

This is the Jap airfield at Munda—on jungled New Guinea Island in the Solomons—where American forces are bombing, shelling and attacking by land. U. S. troops at newly-won Viru Harbor, farther south on New Georgia, are advancing on this Jap position, while artillery on nearby Rendova Island has Munda area under fire.

Have You Heard?

A nervous girl was chatting to her vicar about fishing, on which she was keen. "Did you manage to get any fishing while you were away?" inquired the vicar. "Oh, yes," replied the girl, "quite a lot—mostly perch and whub, though they're not particularly nice to eat. Which do you prefer, vicar?" he asked, "chereb or pub?"

How Can I??

Q. How can I cover scratches in walnut furniture?
A. Cover the scratches with tincture of iodine. Then polish in the usual way.
Q. How can I make a good varnish remover?
A. Dissolve thoroughly one quart of good caustic soda in three quarts of lukewarm water and apply with a coarse sponge. Or, try two parts of spirits of ammonia to one of turpentine, apply with a rag.

Q. How can I remove disagreeable odors from the house?
A. Burn sugar or dried orange peel on a pie pan or tin shelf. This can be done over a low gas flame or electric plate, and all disagreeable odors will disappear.

It was the first day of a new term, and the teacher asked a small girl in her class—a new pupp—what her father's name was.

"Daddy," replied the child. "Yes, I know," said the teacher. "But, what does your mother call him?"

"She doesn't call him anything," was the quick reply. "She likes him."

Ethel: "She's sorry because that she married him, I'll wager."
Mabel: "The idea! How can you say that? He thinks her a perfect angel, and treats her—" appear. Q. How can I keep fruit jars airtight?

"As though she really were one. He doesn't try her anything to wear."

A. They can be made absolutely airtight by dipping the tops into paraffin.

Q. How can I prevent the petty shell crabs from softening?
A. Prepare the petty shells ahead of time and when needed warm them in the oven. The shells should not be filled until just before they are ready to be served, or the crabs will soften.

WHAT SCIENCE IS DOING

WIRE WRAPPINGS
The big naval rifles such as are used on battleships may be wound with wire. The purpose of such winding is to strengthen the gun's resistance to the tremendous pressure exerted by the charge that propels the projectile.

In Great Britain, where winding guns with wire is a general practice, the wire used is one-fourth inch wide and .06 inch thick and has a breaking strength of over 100 tons per square inch.

The number of layers of wire (in the case of a 15-inch gun) varies from 20 turns at the muzzle to 79 turns at the breech. In the making of a single gun of use of some 22 tons of wire is involved, and the total length of the wire in the neighborhood of 186 miles. The blanket of wire is usually applied outside the tube or lining and the first layer of wire is of such size as to be barely large enough to fit snugly when red hot. On cooling and shrinking over the tube, a casting is shrunk on to it and the winding is completed.

It has been estimated that the wire wrappings provide more than double the strength of the steel in the hoops of an ordinary built-up gun. However, wire wound guns tend to lack longitudinal strength and rigidity. As a result of this lack the gun muzzle may droop and "whip" when the gun is fired, somewhat decreasing the accuracy of the weapon.

Other types of big guns include built-up guns consisting of two or more concentric cylinders shrunk one on the other, and cold-worked guns, made up from a single cylinder with a bore slightly less than the desired caliber. The bore is enlarged to the correct size by the use of a hydraulic pressure, with the result that the inner layers of the metal are put under tension by the contracting force of the outer layers just as though a jacket had been shrunk on.

Airgraph Carriers In Last Century
Curiously enough, the airgraph idea isn't new. A similar method was used in the days of the Franco-Prussian war of 1870-1. Messages were printed on a board, and then the board was photographed on film. At the other end, the messages were photographed on a second board, and the messages were delivered. The airgraph was used to send messages from the air to the ground, and the ground to the air.

Radio Reporter

It has always been said in radio circles that about the quickest way to find out whether a program has an extensive listening audience or not, is to make a very obvious mistake. . . . have the announcer give the wrong time. . . . describe Winston Churchill as the Prime Minister of Czechoslovakia. . . . make a jibing remark about some particular political party, or religious sect. . . . or something like that. When these things happen on the radio, listeners who couldn't be induced to phone or write a radio station on the chance of winning a $50,000 cash prize, rush to their telephones, or grab pen and pencil with which to assail the unfortunate announcer who has committed the error.

CFRB was recently the target of a message which consisted of a following of telephone calls from a man named "J. R. Trickey in 'Spits to Win' program, on the air every Monday evening, 8.30 to 9 o'clock. You've probably heard the show, a quiz affair, in which the studio and its audience compete for valuable cash prizes. The question was "With what animal was the Scottish writer Robert Burns associated? . . . and the answer acknowledged correct by the master of ceremonies was "a spider." Shades of Scottish history! It only took a few seconds before the telephone began ringing at CFRB, and irate Scotsmen in rapid succession pointed out that it was Robert Bruce and not Robert Burns who gained immortality from watching a spider.

