Weekly War Commentary

Specially Written for the Record

By Canadian Press Staff Writer

Once again the Japanese army in China is preparing for a spring campaign to knock that nation out of the war. But this time the Japanese are not lacking in the Allies, who are preparing to meet them with a vengeance.

President Roosevelt declared in his broadcast address on February 12: "I am confident that the Japanese will be taken to the task of driving the invaders from the soil of China."

Important actions will be taken in the skies over China, and in the skies over Japan itself. There are many roads which lead right to Tokyo.

The need of maintaining this vital service is just as essential as the making of munitions, the growing of foodstuffs, or the building of ships. The problem that is difficult to understand is that it is not a matter of money. The money is needed for the armed forces and for the maintenance of the blood donor service.
