

Whale-Hunting at Churchill—Whale hunting from a 20-foot freight canoe powered by an outboard motor is quite a sport up Churchill way. Here Henry Johnson and Jimmie Johnson remove the harpoon and pole from back of white whale. This fellow weighed about 1,700 pounds.

Fast, Exciting and Dangerous — Stephens, crack harpoonist demonstrates how he stands in bow to jab harpoon into whale. His record is 17 whales in one day.

Well Acquainted
Jones: "That penitentiary knew his hat to your wife. Does he know her?"
Brown: "I presume he feels that he does; he has seen her picture so often inside the case of my watch."
Window Dressing
"Could I try on that red dress in the window?" asked the bright young thing.
"There's no need to do that," the elderly shop-assistant answered coldly; "we have several fitting-rooms."

The Hard Way
"Well, my good man, what brought you here?" asked the sympathetic visitor to the prisoner.
"Borrowing money, sir," replied the prisoner.
"Borrowing money?" he echoed. "But surely they don't put people in prison for borrowing money?"
"I know," answered the prisoner, shrugging his shoulders unhelpfully. "But you see, I had to knock the man down three or four times before he would lend it to me."

Three Minutes of Fiction Fun

SHORT STORY

Legacy For Lucy

When John Grahame brought a ship home from England, everyone in Glencoe wondered how long the marriage would last. I had known him ever since he was a spoiled youngster who thought it was fun to see his dog chase my cat. But after I had caught him out in back of the woodshed one day, preparing to set fire to one of my cat's kittens, he had dropped in keroseene, he left me and my cats alone, because I picked up a stick and gave him the thrashing he deserved.

British Columbia has a lot of trouble, too, but much more for flood control and restoration of farmlands. It will do both these things—restore the forest for its own sake and to retain our largest and most profitable industry.

The first medical record was probably written 3,000 years ago by Imhotep, physician to the Pharaohs.

Poison Ivy Can Spoil The Picnic

Every year as the holiday season advances, reports become frequent of a day's outing being spoiled by contact with poison ivy. Particularly in the case of family picnics, where one of the pleasures of the day is the anticipation of finding an ideal spot on which to camp for the day, danger is farthest from their thoughts, but experienced picnickers know that one of the first things to be done on arriving at an unknown spot is to explore it and the surroundings for possible presence of poison ivy.

Poison ivy is one of the worst, if not the worst, skin-irritant plants in North America, and it grows under a variety of conditions, wet or dry, shade or exposed, and in any soil from fine sand or rocky ground to rich soil in the woods. It is seldom found in cultivated land but it may be plentiful in uncultivated areas, or in secluded woods and fields which children love to explore. Poisoning is the result of contact with any part of the plant—leaves, flowers, stems, and roots—or from clothing, boots, and tools that have the juice of the ivy on them.

It is anticipated that poison ivy may be met, and it is a good plan to carry a piece of strong laundry soap in the equipment because washing with this kind of soap in running water immediately by contact with the ivy is suspected and before the oil of the plant can penetrate the skin, is the popular and effective treatment. In the event of poisoning the initial stage is a mild itching sensation, followed by blisters which on breaking become painful oozing sores. In that case medical aid is advisable.

The extermination of the poison ivy plant has always been a tough job. During the war, the plant was killed around the military camps in Canada by the use of ammonium sulphamate, and now the new wonder weed killer 2,4-D is being used, but even with this devastating chemical it takes two applications to complete the entire destruction of the obnoxious poison ivy plant. In the use of the 2,4-D weed killer, George Knowles, Weed Control Expert, Field Husbandry Division, Experimental Farms Service, advises considerable care, particularly when near vegetable or flower gardens or ornamental trees. Spraying should be kept away from them and should not be carried out on a windy day because the fine spray carried by the wind might be carried some distance.

There was no time to summon help. In a flash she was in the water, racing to the assistance of the drowning man. Just in the nick of time she grabbed him... and, after a brief but frantic struggle which taxed her strength to the full, she managed to pull him back to shore. A witness of the gallant rescue gave Brooks artificial respiration... and in about twenty minutes he regained consciousness.

Canadian Forests Must Be Restored

In Ontario, three and four generations ago, the magnificent hardwood forests of the province were cut down for lumber. The hardwood was piled up and burned as fuel for the steam engines that ran the sawmills. The hardwood was piled up and burned as fuel for the steam engines that ran the sawmills.

Now, in Ontario, they are cutting back the forest and for specific purposes, to provide materials for a dwelling, to clear the land and to control the flood-water, which is pouring over the land, to control the flood-water, which is pouring over the land, to control the flood-water, which is pouring over the land.

Major-General Kennedy, chairman of the Royal Commission on the Forests of Ontario, told a pulp and paper convention at Petawawa of his plan for restoration over the next twenty years.

British Columbia has a lot of trouble, too, but much more for flood control and restoration of farmlands. It will do both these things—restore the forest for its own sake and to retain our largest and most profitable industry.