While we're on a subject suggested by quiz shows, it seems appropriate to mention that there have been fewer summertime casualties among them than among any other types of radio entertainment. For instance, all the popular quiz shows on CFRB are carrying right through the summer months, including "Spits to Win," "Treasure Trail," "Super Quiz," "What's the Answer?" and "Easy Peasy." Even though the temperatures climb high into the nineties, these shows are heard with great interest by their audiences. It all goes to show that when there's the chance of winning a few free dollars, Mr. and Mrs. and the kids will leave the discomforts of humidity and heat.

Apparently also there are lots of people who will forsake the comfort of their verandahs, and go inside for a load of quiz questions. . . . and maybe the chance of picking up the jackpot.

Radio's most-listened-to program in North America, the Grand Theatre, is now off the air for a few weeks. It is being replaced by two half-hour programs. The first half hour, 9 to 9.30 Monday night, CFRB, romance fills the air in dramatic form. . . . followed by a musical presentation, 9.30 to 10 p.m., the Broadway Band Box, with the currently popular singing star, Frank Sinatra, heading the vocal.

For several weeks past radio stations across Ontario have been co-operating in the effort to get temporary workers to go out on the farm. The CBC and privately owned stations who have been working together in the national agricultural interests appear to have done quite an effective job. The first half hour, 9 to 9.30 Monday night, CFRB, romance fills the air in dramatic form. . . . followed by a musical presentation, 9.30 to 10 p.m., the Broadway Band Box, with the currently popular singing star, Frank Sinatra, heading the vocal.

You've no doubt heard of the great four-motored Lancaster bombers which have been blasting away at Germany and Italy these last few months. Lancaster bombers are now being built in Canada. The first one to be built in the Dominion will be christened July 23. The R.C.A.F. will celebrate the event as the highlight of the "Comrade in Arms" broadcast, 10.15 p.m. that same evening over the coast-to-coast network of the CBC.

A Farm Wife Chats To Women

Hullo, everybody—and a special hello to farm women everywhere! Here is a brand new column for you—one in which you and I will meet together to laugh a little, talk a little, and perhaps even swap a little—who knows? Now don't think this column is just another story, because it is real—written by a woman who knows, and has experienced, the same problems, the same hardships, and the same joys that have come to you, day after day and year after year.

You may think I am a stranger to you—perhaps I am—but I hope I won't be a stranger very long. However, let me tell you this: YOU are not a stranger to me. No, for if you have lived all your life on a farm, then I know you. If you have sometimes lived in a small town or city, I know you. If the Old Country gave you birth and your heart just aches over the devastation of well-loved places, then I know you very indeed. Or if you come from the prairie, I too, know something of the heartache that grips you when you think of the prairie that you know, of that intangible something that you cannot describe but which you know to be the soul of the West.

If you have a son, a husband, or brother in the Army, Navy or Air Force, I know only too well the anxiety that is yours. I know how you practically live from one mail time to another, and how long the day when the expected letter doesn't arrive.

I know your uneasiness if you have a daughter in the city—trusting her, yet fearful of dangers which even you can hardly visualize. But if sorrow has already come to you through this war; if the War Office has sent that last of all messages to your home, then I do not presume to say I know you. I can only ask to sympathize with you in your grief and trust that in some way, unforeseen at present, healing will come to your stricken heart.

But now to our ordinary, everyday life as we know it. The chickens are fed, the eggs gathered for the last time today, and now here I am sitting by the front door of our old Colonial farm home. The air is still sultry but clouds in the western sky are at least giving some protection from the sun's blistering rays.

And what do I see from where I am sitting? Well, in the immediate foreground there is a lawn that needs cutting, shrubs that need trimming and weeds that need pulling. It doesn't sound too attractive, does it? But then you see this isn't a model farm—far from it. But, model or otherwise, I wonder if there is a farm anywhere in Ontario where the work is really done up to date, as it should be. I know it isn't here because at the present time Partner and I are seen on hundreds and — and milking twelve cows without benefit of a milking machine.

Yesterday I came home from an Institute meeting, changed into an old dress and went out to the hayfield to help—that is to say, I was on the wagon building the load while Partner pitched. On years ago I used to help in the field a lot and so I thought what I had done before I could do again. But, in spite of my willingness, I soon discovered that, like the old gray mare, "I ain't what I used to be." I found it hard to keep my balance. Every time the horses stepped up I promptly fell down. Scrambling to my feet again was quite some job. But as I remarked to Partner yesterday, what I lack in bounce I now make up for in weight. And that should help keep the load on the wagon—providing, of course, that I don't go off the end of it!

When I started to write this column, the farm news was very quiet. Now the day we have been waiting for has come. Anxious days lie ahead but, however great our worry, don't, for goodness sake, let us indulge in self-pity. To be sure our boys are in danger—they have to be, even your boy and mine. But this is total war, and in total war there are two fronts—the battlefield and the home front. You have heard that before. Now we have the opportunity to show that we not only heard but realize that WE have a part to play. Let us prove that we can take it on the chin—work, save, give of our very best to back up our boys at the front.
