

Q. How can I remove wrinkles from a garment?

A. Moisten with common starch. Apply on the wrong side with a brush and then iron.

Q. How can I remove rust stains from aluminum?

A. Rub with a mixture of either unsoldered steel of brass, tin, or iron, can be removed by placing it while empty over a fire.

Q. How can I keep vegetables from losing their appetizing color when they are cooked?

A. Boil in water for only two long. Spinach, asparagus, cabbage, and cauliflower need more time to cook. Cooked peas, beans, turnips, and parsnips between 10 and 30 minutes.

Q. How can I bleach white clothes?

A. By washing in the usual way and then soaking over night in one-half gallon of clear water, to which add two teaspoonfuls cream of tartar.

Q. How can I go over scratches on a piece of paper so that they will not show?

A. By masticating a scrap of the paper which has been saved, and rubbing it over the surface with a pinning with a sharp knife. Apply the coloring to the scratch, and rub it. The white will scarcely be noticeable.

One of the most curious animals in Australia is the platypus, which seems to be a mixture of several animals. It can live either on land or in the water. It has the fur of a seal, the bill of a duck, and is web-footed. It has short legs with five webbed toes on each foot, and the male has a horny spur on his heel. Unlike the duck, it has nostrils at the extreme end of its bill. Although clumsy on land, it is a fine swimmer, and snails and shell fish compose its food. It lays eggs like a turtle, but carries its young in a pouch and suckles them.

Now... here's reliable home-improved medication that works 2 ways at once to relieve distress of child's cold—even while he sleeps! Just rub throat, chest and back with Vicks VapoRub at bedtime. Instantly VapoRub starts to relieve coughing spasms, ease muscular soreness or tightness, and invites restful, comforting sleep. Often by morning, most of the misery is gone.

For baby's sake, try VapoRub tonight. It must be good, because when colds strike, most mothers use Vicks VapoRub.

"Oh, dear, I wish so too," Peggy cried desperately. She didn't tell Maxine of Stanley's hope to save it by late afternoon. That did not seem very promising now. Why hadn't he waited until later to go in town for his bags, and stayed here and looked for the ring? That ring is a hoodoo, she thought. First I bend it, then—"Maxine, I'm going into town. Never mind why. I'll be back soon." She ran to the kitchen to tell William to get her the pony cart, and in a few minutes she was rapidly down the road toward town with her hopes running very high.

But, she returned home and hour and a half later more in the depths than ever. The ring that she had bought for Harry's birthday was never making like Harry's, had already been sold when she reached Marshville.

"I wanted to see the man who was wearing it," she had told the old man.

"Well now, Miss Peggy, that's mighty sure of you be. I'm not interested, and I wish you could have seen it. But it's sold already. I worked right straight through on it, and I was the first one to be interested on it yesterday. Jim said I was crazy. He wanted me to take my time at it. But once I got started I was in it, and I was in it, and I just got to keep going and get it finished. And it certainly was a fine ring. It was the ring of your friend's as two peas in a pod. I just had it finished, and I was standing here admiring it, when I saw some young man and a lady right off. Some girl surely is going to be happy to have that ring."

She had been so sure she had found a clue, that to discover she was too late was about the last straw. Why on earth hadn't she thought of it sooner?

"Where is everyone?" she asked Maxine on her return.

"Nancy is still upstairs. Gran came down about the time Stanley returned," he asked her if they might talk to him. They have been shut up in the parlor ever since."

"For heaven's sake, why?" Peggy demanded. "He doesn't think Gran knows anything about it, does he? She certainly seems to like him, Maxine. I was awfully surprised, weren't you? Gran and a detective."

There was a sudden sound in the upper hall. A door was being thing open and light footsteps were rushing

"Nancy," murmured Peggy. "Fidge must have come," whisking Maxine.

But Fidge had not come. It was only Nancy rushing out to them on the terrace with a motion picture magazine held open in her hand.

* * * *

"I suppose that was meant to be funny!" she snapped at Maxine as she passed her and handed the magazine to the astonished Peggy.

"Here is a picture of your sister," Mr. Newton. "She told her as if Peggy could fail to recognize the face that was smiling at her from the page." "Mr. Stanley Newton," Nancy read aloud, "one of the youngest and most outstanding directors of the motion picture industry today." So that "your delectable"

The Institution of Marriage
In our lesson we find the Pharisees again tempting Jesus with their questions. This time it is a question which would have been in order if asked in the proper manner, "Is it lawful for man to put away his wife for every cause?" Jesus appealed to their own knowledge with the question "Have ye not read that He which made them at the beginning made them male and female, and said for this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and be cleaved unto his wife: and they twain shall be one flesh?" There was no matter of doubt left, regardless of the laws of the church or laws of the land, for "What God hath joined together, let not man put asunder."

