 A. L. MILLER, Editor

Ladies from lodges, church or club will to a meeting go,
 Where someone is sure to rise and say: "Our funds are getting low."
 The president, in answer, for suggestions makes a plea,
 And just as surely someone asks: "Why not let's have a tea?"
 When yeas and nays are called the yeas win with the greatest ease,
 And soon on ways and means the lot are busier than bees;
 Miss Willing Worker draws the job convening, and her aides
 Are Mesdames Faithful, Always Help, who ne'er a task evade.
 A call is made for volunteers for light cake and for dark,
 For someone to make sandwiches, for someone who will park
 Herself with happy, gracious mien to greet folk at the door,
 For someone who can juggle cups, and someone who can pour.
 Then comes a busy session at a flock of telephones,
 When day and date is broadcast to a hundred different homes;
 From early morn till late at night the merry games keep up,
 And ladies given bids to come and share a cheering "cup."
 At last the fateful day arrives — dressed in their finest clothes,
 The women cater to their guests while conversation flows;
 Results: a very happy hour; Success — oh, quite immense,
 For forty dollars worth of work they take in forty cents.
 —Dunnville Chronicle

WHAT IS THIS GOLF?
 GOLF is a form of work made expensive enough for a rich man to enjoy it. It is physical and mental exertion made attractive by the fact that you have to dress for it in a $200,000 clubhouse.
 Golf is what letter carrying, ditch digging and carpet beating would be if these three tasks had to be performed on the same hot afternoon in short pants and colored socks by a gouty-looking gentleman who required a different implement for every mood.
 Golf is the simplest looking game in the world when you decide to take it up and the toughest looking after you have been at it ten or twelve years.
 It is probably the only known game a man can play as long as a quarter of a century and then discover it was too deep for him in the first place.
 The game is played on carefully selected grass with little white balls and as many clubs as the player can afford. These balls cost from 75 cents to $25.00 and it is possible to support a family of ten people (all adults) for five months on the money represented by the balls lost by some golfers in a single afternoon.
 A golf course has eighteen holes, seventeen of which are unnecessary and put in to make the game harder.
 A "hole" is a tin cup put in the centre of a "green." A "green" is a small parcel of grass costing about $1.98 a blade and usually located between a brook and a couple of apple trees or a lot of "unfinished excavations."
 The idea is to get the golf ball from a given point into each of the eighteen cups in the fewest strokes possible and the greatest number of words.
 The ball must not be thrown, pushed or carried. It must be propelled by about $200,000 worth of curious looking implements, especially designed to provoke the owner.
 After each hole has been completed the golfer counts his strokes. Then he subtracts six and says, "Made it in five." That's one above par. Shall we play for fifty cents on the next hole, too?
 After the final, or eighteenth hole, the golfer adds up his score and stops when he reaches eighty-six. He then has a swim, drinks a pint of gin, sings "Sweet Adeline" with six or eight other liars and calls it the end of a perfect day.

EDUCATION LOOKS AHEAD
 PARENTS are busy these days outfitting children with books and clothes for a new school term and now, probably more than at any other time of the year, their thoughts turn to the kind of education their boys and girls are to receive. The question is important because viewpoints formed now will determine the outlook of today's young people for years to come.
 Many believe emphasis should be placed on international matters rather than on subjects of only regional, or even national, concern. As distances shrink before the strides of modern communications, it becomes increasingly vital that students come to regard people of other lands as neighbors instead of strange beings who inhabit areas indicated by purple, orange or green patches on a map or globe.

 Canadians and Americans for years have exchanged vacation and business visits and many of them have gone at least once in their lifetime to the British Isles or to Europe. Now they can go farther afield. Trips to Mexico, Bermuda, the British West Indies, Alaska and parts of South America are coming within reach of Canadian vacationists and travel facilities are bringing people of other lands to Canada.
 In the same way, new airlines almost daily add links to the network between North America and other continents. Great circle routes, airways men say, soon will put Canada at the hub of the world's communication lines.
 To keep pace with new horizons, Canadian youth need a world outlook. They require not only new concepts of geography, history and economics, but also special skills for working and travelling. For example, command of several languages soon may be requisite.
 As Canadians more and more become world citizens, other nations are bound to return visits and to take increased interest in this country and to make vacation and business visits as commercial contacts develop. With the United States a matter of history, Canada is in a good position to strengthen friendly ties with many other countries.
 To do that, its youth of today must be brought up as world citizens. If they succeed in making their places with grace and dignity in the family of nations, they will have done much to maintain international peace.

