MODERATION IN DRINKING

WITH INTEMPERANCE usually applied to the excessive consumption of alcohol we have always thought of the word misused. Intemperance in many other phases of human activity, we believe, can be just as damaging to the individual and society in general.

However the problem of intemperance in connection with liquor is one of the foremost problems in our social structure, and as such, it is interesting to note that the Ontario Hotel Association plan steps toward moderation in its use. Among other things they plan an advertising campaign to promote moderation in drinking.

No doubt the better class hotelkeeper clearly recognizes that unless moderation is used in the consumption of liquor, public opinion will be against him in some impractical law as the old O.T.A. Act.

It is a very decided minority in our society that use alcohol to excess, yet they stand out as an example upon which a great many people judge the liquid to be degrading to society. Every time a man or a woman uses alcohol to excess they disgrace themselves in the eyes of all decent people. Children should be taught to regard drunkenness as disgraceful conduct, but if they can be taught the real meaning of moderation in living in all its phases, it is very doubtful if their habits in later life will reduce the standard of society.

THE TRUMP CARD

REPORTS FROM NORTH GREY indicate that public opinion is swinging behind the Progressive Conservative Candidate, Mayor Garfield Case.

This may account for the indefinite statements from Ottawa of the possibility of Parliament being dissolved when the House meets at the end of the month and a General election announced before February 5th, the day of the North Grey bye-election.

The report from Ottawa states that before deciding the time the new session will open, the Government will await developments in the bye-election campaign. It would be interesting to know exactly in so many words what developments the Government anticipate.

Mr. King is an astute politician. Statesman. No other man could have so wholly ignored the expressed wish of the people as he did after his famous plebiscite vote in 1940. Now the intimation is that unless the other Candidates step out of the field and give General McNaughton an acclamation at the official nomination, he is going to render the whole affair insignificant by immediately calling a General election.

We can't think the people of Canada would like Mr. King any better for adopting such a course.

MR. WALLACE

IN THE U.S. election campaign last fall our sympathies were with Henry Wallace, who despite the fact he failed to win the Vice-Presidential nomination carried right on wholeheartedly in support of the Roosevelt administration. He was untiring in his efforts to elect the party that turned him down. It looked like an outstanding demonstration of good sportsmanship. Maybe it was.

But since he has ousted Jesse Jones as Secretary of Commerce, it is easy to discount the feeling of good sportsmanship we held for him. We believe anyone could be excused for arriving at the conclusion that the promise of this position gave him the necessary inspiration to campaign so eloquently and so tirelessly to re-elect the Government.

A WORD TO THE WIVES

WIVES are a great institution. They manage the home, instill into husbands a sense of reality as to their own importance, make a community interested in itself and in many ways contribute to the gaiety and cheer of individuals and nations.

Husbands, who are of certain consequence as collaborators, are properly the first to proclaim the importance of wives in the whole structure of civilization.

But we have got around to wondering whether wives are not sometimes given credit too sweepingly for encouraging their husbands. We know a poet who tries out his copy on his wife. He is unimpressed by the fact that she has never enthused about a single raw verse.

A prominent pediatrician with somewhat original theories on child education tells me that his wife looks with high amusement on his nascent notions.

And a certain writer of humor questions quietly whether it is the helping hand of helpmate wives which leads husbands to success. He says his wife smiles pleasantly at his literary efforts but has yet to break into a chuckle, let alone a laugh.

We cannot quite agree that the three wives in question are typical of all wives. For our part, we have yet to encounter a husband whose wife refuses him encouragement to chop more wood, shovel more coal or do any chore around the house.

It occurs to us that just possibly — and this is a point for women to ponder — wives don't realize the high productive capacity of a cosily-showered husband in a fireless chair, smoking quietly and evolving ideas while the dishes are being done.

POLITICAL PANDEMONIUM

— By Lewis Milligan —

I MET A GREEK today and I ask him what he thought of the trouble that had arisen in his native land since it had been relieved from the domination of the Nazis. "It's all politics," he replied. "The Greeks are all politicians." In the cities they think and talk of nothing but politics not just at election time, but all the time. Politics in Greece is a regular business, and many people live by it.

"Live by politics — how can they live by politics?" I asked.

"It all depends upon what party is in power," replied the Greek. "Those who have supported the government do very well for the time being, while those favoring the opposing parties are poverty poor."

"But, surely," I said "the present fighting between the parties is unusual. They don't kill one another to get into power."

"Don't they?" was the reply. "There is more killing at the present time because the parties have been supplied with arms to fight the Germans. But at election times they fight just the same, and people are killed in riots and clashes. You may be killed or I may be killed, but we're fighting for our living. — It's all politics."

Whether or not the foregoing is an exaggeration I am not able to judge, but I believe it is true of many of the countries in southwestern Europe, particularly in the Balkans, where they take their politics very belligerently. So far as Athens is concerned, the passion for controversy over politics, and also religion and philosophy, can be traced back to ancient times. When the apostle Paul visited Athens he found groups of people on Mars' Hill engaged in heated discussion. As the record says: "For all the Athenians and strangers which were there spent their time in nothing else, but either to tell, or to hear some new thing."

When Paul stood up to address them he said: "Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious. If he were to visit Athens today, he would probably say that he perceived that in all things they were too political.

