Canadians—"Ach, What a Queer People"

Canadians have their own way of dealing with "the little boys" in the German army.

A Canadian war correspondent found this out when he met Mr. and Mrs. Camille Peterson, who lived in a village in Belgium during the German occupation.

A German baker's boy who appeared to have little liking for life in the Nazi army after his defeat in Normandy, told them: "These Canadians are funny people."

"When we were around Falaise, the Canadians captured one of my friends, a very young Frenchman," said the baker's boy. "Next day my friend came back. But what had those Canadians done to him? They had taken away his tunic shirt, and then they gave him a bar of chocolate and a note to our officer saying that Canadians did not fight little boys. Ach, what a queer people."

In the First World War tanks were almost exclusively an Allied weapon. The Germans had about fifty only when the war ended.

Canadian Workers And State Socialism

Speaking in Montreal a few weeks ago, Mr. C. P. McTaggart, who knows as much about labor and industrial matters as any man in this country, said a thing that Canadian workers might well ponder. It was that trade unionism could only function in a system of free enterprise.

The truth of this is so obvious, the wonder is that some Canadian labor leaders, allying themselves with a frankly socialist party like the C.P., do not seem to see it, comments the Ottawa Journal.

Under socialism, with the State running everything and controlling everything, workers would be, in effect, the wards of the State. Not then would they take their orders from their union leaders; they would take them from the State bureaucrats—men from people who would tell them when to work, where to work, and under what wages they should work.

That is what happened under the National Socialism of HITLER; that happened under the particular brand of socialism under MUS-SOLINI. It is what must happen if socialism is to function—under State Socialism anywhere.

The best of our labor leaders on this point know this; it has been expressed only recently in words of the utmost clarity by the WILLIAM GREEN, of the American Federation of Labor. It is time that it became known to some of our C.I.O. or C.C.L. chiefs here in Canada, with their talk of a C.C.F.-labor alliance.
