GEORGE LUMSDEN MILLER
HE WAS A GOOD HUSBAND, AND FAITHFUL. I know that. I think he was a particularly good citizen, a friend of all, an enemy of none. I may be slightly biased in this opinion but that will be understandable.
As a citizen of Jarvis, few, if any, have contributed more generously to the well being and progress of the municipality. He showed a constant interest in the progress of Jarvis and as evidence of that interest, served for eight consecutive years as Reeve of the Village. When he retired from office he still retained his interest in municipal affairs.
In fraternal affairs he exemplified the virtues of Masonic craftsmanship through forty-two years of membership. His interest in King Solomon Lodge assisted in keeping that organization alive and vital in the minds of the younger brethren long after he had attained the highest office in the gift of the lodge.
But his worth will best be remembered by his assistance to individuals who, confronted by the problems of everyday life, looked to him for advice. His knowledge of a wide variety of problems served to lessen the burdens of the minds of many.

His life typified those three great virtues of Faith, Hope and Charity. His faith in God was established in early life and never wavered throughout the years. Hope in Salvation was accepted and Charity to mankind was exemplified every day in his life. His hand went in and out of his pocket easily and a loan was seldom considered an asset in the form of an account receivable. But despite this his faith in mankind was seldom shaken.
His philosophy was that man can not live onto himself alone, and he took keen enjoyment in associations with his fellow men. Working co-operatively in the public interest—for the development of projects designed to make life more enjoyable for the many never failed to inspire enthusiasm in his heart. A public project was to him worthy of greater endeavor than his own private interests. Being able to give something to others gave him compensation of mind and heart greater than any worldly wealth.
As owner of this newspaper, this tribute is inspired. Had it not been for his faith in his home community, there would not be a newspaper in Jarvis today. That faith brought 'The Record' back to its feet when it's future seemed indeed doomed. That such faith was justified has been particularly during the war years, amply justified.

He was a good father to the present Editor, but more than that, he was a true friend. We are convinced that the same feeling was held by many of the citizens of this community. That is a great memorial for any man to leave behind, but it is the reward of anyone who prizes friendship above the external advantages of rank and fortune.

SPORT IN THE PAST—

WE CAME ACROSS A PICTURE the other day of the baseball team that put Jarvis on the map back around 1930. It was extremely interesting to look over the familiar faces and recall the crucial battles that took place in those days when the great Doc Wagner made the opposing batters bend their backs in vain.
While the players have all hung up their spikes they still retain their interest in ball and several of them are still around these parts. The team at that time was composed of the following players: catcher, Harry Cox; pitcher, Doc Wagner; first base, Bert Ionsen; second base, Wad Mason; short stop, Cliff Walker; third base, Harold Burwash; left field, Mel Church; centre field, Bruce Horn; right field, Freeman Steele. The manager at that time was Patsy Brock who has since passed away. No one contributed much more to sport around here and in fact wherever he was, than Pat Brock. He played the game himself as a young man and for years coached and managed the young fellows who showed any aptitude for the game. Pat had a great team with the above crew and many will remember the numerous one and two hit games turned in by Doc Wagner, the speedball artist. Some may toy, remember a spectacular one-handed catch made by Bruce Horne in one of the Jarvis games that year.
Every Jarvis team at that time had the support of J. Stacey Burwash who over the years has contributed much to the cause of sport locally. He scored the games and took care of those unseen difficulties that usually beset the ball teams. In the matter of scoring, he had no equal. His score sheets gave a clear picture of every game and the game could be entirely relayed from his score book. It is interesting to see him at the local softball games being played these nights under floodlights. He gets a great kick out of them, but we doubt if he thrill of play quite equals the kick he took from the baseball thrillers in the years gone by.