And that is just what is wrong with the world today. The nations have become too political. This war is a political war, and the unrest and strife within the nations, with class against class and the multiplicity of parties is all a political pandemonium. Politics has become a displaced religion with many people, and some instances political creeds have become a form of religion. Their God is the State, their heaven a promised Utopia or Social Security, and their hell is symbolized by the Depression of the 'thirties, from which they are to be delivered by politicians and economists.

The world needs to get back to sanity and the eternal verities. Where there is no spiritual consciousness and vision, the people perish. When people regard this earthly life as all, they naturally want to get all they can out of their little life while it lasts. The young people of Germany are promoted a political heaven, and they were placed along with the rest of the world into a political inferno.

In Canada today young people's societies and groups are being formed in which nothing but politics is discussed, and their members are urged to devote all their thoughts and social activities to the promotion of some political party. As the official handbook of one of these parties says: "The units meet regularly and frequently. They are concerned not merely with political activities in time of elections, but carry on educational work throughout the year."

Canada was not built in that way. Politics has had its place in our national life, but it naturally wants to get all they can out of their little life while it lasts. The young people of Germany are promoted a political heaven, and they were placed along with the rest of the world into a political inferno.

THE BERLIN DAGGER

GENERAL MCNAUGHTON was often quoted as saying The Canadian Army is a dagger pointed at the heart of Berlin. But the events of the past week indicate that the Russian armies are going to pierce the heart of the German Capital before the Canadians are close enough to it to be warm.

The Russian break-through on the Eastern front has been nothing short of phenomenal. The conservative view is that the Germans will bring up sufficient reinforcements to stem the tide soon. But Pravda, the official Russian Newspaper, says the Russian Army is marching on Berlin. If the assertion is true, and Moscow has not been given in this war to exaggeration, the fighting in Europe may end sooner than we dare hope.

NEW MISSION

Federation Facts

— By Norman High —

Victory has been conceded to the weatherman — the eight two-day Farm Policy Meetings which were to have been held during January in Haldimand have been cancelled. It is hoped that shorter sessions may be conducted later in the season when Haldimand farmers regain their mobility. The topics on the programme dealing with poultry and associated subjects will be as live and significant then as they are now.

Alex McDonald, who recently returned to Canada following service in the overseas unit, has been given a new assignment by the CBC. He will work for the army auxiliary services on equipment for radio program distribution to troops overseas. McDonald will shortly go back to the European theatre to supervise the setting up of required equipment.

Ernie Pyle's book "Brave Men" gives a marvelous description of the fighting through Sicily and up the Italian boot. After digesting his intimate details of the war in that theatre we have a better appreciation of the experiences of the many men from this community who only enjoyed a lunch at home.

One group at the rink last Friday night was happy, even if some of the more aged individuals trying to get the cranks out of their joints were suffering silently. The happy group was the happy club who were the guests of Rev. H. Fuller. Not only was the skating free, but after building up a generous appetite they enjoyed a lunch at home.

By H. L. Jones — Canadian Press Staff Writer Toronto, January 24. — (CP) — The Grey North by-election of February 5th, is taking on all the aspects of a "little general election" with outside speakers making addresses on behalf of the three candidates.

There were reports during the week that the lively campaign would be further enlivened soon by the entry of National Progressive Conservative Leader John Bracken and M. J. Coldwell National C.C.F. Leader into the fray. Mr. Bracken is at present in Europe.

Meanwhile the verbal battle is in Vice-Marshal A. E. Godfrey and Progressive Conservative candidate Garfield Case making a number of addresses. Pressure work at Ottawa kept Defence Minister McNaughton, the Liberal candidate, away from the riding.

Mr. Coldwell made a radio address from Toronto during the week wars against what he termed "reactionary elements" who are trying to gain control of Canada for the post-war period. Canadians, he said, should avoid the role they played between the two wars when "profit-seeking elements in this country were allowed to profit by the export of war materials to aggressor powers."

The C.C.F. leader said no system of social security can be established until there is a full use of resources to produce goods and services for the people. Reactionary interests said this should be left to private business. He said private business had failed to do it before and private business was not trusted by any country to organize for war.

C.P.R. Express Finds and Ships Reindeer for Hollywood.

GOES TO HALIFAX

George McMurray, traffic solicitor for the Canadian Pacific Express Company at Edmonton, Alta., was the "Santa Claus" who provided four reindeer for Paramount Pictures in Hollywood when that company had to have them for scenes in "Road to Utopia", forthcoming film on the Alaska gold rush, starring Bob Hope, Bing Crosby and Dorothy Lamour.

He had a recollection of a fellow somewhere in Saskatchewan driving a reindeer "when the word went out that the film capital had to have atmosphere for the picture. He checked with the publicity office of the Saskatchewan Government in Regina and found J. J. Dalke of Farmington, between Hudson Junction and Tisdale, was the "fellow".

Mr. McMurray's claim always has been "the Canadian Pacific Express can ship anything" and the reindeer and the huskies he lined up on this assignment makes it no idle boast. The reindeer, being trained at Ryan's Farm at St. Albert near Edmonton.

Mr. McMurray made arrangements to ship immediately and in the picture the Canadian Pacific Express man had his picture taken with Mr. Dalke (left) and the unusual cargo. Also provided for "Road to Utopia", but naturally suggested from the reindeer for shipping, were 27 sleigh dogs, with the lower picture showing some of the huskies being trained at Ryan's Farm at St. Albert near Edmonton.
