still heavy ground before it. Estimates of departments as well as final stages of the budget and the now renowned bill 80 on manpower mobilization have still to be passed at the time of writing. With morning sittings however parliament working under full draft will get through a great deal of work. The session has already run a full six months and adjournment will be welcomed. There is little light heartedness discernible in the proceedings of parliament these days. It would of course be strange if it were otherwise. With the anxieties of the war hanging like a cloud above the members no one is inclined to labor any inconsequential point in debatae. It needs no particular stretch of the imagination to hear in the house of commons at Ottawa the echo of the distant rattle and thunder of the guns along the Don river and in the Egyptian desert. Certainly these sounds with all that they imply are in the ears of the members and are potent forces in debate eliminating frivialities and holding members to the main issues of the hour.

In the minds aslo of the members are war events which are geographically nearer home. On Thursday of last week there was a debate of two hours on a motion by J. S. Roy, member for Gaspe that there should be a secret session to discuss recent sinkings in the gulf of St. Lawrence. He was supported by R. B. Hanson, Conservative leader and M. J. Coldwell, head of the C.C.F. party and others. The Prime Minister pointed out that there have been a great many ships lost off Nova Scotia. It would be surprising if the war didn't bring other acts of war both east and west. He intimated that a sense of proportion would prevent the government calling a secret session whenever a boat was lost. He urged members who are in possession of any information about incidents on the coast to give the information to the minister of naval service. If Mr. Roy and Mr. Hanson had information would they kindly tell the minister? Then the government would decide whether a secret session was warranted. In relation to giving out information in the open house Canada has a similar policy to that followed in Britain. Announcements of sinkings are withheld so that useful information may not be given the enemy. The United States has a different policy. It publishes sinkings as they occur.

Before parliament adjourns a discussion will be held on the Hong Kong report. Censorship prevents the publication in newspapers of the letter written by Col. George Drew to the government when the charges against him under the Defence of Canada Regulations were withdrawn. The letter on advice of counsel was not tabled in the commons. The point that arises is: to what extent can members of parliament use the contents of the letter in discussions in the House? The inquiry on Hong Kong was held in camera. Certain evidence was withheld from publication, including documents from the British government. This secret evidence will not be available to members. There are sure to be some sharp exchanges in the house if as Mr. Coldwell suggests he will use the Drew letter as the basis of his speech on the Hong Kong report. Government spokesmen have taken the stand that the sharp criticisms of the report are criticisms of the Chief Justice of Canada. Sir Lyman Duff, who was commissioner in the inquiry while opposition members club mit is criticism of the commissioner not of the chief justice and point to attacks that have been made in the British house on reports of commissions held by judges of high standing.

A number of members during discussions on changes in excise taxes in the budget referred to the alarm ing increase in the country's liquor bill. Mr. Ilsley stated the liquor question was a matter for the provinces under the constitution and that higher duties would bring greater illicit traffic. Mr. Hanson, Mr. Casselman, Mr. Coldwell and others showed concern over the expansion of liquor consumption, now reaching a total of $250,000,000 annually.

During the debate on the budget G. G. McGeer, liberal member for Vancouver and Arthur Slaght Liberal from Parry Sound give interesting and advanced views on monetary reform, which did not entirely accord with the opinions of the minister of finance. Mr. Slaght believed that the country could turn out $1,200,000,000 of new money, while still maintaining the price ceiling. Mr. Ilsley answered that the issue of that amount of money would "blow the price ceiling to kingdo mcome." Mr. McGeer told the house that a number of monetary reforms which had been considered "dangerous innovations" seven or eight years ago were now accepted as part of the national economy. Among these were the creation of a publicly-owned national central bank and the removal of the gold reserve limitations on the issue of paper currency. Mr. McGeer said that while realising the danger of inflation, he believed controls in operation would prevent inflation if the government made some use of currency issues to aid in financing the war. It was later decided to hold a secret session on Saturday, July 18th.

ROSEBUDS

— By Margaret N. Birch —

Sweet little yellow rosebud
By the side of a little grey house
One cannot see you so often
That memories you fail to arouse.

You seem to revive some old picture
Somewhere back in the mind,
The notes of some sad sweet music
Somewhere in the past, left behind

The raindrops that hang on your petals
Seem to remind me of tears,
Veiling the golden sunset
Somewhere back in the years.

Again the sweet perfume recalling
A passion within my breast
That fills my heart with a longing
For some sad sweet dream of the past.

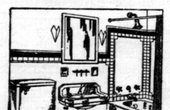
DURO WATER SYSTEMS DEALER

We have to face Changed Conditions

THIS year will be a difficult one for your friend, the Duro Dealer. He is not able to supply the demand for Duro Pumps because present stocks are limited and shortage of materials curtails production. Besides, our factory facilities have been diverted to a great extent to war production.