TWO GREAT INDIVIDUALISTS
 — By Lewis Milligan —
 SOCIALISTS are fond of scoffing at the "rugged individualist," as if he were a comic figure of a parasite on society. And yet some of the ruggedst of individualists that I have known were Socialists of the most extreme type, and many of them were both comic and parasitic. All socialist leaders are vigorous individualists; they could hardly be successful otherwise. It is very doubtful if even the saintliest of socialist leaders would meekly submit to having their lives planned and ordered by other people. On the other hand, I have known some rabid Tory individualists who would fit very comfortably into a regimented Socialist State. Herein is a paradox.
 Bernard Shaw is one of the most egotistical individualists that ever lived. He would not only be a misfit, but would be a positive nuisance in a Socialist system. Shaw would not be tolerated for five minutes as a citizen of Soviet Russia, and the only reason why he is alive today is that he chose to remain in a democratic country where he was free to say and do what he liked. I once heard Shaw say that martyrs were fools, and that the first duty of the prophet was to take care of his health so that he could remain alive as long as possible.
 Shaw is a wealthy man, and he has made his money and his reputation as a writer by knocking the very system under which he has remained alive and flourished. He has posed as a modern Diogenes, and has gone around with a literary lantern in daylight looking for an honest man; the only place he could find one was in a mirror. But Diogenes lived in a tub. Shaw has preferred to live in a comfortable country residence and to move in select social circles. His socialist chickens have lately been coming home to roost in the form of excess profits and inheritance taxes, and Mr. Shaw, the individualist, lost his temper trying to shoe them off.
 H. G. Wells is another example of that political hybrid, the individualist-socialist. He started out as a Fabian and conceived elaborate plans for the development of a utopian society. But he was too individualistic for the Fabians and he left them in a huff because they would not adopt his ideas. Wells visited Russia to see for himself how Socialism worked out in practice, but the Soviet system had no personal attraction for him. He preferred to live under the capitalist system in England where, like his friend Shaw, he was free to please himself.
 Wells also is a rich man. He has well earned his money and reputation by persistent private enterprise in literature, and he has not scorned the profit motive. He has made full use of the advantages and disadvantages of a free democratic system. In some of his novels he has himself lived somewhat of a free-liver, but he prefers to live among respectable people. He has scoffed at theology, but he does not like being regarded as an atheist and he has tried to create a synthetic Deity out of chemicals in a biological laboratory. Of late years, Mr. Wells seems to have lost all faith in Socialism and some problems to realize that the social and economic problems of England are very much involved with those of the world as a whole, and one of his latest solutions for the ills of mankind is living in a state of disillusionment and suppressed pessimism.
 Shaw and Wells are the products of a free society in a Socialist State, they would have had no scope or freedom to exercise their iconoclastic faculties. They broke the noses off a few political idols and damaged the noses off a decorative superstructure of the temples of Christianity remain.

The WPTB give extra rations to farmers for threshing and other operations on the farm when the housewife is required to serve a total of at least twelve extra meals. Housewives in this area are finding other means of feeding the threshing help because they say the extra rations do not begin to allow them to set anything decent before the hungry men.

One woman says the way to get around that is to ask for twice as many meals as you figure you will serve and then you have enough to do even if the rationing official does not take into account the extra ration. It is taboo with the average housewife to ask for more than that, but she still proves however, that she does not contribute to good citizenship.

On October 1st there is going to be another increase in the price of milk. A few weeks ago was due to the removal of the consumer subsidy fifty per cent in a three month period. One Department of Government in a process of decontrol through the establishment of a headche for another department of Government. The headche goes to the Labour Department from the workers all across the country for more wages to pay for the increased cost of their milk and other living costs. The Labour Department might agree to wage boosts, but the WPTB a branch of the Finance Department who originally removed milk subsidies, says wages cannot advance to meet the demands of the workers, else we will have inflation for sure. And there it stands. Yet there are those who are crying "ecidile tears for more and more control."

Our sympathy for the Strikers at the Hamilton Steel Plant has been entirely eliminated by their tactics in making those who want to work virtual prisoners on the job for the past three months and by their open defiance of the laws of the land. But we can't entirely forgive the strike management for their failure to make wage adjustments at the time the ceiling on steel was raised $5.00 per ton.

ONTARIO PARENTS CAN TAKE THESE RECOGNIZED PRECAUTIONS AGAINST THE POSSIBLE THREAT OF POLIO

It is in August and September that poliomyelitis (polio) is most prevalent. During these last weeks of summer, thoughtful parents should observe every rule that will protect their little ones from this disease.
 In our Province, comparatively few cases of polio have occurred as yet but in some sections of the United States, infantile paralysis—as it is more commonly called—has reached epidemic proportions.
 The Ontario Department of Health therefore urges every family to keep in step with the common-sense precautions outlined below. Read them carefully. Encourage your children to practice them daily. Guard your family's health during this particular period of the year!

SIX SIMPLE PRECAUTIONS:

1. Peel or scrub all raw fruit and vegetables before serving.
2. Protect all food from flies.
3. Teach your children to avoid crowded beaches and pools, and swimming in dirty water.
4. Avoid over-fatigue and, if possible, have your children rest for two hours each afternoon.
5. Prevent your children from suffering sudden chills, or exposing themselves to too much sun.
6. Make sure your children wash their hands before eating.

If your child is ill do not hesitate to seek medical advice