Mary and Martha
The certain village was Bethany which is quite close to Jerusalem. Martha seems to have been the head of the house where she lived with Mary her sister and Lazarus her brother. They apparently had a great love for the Lord, and Jesus must have enjoyed the fellowship of Martha and her family, for quite often he was found visiting there.

Jesus did not miss an opportunity to teach

There was much to be taken care of in the preparation of the meal for Jesus and his disciples, and Martha was very busy looking after everything. She became irritated seeing her sister Mary sitting at Jesus' feet and in a way blamed the Lord for her sister's attitude. In his own unique way the Lord rebuked Martha with words of kindness. "One thing is needful, and Mary hath chosen that good part which shall not be taken away from her." May we be in serving the Lord not become too busy to take time to sit at the Master's feet.

A Godly Home
Paul, writing to Timothy, thanks him for the fact that he continually remembered Timothy in prayer. He gave him the assurance that he would be remembered in his prayers, and that his remembrance, since it was Paul who put it into his heart to pray. He was a man of prayer, praying morning and day without ceasing. Paul was a man of consecration in prayer; he was not only praying for himself but for all the saints. Paul mentions that he served God from his forefathers. He was a Jew, the fact that he had been brought up under a strict religious upbringing. He was not saved in his upbringing, but following conversion it was a source of strength to him. Paul had a migrant love for Timothy, for his possession of the same faith which dwelt in his mother and grandmother. He urges Timothy to be up, or awakened, that gift he had received, the laying on of hands by Paul.

Shell-fire and flying-bomb attacks on Dover turned what was previously a dangerous job for the Wrens of the Dover Command into one of the most hazardous tasks of the war.

I learned their story in a naval machine shop in the forefront of "Hell-fire Corner." The shop was crammed with racks of live torpedoes. The "Torpedo Wrens" as the girls whose job it is to overhaul the Navy's torpedoes are known, were working as usual, testing the torpedoes and greasing them, and loading them by crane on to waiting trucks. This vital work never stopped, even during the fiercest bombardment of the area.

A single shell-splinter, I was told by an R. N. officer, would have been sufficient to have sent "the Wrens" sky-high. But the girls were very brave. They were magnificent," said the officer. They refused to take cover, except on one occasion when they were ordered to do so, and then they returned to work within 10 minutes.

2. When a girl is invited to supper after the theater, what would be suitable for her to order?
3. Should the husband or the wife send out informal dinner invitations?
4. If a knife, fork, or spoon is dropped while at the table, and one's hostess is serving the meal, who should pick up the dropped article?

ANSWERS

1. They may wear all black for a few weeks. Then the black may be modified, gradually with touches of white here and there. There is so much time that one should not be mourning, and some people do not use it at all. 2. A salad, a hot club sandwich, with coffee, and light pastry or fruit. 3. The wife should extend the invitations for her husband and herself. 4. The one who drops it should do so, and without saying any embarrassment. It is not necessary to make any reference to it. 5. Yes; a well-bred man will remove his hat when entering any office, even his own. 6. There are several forms, but "Mrs. Smith, may I present Mr. Allen?" is always correct.

FINE CUT CIGARETTE TOBACCO

There are many foods to please during holiday time and in former years our only worry was to have the time to make all the puddings and cakes we wanted. Now, we have to consider also the problem of rationed goods and prices. These recipes have been designed to fit all these requirements. Look them over, homemakers, and you'll find they quite fill the bill:

Christmas Pudding
(Serves 12)

½ cup sugar
½ cup butter
1 egg
1 cup molasses
1 cup sour milk
1 teaspoon soda, dissolved in sour milk
3 cups flour
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon cloves
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1 cup chopped raisins
½ cup currants or seedless
raisins
½ cup ground citron
½ cup candied cherries
1 teaspoon vanilla
Cream sugar and butter

Add egg slightly beaten. Add molasses, milk or flour alternately, a little at a time, blending well. Add fruit and vanilla. Pour into two greased 1-quart pudding molds. Cover and steam for 3 hours. Serve with hard or soft sauce.

If you want to splurge a bit and afford it, here is an old-fashioned, real English plum pudding:

English Plum Pudding
(Serves 12)

$\frac{1}{4}$  cup sifted cake flour
1 teaspoon salt
 $\frac{1}{4}$  teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon cinnamon
