CHRONICLES of GINGER FARM

Will you sit and visit with me a while? We shall be quite comfortable. There is a nice wood fire blazing cheerily in the open grate. There now, you sit in this big red upholstered chair and I will take the other. It is a comfortable old chair, isn't it? It came from England, you know, a sort of family heirloom. So many times I have sat in that chair by just such another fire as we are sitting by tonight, only then it was in a home in a small English village—Partner's home, to be exact. Now the chair is here, but the old fireplace, and the house to which it belonged—what has happened to it? The old folks have long since gone... the house may have been razed. But we have our memories—even a bit can reduce memories to rubble.

You know it is a funny thing about those Old Country fire places. Visitors say you get your face roasted while you sit back, stays chilled to the bone. I suppose it is true, and yet, strangely enough, I never remember suffering with the cold at home. Maybe it was because we wore warmer, heavier clothing than in Canada—I used to wear hand-knit woolen stockings in winter. Or it may be that since we never knew any greater comfort we never missed it. I might have a different story to tell were I to visit England now.

Don't you love our Canadian autumn? The crisp, frosty mornings after the damp heat of the long summer days. The changing colours... the return of the feeling of completeness and thankfulness that "all is safely garnered in."

Already weather prophets are warning us what to expect—an early fall and a hard winter. Well, I'll worry about that when the time comes. In the meantime there is work to do—both at home and

DOROTHY TROWBRIDGE

CHAPTER VI
She turned and reached for the screen door but the young man stepping quickly forward held it open for her, and she brushed past him with head erect. To her dismay he followed her. Mr. Carver, behind a small glass window in the front of the store where he repaired watches, looked up as they entered.

"Back already?" he asked. "Well, I've got it all fixed for you." He glanced at the stranger who stood a little beyond Peggy. "Want something?" he added.

Peggy's heart was racing. What would the idiot say? "I broke the crystal in my watch and wondered if you would fix it for me," was the surprising reply. In spite of herself Peggy turned her head. Sure enough he held the watch in his hand and the crystal was cracked. Also he was smiling directly at Peggy. She was furious.

"Well, I'll be with you in just a minute," Mr. Carver said, turning to Peggy again. "I was just comparing that stone in the ring with one I have. Come around here and see it," motioning to her to come behind the counter.

On the table before him on a small piece of tissue paper lay a square-cut unset diamond.

"These two stones are just a match for each other," he continued. "I thought Jim had lost his senses when he bought that stone. We don't look like diamonds to me, cut that way. But since I saw this ring I know how they can look. I drew off the design here." He chuckled as he showed her a sketch on a sheet of paper. "You didn't know I was an artist, did you? Do you reckon it would be all right for me to copy this ring?" he asked wistfully.

"I think that would be all right," Peggy answered. Mr. Carver seemed so anxious to do it and Harry would never know, taking the ring which he carefully wrapped in tissue paper, she dropped it into her bag. "Thank you so much, Mr. Carver. How much do I owe you?"

"Oh, nothing at all, nothing at all. Thank you for bringing it in and having me get that design. Remember me to your grandmother," he called after her.

With a heavy "Thank you," Peggy hurried out without a glance at the other occupant of the store.

She found that she was still upset over her little visit with the jeweller. She realized that by turning her back on the watch she had been between them had been revealed, and unconsciously she wished for a "next time" that she could put the young man in his place.

Man's Superiority Over Animals
"And he departed thence and went into their synagogue: and he taught them, and they were astonished. And he said unto them, 'How marvelous that you should be so easily deceived!'"

Works of Necessity
"How much then is a man of more value than a sheep! Wherefore it is lawful to do good on the sabbath and saving him; it is a work of necessity."
"Then saith he to the man, stretch forth thy hand. And he stretched it forth; and it was restored whole, as the other. But the Pharisees went out, and took counsel against him, how they might destroy him." They were angry because Christ had broken one of their laws—not a law of God, but a law which they had made—because a man should not work on the sabbath day, he therefore should not ever attempt to relieve another person's suffering. A sheep could be pulled out of a pit but a man must not be healed of a disease.

TAKING A LEAF FROM NAZIS' BOOK

By their sensational breakthrough near Sedan, Germans in 1940 demonstrated to the uselessness of "wall" fortifications such as France's famed Maginot Line. They simply flanked it with an end run and poured down behind the line, leaving the French looking pretty silly, with their big guns all pointed the wrong way.

JAP SHIP GETS DEATH BLOW

The unusually close view of a Jap sub-chaser, above, shows the 100-foot craft listing sharply as a 500-pound bomb from an 11th Air Force Mitchell bomber plunges into the sea at its side. Moments later, the delayed-action fuse, which gives plane tank to escape blast of its own missiles, detonated the bomb, which sank the ship. Action took place off tip of Paramushiro Island, Japan's North Pacific at-sea base.

HAY FOOT

The ancient marching theme of Army rookies, "Hay-Foot, Straw-Foot," has new meaning for this Allied soldier ever since he acquired the straw boots he wears in the photo above. The old footwear was part of equipment left behind by fleeing Germans somewhere in France.

Here's that picture again—of a Yank who didn't miss the bust when his outfit rolled into a city liberated from the Germans. This one's from Linge, and shows a comely blonde Belgian lass giving a pleasant welcome to the soldier.