Your Duro Dealer may be able to supply a few Duro Pumps to those whose farm production can be increased with running water — but he will be mainly interested in servicing pumps now in use to keep them in the best possible running condition.

Remember that your Duro Pump brings water, under pressure, right into your kitchen, bathroom, laundry and barns. It saves many steps, much time and energy. Keep it in good condition by having your Duro Dealer check it over and replace worn parts. He will gladly estimate the cost of putting it into first class condition.



EMCO Quality Plumbing Fixtures are still available to meet your requirements.

WATERFORD

July 21 — On Thursday evening a large number of friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Herchel Miller gathered at the home of a neighbor, Mr. John Schooley and daughter Thelma in the form of a surprise, when games were played for the early part of the evening. In due time Mrs. Wm. Crandall asked the guests of honor to come to the centre of the room when she read a very appropriate address and Miss Schooley and Mrs. Fred Westerick presented Mr. and Mrs. Miller with a lovely comforter and mirror along with some other useful gifts after which the bride and groom very ably responded. Following much mirth and merriment a delicious lunch was served by Miss Schooley, Mrs. Geo. May er, Mrs. Schmouse and daughter Geraldine.

Mrs. Frank Scott and Keith are spending some time in Toronto with relatives.

A meeting of the members of the Baptist Church was held in the church on Monday evening to accept the resignation of their pastor, Rev. A. J. Fromow, and a pulpit committee was appointed. Dr. Fromow has accepted a call to Paris.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

Batter up! Baseball games in the back yard are excellent material for any picture diary of life at your home.

HAVE you ever thought of devoting one section of your snapshot album to pictures taken around the home? It might be titled, "The Four Seasons At The Smiths." And right flow would be an excellent time to start such a picture diary. What better time is there to begin anything than this season of the year?

How would such a section be handled? Well, I'd suggest that you commence with a few general views of the house. That would start your collection by showing your home and where the series to follow is taking place.

Next, it would be a wise plan to introduce the principal characters in the picture story you're going to tell. Make a good informal portrait of every member of the family — including yourself. Then you can turn your full attention to picturing the four seasons at your home.

For instance, this year your family has probably started a Victory Garden. Make some pictures of that, with Dad and the rest of the family working in it—perhaps admiring the vegetables.

Next, why don't you show the family busy about the home grounds? Everything that happens at your home — from cutting the lawn to washing the windows — is suitable subject matter for snapshots. And if you photograph revealing activities of that sort, you'll soon create a broad picture of your family's mode of life.

Finally, carry the project right on through the seasons. Jot down picture ideas as you see them, or better yet, have your camera ready for action and make the picture right away. If you take advantage of all your opportunities, you'll have a truly enviable collection of home snapshots by the time summer arrives again.

"A Prayer"

O Almighty Lord of Hosts, it is Thine own most gracious promise that when Thy people shall go out to battle against their enemies by the way that Thou shalt lead them, and shall call upon Thee for Thy Holy Help, Thou wilt hear their prayers in heaven and judge their cause. In assured trust of this, Thy promise, we present our supplication before Thee. O Lord, judge Thou our cause; judge Thou between us and our cruel enemies. Thou seest Lord, that they first conspired to root us out, and by mighty preparations at this present time, seek our ruin still. That which armeth us is neither desire of enlarging our own borders, nor thirst of blood, nor rapine of spoil, but only the just defence of our nation and of our Allies. O Lord, maintain Thou our right, and be Thou enemy to our enemies. Great is their malice, and great is the mischief they intend against us. Let not the wicked have their desire. O Lord, we put not our trust in any strength of our arms, but our eyes look unto Thee. We know, O Lord, the battle is Thine, and with Thee it is nothing to save by many or by few; for that except Thou bless with counsil the courage we shall not prevail, and all these are in Thine hands to give or to withhold. Help us, O Lord God, for we rest on Thee, and in Thy Name we go forth against these mighty preparations. Go forth, O Lord, with our forces by sea and by land and by air. Cover their heads in the day of battle. Let Thy Faith make them valiant, and put to flight the forces of the enemy. Hear us, O Lord, for the glory of Thy Name, and for Thy loving Mercy and Thy Truth's sake.— Amen.

A CANADIAN SOLDIER'S LETTER TO HIS MOTHER

Somewhere in England

Dear Mom:

I am very enthusiastic about Army Camp Life! We lie around in the morning until 5 o'clock. This, of course, gives us plenty of time to get washed, shaved, dressed, make our bunks, etc. by 5.10. After we are reasonably chilled, we grope our way through the darkness to the Mess Hall. Here we have plenty of breakfast consisting of unidentified liquid and choice of white or rye crusts.