Fellow who have been worrying about a new suit can now stop because after October 15th there will be no more priority certificates issued of course. In the case of automobiles when priorities were ascertained, it meant for certain that if it means the same thing to start the men will simply have to start their own shirt-makers. There at least seem to be plenty of them.
There is one thing we are getting results on in this post-war period and that is the increasing number of people who are out of work on account of strike action. The progress of the month of August alone showed an increase of 23,000 more strikers than in the month of May. No doubt the statistics are leaning back in their own shoes and are not yet out of the office with their feet up on the desks. They report they will be able to turn out to their shareholders. But who is to their shareholders? It couldn't possibly be the communists. Surely not.
Up in Amberburg, four hundred workers of the Bruner Mond Plant had been on strike for some time in fact. Last Friday the Labour Department appointed an Inquiry Commissioner to inquire into the dispute between the workers and management. This is a splendid example of what a few people can do to upset the economy of a country. Bruner Mond is the only large producer of Soda Ash in Canada. In the manufacture of glass, pulp and paper, soda, aluminum, nickel and single alkali are used. All such manufacturers are affected by a mere four hundred people.
In these days... with baby bonuses, pensions, unemployment insurance and numerous other gratulatory forms of assistance the taxpayers are beginning to wonder if the white man has improved on the system adopted in use by the Indians when the Indians took the Country over. This is not the Country you're used to. This is the Country that you've never seen. The show, dresses and sports jackets they give up now will likely give them a bank book if depression hits again.
The wise youngsters will guard their future too, but we'd like them to get out. If the old days do come back those who have been content to take a job half-equipped and stay that way are going to get out. They will be in one's pockets, the utter despair that filled the future. The show, dresses and sports jackets they give up now will likely give them a bank book if depression hits again.

NORTHERN ONTARIO'S FUTURE

A $700,000,000 pulp mill program is setting the future industrial pattern for a large section of the Ontario north. It is a Chief interest centres in two communities east of Port Arthur on the north shore of Lake Superior. One of these—named Marathon after the company—has already been built and its pulp mill will go into production shortly. Preliminary work has been started on the other, at Terrace.
To the north of these mills lies huge forest areas, a rich source of their raw supply. These limits may supply wood for the lifetime of the new mills under modern forestry and timber-cropping methods.
Both new towns—they will have populations of upwards of 3,000 persons—are in an area where there has been little industrial development. Much of the wood from the Lake Superior watershed has been taken to other Canadian mills and even to the United States for processing into pulp.
To many lumbermen, their construction represents the start of a new cycle of industry based on forests. They recall the way sawmills sprang up with towns clustered about them late in the last century and early in the present. However, those mushroom growths came quickly and with little cost compared to the present. For instance the Marathon development cost something like $700,000. Terrace is to cost even more.
Other features of the over-all Ontario pulp program lie in the rehabilitation of the ghost town of Espanola near Sudbury and a projected joint pulp-sawmill operation at the town of Blind River, midway between Sault Ste. Marie and Sudbury.
Espanola for years was one of the busiest towns in the north. But in 1930 its source of life disappeared when the Abitibi Power and Paper Company closed its outdated mill. An American concern, the Kalamazoo Vegetable Parchment Company, now has taken over the old mill and the town is humming once again. At Blind River the pulp-sawmill operation is planned by the Huron Forest Products, Limited, which has taken over the McFadden Lumber Company sawmill and plans to erect a pulp mill which may cost $700,000. It will be the first such joint operation on a major scale in Ontario. Its loggers will cut over the forests and the wood which is unsuitable for lumber will be converted into sulphate pulp, used in making coarse paper.
These and other developments have a much wider significance than their immediate value to the communities concerned. They will increase the north's demand for food and manufactured goods from other parts of Canada, and they represent an important forward step for a great industry based on one of the nation's most important natural resources.

FIRE CONSUMES WEALTH

OF LATE PEACETIME Canadian manufacturing industries, pulp and paper stands first in employment, total wages, and export values, net value of production, and in capital invested. This industry depends on the forests. Care in the woods will help prevent forest fires.
The following figures, taken from reports of the U.S. Federal Reserve Board, show the total financial investment and holdings of the United States in Great Britain, Canada, Europe and Latin America, as at December 31, 1940: The figures represent millions of dollars. Britain 1,200; Canada 1,100; Europe 1,100; Latin America 1,100; Russia 70; China 35; Imports 24; China 42.
These figures speak for themselves and they convey a sufficient answer to the question of the United States being asked to preserve the British Empire. The answer is that from a national, financial and trade point of view - from a selfish point of view - the American people are deeply concerned in the maintenance of the British Empire.

Electric Wiring too Must be Designed to CARRY the LOAD

When you wire your farm for the first time, make sure that the job is designed to take care of present and future needs. That is the economical way... the only way to get your full money's worth and to profit as you should from Hydro service. Electric wiring, like a horse, can be efficient and safe only when adequate for the heaviest load it may have to carry.
The safe way is to have wiring done by a competent electrician. He may advise a little extra first-cost for heavier wire and more outlets and switches but he will save you time, trouble and the expense of re-wiring later on.
No matter what appliances and motors you start with, you will be wanting to add more electrical money-savers, work-savers and conveniences as time goes on. You can do that, if you start right with adequate wiring.
Your Hydro Rural Superintendent will gladly advise you as to good general wiring practice. His advice and a competent electrical contractor to do the job will be your best assurance of satisfaction.
