AVIATION WEATHER Weather is a factor of paramount importance in aviation. Canada has a highly efficiency meteorological service and at present its activities are devoted largely to providing forecasts for aviation. It is expected that the need for these facilities will continue in the post-war period when many of the main air routes will be in the skies over the Dominion.

On the Farm Front

BRIEF NOTES FOR THE BUSY FARMER - By Haldmann Harry - Egg quality while hard to maintain at any time during the year is doubly so during the hot weather we have been experiencing recently. As a result of this one grading station reports that while they ordinarily have about 80 per cent of their eggs into "A" grade, last week this had dropped to seventy per cent. No explanation was given. It is becoming more and more apparent that the hot weather brought about this condition.