After gorging ourselves with the delicious repast, we waddle back to the barracks. We have nothing to do until 7. o'clock, so we just sit around and scrub toilets, mop floors, wash windows and pick up all the cigarette butts and match sticks within a radius of 150 feet of our barracks.

Soon the Sergeant comes in and says "Come on out in the sun, kids." So we get out and bask in the wonderful sunshine. Of course, we stand in six inches of mud. To limber up we do a few so-called simple exercises like touching your toes with both feet off the ground, or grabbing yourself by the hair and holding yourself out at arms length.

At 8. o'clock we put on a light pack and start walking to the mountains. The light pack is not to be confused with the heavy pack. The light pack includes a gun, bayonet, canteen, canteen cup, mess kit, overcoat cartridge belt, first aid kit, pup tent, MacGee tent blanket or two as well. Carrying my pack I weigh 227 pounds (I weighed 140 pounds when I left), so you see how easy and agreeable it is to romp in the sunshine among the mountains.

An observation car follows us as we march and picks up the fellows who faint. The boys who fall out in the march are treated very well, they give them six months in the guard house, but they do not have to face a court martial. At 12 noon, those men who can limp to the Infirmary, (where they are divided into two classes) those who have Athlete's Foot, and those who have colds. If you have Athlete's Foot, you get your throat swabbed out with iodine, if you have a cold, you get your throat swabbed out with iodine. This is also common treatment for appendicitis, pneumonia and poison ivy. The iodine is diluted because they have sent all the good iodine to Russia. Anyone who claims he has neither a cold nor Athlete's Foot is sent to the Guard House for impersonating an officer.

I am very popular in the Infirmary. I told them I have a cold and Athlete's Foot as well. What I really have is Gastric Ulcers, but I know when to keep my mouth shut. Well, that's all I have to write about tonight. I've got to rush to the Mess Hall. We're having Honey tonight, O Boy!

Your loving son,
FELIX

"The Other Side of the Cloud Silver?"

— By C. D. Clarke —

"Leeze me on drink, it gies us mair
Than either school or college;
It kindles wit, it waukens lair,
It pangs us fu' o' knowledge."
—Burns

There are many of us who find, when needed most, expression becomes a bit elusive difficult. You find yourself conversing with a familiar topic know the in-and-outs yet, somehow, the ability to get across your point is not within your grasp unless you have the added stimulus of deep enthusiasm, anger, or even drink. You specializers you know what I mean you have your periods when under the stimulant of one of these things, your work becomes more clear and your deeds the better therefore curious yet we know it's true.

We knew a reporter who just could not get fire into his stories unless he had a few drinks but it soon became the old story A drink when things were good. A drink when things were fair A drink when things were bad. Until the stimulant was no longer effective and a splendid mind was ruined.

Yet this is the answer to why so many of the most brilliant men Mechanics, Pilots, Writers, Orators take to drink. It is not at first because they like the taste, because alcohol is not a possessor of a palate pleasing taste.

A prominent authority on the subject says: "Partly it is, no doubt, for the delights of boon companionship, and through force of example and social custom. But largely, also, it is for the exhilaration of their being. The stimulant gives them an intensified life; for a while it kindles the powers. (until by and by, as we noted above, it dazes and deadens them). It quickens the blood and the wits. It inflames the imagination. It loosens the tongue and makes the lame speaker eloquent. It seems to exhalt a man's being and makes his life vivid, raising him above himself, peopling his brain with glorious ideas, making him feel as if he were half a god."

Burns knew only too much about it as says the little verse with which we preface this thumb nail sketch. But turn the cloud and we find that it is not silver on both sides for every burst of passion, no matter what it produces, is paid for, to the ounce, at the finish.

Those men who made great names for themselves and who combined their work with the pleasures of the bottle are uncounted fortunately now and far too soon six feet under there are ters is that the lesson be not lost on us!

It is very painful to see young men absorbing such stimulant, night after night, as a means of meeting the tasks of tomorrow yet is is being done so we issue this little warning and trust that some will take heed. It's nice to see a well executed piece of work but it's far nicer to have it done by you alone and not by you, in association with such things as we have made mention of.

CERTO is Pectin Extracted from Fruit

● When pectin is used in making jam or jelly, the Wartime Prices and Trade Board Order No. 150 allows you to use sugar not in excess of one and one-quarter pounds of sugar for each pound of fruit. On the basis that "fruit" means "unprepared" fruit, this allows you to make your jams and jellies the Certo way which gives you approximately two-thirds more jam or jelly from the same amount of fruit.
