Meridel knocked at madame's door to show the old lady a letter Rudolph had received from the bureau in charge of the little guests. Meridel entered when madame's rich voice called "Entrez!" from the inner room.

"I shall be out in a minute - ah, it is you, Meridel." The door to her bedroom was open. yourself comfortable, child."

Meridel did not hear. The room became space and the moment eternity. Rapt, heart still, she stared On Village Green at the picture of Michel Fabre and slowly walked toward it as if drawn to it by some mighty, invi-sible threat. She had forgotten everything in the wonder of finding him again. She reached out and touched the photograph. She picked it up and looked at it, studying every lineament of the fine young face, realizing how true, how mi-nutely perfect, had been her mind's image - the thick brows, the cleft chin, the strong wide mouth, the broad forehead and aquiline nose.

> Churchill Opens Election Campaign Prime Minister Fires First Shot

I walked to the end of the road where I live, strolled over to our village green, passed under a row of chestnut trees which are the chief foundation of our local pride and saw in front of the Working Men's Club, a small crowd of a couple of hundred people, includ-ing a large number of children un-der 10, surrounding a tiny motor-car from which an elderly gentleman was making a speech, writes Harold Hobson in The Christian Science Monitor.

this Pickwickian gentleman was Prime Minister Winston Churchill engaged in opening the Conservative Party's electoral campaign in what has been described as the most important election in British history.

If this description is true, nobe dy would have guessed it from the casual, informal appearance of Mr. Churchill at Woodford.

five o'clock and at five o'clock a farmer's failing is to turn reluc-tantly to thoughts of home—to cows that need milking and to poultry that wants feeding. So we had an eat-and-run cup of tea with our friends and after admiring their chickens and gardens, and what we coud see of their crops, we made tracks for home, our faith-
