THE Government Must Have Money

If everything in Canada were to be handled by the co-operatives, as some are suggesting, there wouldn't be many taxes coming from private business, comments The Lehigh Herald. The Government would then have to do what the Russian Government does. There a turnover tax on the business of co-operatives brought in $800,000,000 rubles last year, and co-operative firms had to pay besides eight percent, on product sold and on revenues distributed to their members. After all, the State must have cash on which to operate.
