Something of the part Canadians played in the radar war was told in news despatches which accompanied the original release. Nearly 6,000 Canadian radar mechanics and officers answered an appeal for such technicians by Britain.
This was more than half of the total serving in the R.A.F.'s ground and air installations in the European and Pacific theatres. Basic training in radar principles

We were the first country engage extensively in night-fight-ing, writes the London corresponlent of the Ottawa Journal. Its problems have been studied scientifically by the R.A.F., and big improvements devised. Above all things a night pilot needs to see objects outside the aircraft, but he is handicapped and dazzled by the lighting needed for the controls in the cockpit and by reflection from the wind and side-are reduced to the minimum. The fluorescent lighting is obtained by painting the instruments, much as the hands of a watch are made luminous. The interior red light has the advantage that objects show up brightly when directly observed but fade out when the observer looks away from them. Moreover, the pilot can regulate the strength of the lighting a

BRITAIN HONORS ITS WAR LEADERS

Pilot's Night Light

He has been, therefore, in worse case than anyone trying to see out of a lighted room at night. A new method of duel system lighting has now been devised which provides flourescent lighting for the instrument panel and red lighting to illuminate the cockpit. By these means reflections are eliminated and the cockpit lighting interferes only to a negligible degree with vision of outside objects.

Uranium Deposits The importance of uranium of and its role in atomic bombs and atomic power have focused the eyes of the world on the mining pelts of northern Canada, particularly on the Great Bear Lake area of the North West Territories, says the Financial Post. The action of the Dominion Government in taking over all rights in radioactive ores, such as uranium ie the North West Territories and the Yukon, by instrument of order-in-council of September, 1943, has lessened the interest of the average prospector in the area. It has, however, quickened the interest of the government-employed geologist and eno the extent that the Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions and Supply, has announced the use of 20 government prospecting parties in exploring the area in the general vicinity of Great Bear Lake.
