judge. You may recall that last Sunday we had a chimney fire that n itself was a bad beginning.

Monday was more or less of a hub-bub getting our son away again on his trip back to Van-Tuesday I spent the whole afternoon getting a permanent and I can't think of any job that dislike more than that. Wednesday, after my ordinary work was done. I sorted wool, tied up parcels and prepared my war work report ready for our Institute meeting the next day.

I was determined that this time I would arrange things so that I didn't have to rush around at the

. . . Thursday-the day of the meeting—a visitor arrived before we had even finished breakfast. It was eleven-thirty before she left. I was just about frantic. There was I with never a dish or a milk pail washed, nothing ready for dinner, and two chickens to draw and pack so that I could leave them at the transport office on my way to the meeting at 2.30. I started in on the chickenswhich Partner had picked that morning—and the grocer arrived with our weekly order. I got him attended to when another car drove in. This ime it was a man come to borrow the Institute chairs which we take charge of between meetings. Then I un-wrapped the fish that the grocer had brought, and which I wanted for dinner, and it was frozen colid. To cut a long story short I arrived at the meeting ten min-utes late, but how I ever got there at all is something I will never know.

Friday — ah, that was the climax! It was a cold, dull day—the sort of day when you feel you must keep at some sort of active work otherwise the areariness of the weather would get you down. So I started to houseclean the pantry. Now the pantry, I should teli you, opens off the dining-room and I knew I would be tracking in and out so I didn't bother to clean up the dining-room at all. Well, you know what it is like to clean a pantry-dishes here and there all over the place. Pots and pans, cans and containers are put wherever you can find room for them, just so long as you can get elbow room to work. I got along fine in the forenoon. THE SIN OF COVETOUSNESS Exodus 20:17; Luke 12:13-34 PRINTED TEXT GOLDEN TEXT-Thou shalt not covet . . . anything that is thy neighbor's. Exodus 20:17. for you. I Peter 5:7.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING Time.-The Ten Commandments vere delivered in 1445 B.C.; our Lerd's teachings concerning covetousness in this lesson were uttered in December, A.D. 29. Place.-The Ten Commandents were given on Mount Sinai; the passage taken from Luke is from a discourse delivered in Peraea, on the east of the Jordan

Sin of Covetousness "And one out of the multitude said unto him, Teacher, bid my brother divide the inheritance with me." The man was not a disciple but someone who wished to use God to further his own selfish interests. There are many who have no place in their lives for Christ, but are ready to enlist the support of His teaching when it is to their advantage to was only one thing to do-and hat was answer the door. So I did—and there was our minister! Ye gods! The fire was out in do so. "And he said unto him, Man, who made me a judge or a divider over you?" Our Lord came not the living-room—there was only one place to receive him and that was in the dining-room with its to act as an arbitrator, to interfere with the civil courts. He came to save men from their sins, Well, of course I apologised for the disorder but I also said I was to root out this spirit of covet-ousness. When a sinner is parglad to see him and if he could sit in a muddle and visit, then I doned his motive then is to share what he has and not to covet could, too. So we sat, and in a little while Partner joined us, and more. "And he said unto them, Take
