UNION SERVICES

IT WILL be noted in the Church Notes this week, that during the winter months, the evening services in Wesley United and Knox Presbyterian Churches will be united. This action may have been the result of the plea of the Coal Administrator to save fuel. If such is the case the Coal Administrator's order will provide two benefits. It will save the unnecessary use of a certain amount of coal and it will also demonstrate that two large auditoriums need not be used to praise The Lord, when one offers ample accomodation.

There can be no real objection to the union of the two congregations for the Sunday evening service and much can be gained. It is quite possible that the adherents of both faiths will come to realize that their devotions are based the same sound principle. While it may be too much to expect, it may even be the forerunner of a movement for all of the protestant faiths to unite as one when they gather in sombre reflection of the many good and gracious gifts poured down upon them daily, and to tender their thanks and devotion to the un-

VVVV A FINE BANQUET-

THE LADIES of Knox Church are to be congratulated on the very fine banquet they provided for the Victory Loan gathering on Monday night. There was no evidence in any quarter that ration laws had been broken, although undoubtedly many of the ladies made some sacrifice from their personal stores to provide such a complete repast.

The ladies also did a fine job in public relations work. All parts of Haldimand County was represented, and each man will remember the fine dinner he had at Knox Church in Jarvis. It is such things that help to uphold the name of any community, and certainly the ladies who provided the banquet did not fail on that VVVV

"THE SALVATION ARMY IS DIFFERENT"

THESE WERE the words of the late Sir Edward Beatty when advising against The Salvation Army uniting with other organizations in an appeal for funds, undoubtedly a praiseworthy course for bodies of similar purpose and design. One hears them every day as people note the distinctiveness of this Organization.

Let us look at these differences:-The Salvation Army is not the hobby or pet of rich patrons. It is a product of the peo-It began its service with the poorest and ost depraved elements of the population of Old London, and it still operates to bring hope and new life to the outcast and downtrodden. as well as to serve people of all degrees.

Business, Education, the Church and Statecraft have not only acknowledged its value but have given their wholehearted support, confidence and influence to help it in its service of social amelioration and regeneration.

It is different in its attitude to politics. It has no political power and seeks none. It has never been accused of seeking or using political influence. Its influence is all social and moral. Its friends are all classes and parties. It is different socially. Its Officers surrender social status and claim prestige even in the highest ranks. It is different in regard to professional prestige. Salvation Army Officers are often experts in social service, criminology, public relations and the arts of healing, but no prestige is claimed for it on this account, nor do these highly trained Officers, often holding high degrees, claim any better place or stand of their brethren and receive their remuneration on the same scale. The Army is different in its national organization. The Army is directed by its Comnissioner, whose orders are obeyed with alacrity, because the Officers have voluntarily accepted their work for life and they hope for noth ing more than the privilege of giving the ulti-mate in service. Yes, The Army is different, and how!

A farmer and a professor were sharing a seat on a train. It was getting lonesome, so the farmer started a conversation and they soon became a friendly pair.

"Let's have a game of riddles to pass the time," said the professor. "If I have a riddle you can't guess, you give me one dollar, or vice

THE EPIC OF FREE ENTERPRISE-

- By Lewis Milligan -

THIS IS an age of synthetics. We have synthetic rubber and any number of artifinaterials which science has developed to take the place of the natural product, and we are told that many of them are just as good as if not better than, the real thing. These and numerous other inventions are the products of human ingenuity and enterprise, stimulated by

That kept the other fellow from sitting back and enjoying a monopoly and urged him to try to go one better still.

That is free enterprise, and without it, we would still be in the horse-and-buggy days. Many of our inventions were in the first place regarded as mere curiosities and scientific play things. It was not until some enterprising business men realized their possibilities as profitable selling propositions that those playthings of science were developed and introduced as the necessities of modern life. They created the demand by advertising and salesmanship — high pressure, if you like; but there is no progress

When the history of the past fifty years of progress on the North American Continent comes to be written, it will be a great epic of free enterprise. It is beyond all question the most amazing period in human history. And it was a period in which human freedom pre- author, Sir Charles G. D. vailed as it rever had prevailed before.
