Little Laurien is of the same belief for she and her black dolly are inseparable companions. Because of an unusual stomach ailment, Laurien can only digest a few foods. The Hospital has worked out a special diet for Laurien that is gradually rebuilding her strength. It is to take care of more babies like Laurien (there are 200 children on the waiting list) that the Hospital for Sick Children is appealing to everyone in Ontario for $6.000.000 for a new building $6,000,000 for a new building

Once implacable enemy of the British Empire, now one of its greatest and most trusted leaders. Field Marshal Jan Christian Smuts was greeted by thousands when he visited Ottawa.

In the red-tabbed uniform of a British Field Marshal, he laid a wreath for the Union of South Africa at the National War Memorial, inspected servicemen, including a group of South African War veterans, and decorated nine returned Canadian nursing sisters representing a group of 300 who responded to the call of the South serve with the forces of that country. Later he spoke vigourously and hopefully of the events of San Francisco from which he had just returned.

. . . Despite his 75 years General Smuts steps along with the briskness of an athlete. His physical fitness is attributed to a frugai life on his farm near Pretoria there he spends most of his time His mother was of French Hugue not descent, his father a Dutch farmer and minor politician Once destined for the ministry, General Smuts became a lawyer,-later . . .

Lord Cranborne, British secretary of state for the Dominions, who also came to Ottawa from San Francisco, said in an interview that the conference and London talks which preceded it, were good examples of how the relationship between the Commonwealth countries works under the Statute of Westminster, "There is no question of the coercion of one member by the others. We are all arbiters of our own fate, but, by constant consultation with each other, we are able very often to reach common view. By maintaining that view we can exert great influence in the affairs of the world." Lord Cranbourne said of the Canadian delegation to San amendment which they put forth were always constructive and helpful, and th contribution which they made left Its mark upon the charter."

China Plans 100,000 Miles Of Railways

During the war China has lost she plans to build a railroad system with 100,000 miles or rails, 20,-000 of which is to be built within ten years after the war.

The Chinese railroad engineers and personnel have been the last to retreat from places taken by the enemy and they are now the first to enter regained areas. They have moved rails by hand over long distances. They have built bridges where it was thought bridges could not be built. They have improvised with equipment never before thought of in rail road building. But in spite of all this, China is left with less than a tenth of the railroad lines she had before the war, which was approximately 13,000 miles Lack of railroad equipment has lems since the war began.

Britain's defense situation at one time is evidenced by a new Churchill story in Guy Eden's new book "Portrait of Ch., chill." At the close of his famous challenge: "We shall fight on at the beaches and in the streets," the Prime Minister turned and mur-mured something to the Cabinet members. It was this: "I do not know what we shall do it withchoppers, I suppose."

Choppers were the instruments wardens carried to help them break into burning buildings.

CHRONICLES of GINGER FARM . . . .

Gwendoline P. Clarke

Expectation is better than realisation—so they say — but this week's events have been the exception that prove the rule. We have been living on expectation for ages but last Thursday realisation Yes, hydro power was really turned on at last. It was about two o'clock that day when one of the linesmen came along and said, "Are your lights all right? and then added hopefully-but in-

"Sure—and I can see lights on upstairs so I guess they're all right."
"All right"—what a mild way to put it. And yet after all it was a very conclusive description; I am not sure one could find anything better. We turned on switches here, plugged in there, wandered Carrick. "I'm Guy Winterside and from room to room trying out the this is my wife, Martha Stahl. We lights, switched on the pole lights, and turned on the ones at the barn, the linesman said, everything "was all right".

But that wasn't the only excitement. Two days later our hard-ware man phoned to say my washing machine had arrived. That was almost too good to be true. And vet there was really no doubt machine arrived home and I'm telling you it is like something out of fairyland . . . a magic whirligig that makes drudgery vanish into space; takes kinks out of backs and makes any wash "the whitest wash' -irrespective of any particular brand of soap bars or soap chips.

On the same day that the washing machine came to brighten our lives, there also arrived a letter from my brother in England, with visit him and his family. That was menial masque. He bowed to the Wintersides. "It is good to see you again, sir. And you, madame. Let step nearer home though we had step nearer home though we had not yet heard from him to that
