A mechanical marvel of the machine age took a beating recently when, in a contest at the Ernie Fyfe Theatre, Tokyo, the abacus, ancient manual counting device, defeated the most up-to-date electric calculating machine.

Farmer Saved Buckets of Money

Strange things happen at Post Office counters. One of the strangest was when an old farmer in England handed a bucket full of money over the counter with the remark that there was a thousand pounds ($1,000) for the Bank and National Savings.

SPOTS OF SPORTS

After watching him in action many times, and especially following his recent performance against Montreal Alouettes and Toronto Argonauts, we would not be surprised to go out on a limb and state that Joe Krol of the Argonauts is the greatest all-around football player we have ever had in the history of the game.

Under the United States rule a punt-receiver signals, with upraised hand, for a "Fair Catch." When he does so, he cannot be tackled after catching the punt; but, on the other hand, he cannot run with it unless he has first signalled.

Such a rule would, we think, cut down enormously the number of injuries which are such a regrettable feature of our football each year. A player who has just caught a punt should be in no position to protect himself; and we have all seen, far too often, such a player hit by two or three tacklers simultaneously—and then carried off the field, more or less seriously hurt.

So by all means let us borrow, or revive, such a rule. What is more, we encourage our players to take fullest advantage of it. If we are not more than usually mistaker, it fell into disuse here in Canada largely because some of the backs got the mistaken notion that there was something a trifle cowardly in signalling for yards, or a fair catch. If we could drum it into their heads that it's simply smart, head-on football, called a "fair catch," and that a player who fails to quickly become a fair catch is signalling for yards, or a fair catch. If we could drum it into their heads that it's simply smart, head-on football, called a "fair catch," and that a player who fails to quickly become a fair catch is signalling for yards, or a fair catch.

It is one of the many who suffer agony at the sight of the Toronto Maple Leafs losing a game—especially a game they were fully expected to win—we have a suggestion that may bring some relief to your wounds, balm for your injured feelings. They say that misery loves company, so next time such a thing happens, instead of at once heading for the bright lights take a stroll around the "hulling," sometimes called Gamblers Alley, and watch the professional and semi-professional odds-layers paying off.

In case your education has been so neglected that you do not know these gentry, you can spot them at once by the expression of unutterable wisdom they habitually wear. Nobody in the world could possibly be so wise—so deep in the secret things that are hidden from our ordinary mortals—as they try to give the impression of being.

Speaking of the Winnipeg Blue Bombers, their coach—an American—makes the suggestion that there is still another feature of football as played south of the border which our Canadian game might very well adopt. This is the "bar catch" rule, for the protection of backs while catching punts.

We heartily agree with this suggestion, while at the same time we suggest that our players should be drilled in this rule.

Canada Produces Best Quality Wheat

Most of the world's wheat production is consumed near where it is grown, so that only about one-tenth or 650 million bushels moves overseas into what is called international trade. The greatest wheat producing country is China which grows about one billion one hundred million bushels a year. Russia comes second, with an average of one billion bushels a year. The United States is third, with an average around 900 million bushels a year, and Canada is usually fourth, with more than 400 million on the average. While Canada is not the fourth largest wheat producer in the world, she holds a distinguished place. She is the largest exporter of wheat and produces the highest quality wheat.
