CHANGING CONDITIONS

A CITIZEN, quite rightly, condemns the practice of parking motor vehicles on the boulevards around the Village. For many years the boulevards of Jarvis have been picturesque assets to the general beauty of this little village and residents have played their part in keeping them neat and trim.

But there is, unfortunately or otherwise, another angle to this problem. When the boulevards were set out between the pavement and the sidewalk, there was ample room within the twenty foot roadway to accommodate the traffic of the day. There were no twenty-ton trucks travelling our streets in those days and few automobiles.

No better example than the occasion on Tuesday afternoon when One Hundred and Sixty Holstein Breeders were enjoying a banquet in the Town Hall at noon. They left their cars on Talbot Street and every inch of boulevard was utilized for parking purposes on either side for a distance of One Thousand feet.

The only conclusion is that eventually the boulevards will have to go, at least on No. 3 and No. 6 Highway. They have contributed to our pride in days gone by, but there seems to be no sentiment left for such things as boulevards in modern day progress.

THE ROAD TO NATIONHOOD

FOR SEVERAL YEARS Wilfred Eggleston wrote a column for this paper, entitled "Behind the Scenes at Ottawa". We thought it was pretty good, and are now more convinced than ever.

About three years ago he became an editor of "Saturday Night", and we lost his valuable services. He has now written an excellent book called "The Road to Nationhood". It is an account of the Dominion-Provincial relations from the confederation debates to the breakdown of the conference last May.

It is a story with which all Canadians ought to be familiar but few are. It tells briefly and clearly what the problems of confederation were, why the solution hasn't always worked, and what has been done from decade to decade by way of patchwork.

MacLean's magazine observes that "whenever the present difficulties are cleared up and it becomes possible for Mr. Eggleston to write a final chapter, this book or one very like it, could well become a textbook in Canadian High schools or universities."

THE NAVY LEAGUE

ALTHOUGH CANADA'S interests have altered from war to peace, The Navy League is still operating twelve clubs and hostels, including recreation centres, for Merchant Seamen because it realizes that our export trade is vital to our national economy.

The achievements of The Navy League during the war are too well remembered to be easily forgotten and now its energies and leadership are devoted to a peacetime program that is of concern to every community and person when we recall that "35 cents in every dollar we receive comes as a result of our trade abroad."

Established in 1896, the primary function of the League was "to arouse public consciousness as to Canada's position as a maritime nation and her dependency upon the sea from an economic as well as a naval point of view."

The Navy League also sponsors a nationwide, youth-training program that is attractive to boys in their formative years. It teaches self-discipline, team-play, respect for law and order. It teaches the dignity of labour and the worth of producing new wealth through honest toil.

In tune with our economic needs and spreading its influence among our youth in ever-widening circles, The Navy League of Canada merits the moral and financial support of every public and private citizen.

QUALIFICATIONS FOR LEADERSHIP

WHAT ARE THE QUALITIES that make for success in life? That is a question in which young people in particular are interested, and many books have been written on the subject.

One American writer and lecturer has specialized in it and made quite a success, probably a good deal of money — out of telling people how to make friends and get on in life. I have not read his books or heard his lectures, but what little excerpts from these that I have come across struck me as rather commonplace.

That is perhaps an exaggeration. What I started out to do was to refer to an address delivered at a Graduation Banquet of the University of British Columbia by R. W. Diamond, Vice-President and General Manager of Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company of Canada.

Mr. Diamond said that many young college graduates think they are given jobs primarily because of their special training, and that they very often discount what, to him, are the most important qualities in man. These qualities he rated in the following order of merit: (1) Character. (2) Personality. (3) Imagination, Initiative and Drive. (4) Ability. (5) Knowledge.

Mr. Diamond said the reasons for putting character first were so obvious that no comment was necessary, and he proceeded to deal with personality. But this raises the old question as to the distinction between character, personality and individuality.

The word "personality" was originally derived from the Greek word "persona," a mask, but it has come to be used with a much deeper meaning, and is applied to the Deity. In this sense our personality is determined by or is a reflection of our character. If, therefore, we develop the right kind of character our personality will take care of itself.

But nevertheless there are some very good people who mask their character with a disagreeable personality, just as there are "bad characters" who wear a mask of gentleness or goodness. That is what we call hypocrisy.

But Mr. Diamond does not use the word "personality" in this sense. Having placed character first, he says: "It is surprising how many young men fail to appreciate the great importance of personality. Basically, personality means the ability to work harmoniously with one's fellow men."

With life so complex, and success so dependent upon co-operation of numbers of people working together, happy relations are of prime importance. Some large companies go so far as to refuse employment to any man, no matter how able or well trained, if he cannot work in harmony with his associates.

Referring to "imagination, initiative and drive," Mr. Diamond says that initiative and drive are perhaps the most rare. He thinks that, imagination and initiative are closely related, although they may not always appear together, but he believes the three qualities are essential to a "delicate balance" in action. There are some people with initiative and drive who have little or no imagination, who are what we call "bull-headed."

Last on the list, Mr. Diamond has placed ability and knowledge; "not," he says, "because these qualities are unimportant, but because they lose their value, to a great extent, when not accompanied by high rating in character, personality and imagination." He thus comes back to the three basic qualities essential to success, particularly in leadership for which the students whom he was addressing were being trained. Mr. Diamond has himself exemplified the qualities he names in a very practical way.

Born at Campbellford, Ontario, he graduated with honors in mining and metallurgy at Toronto University, and his knowledge, ability, imagination and drive have been devoted to the development of one of Canada's greatest industries.

In his address to the graduates, Mr. Diamond said: "We often men envy young men who see you look towards the future, in challenging opportunities for work and service. But you should realize that these opportunities are free. Go out after them. Make the most of them. But first of all be clear about your ideals. Be clear about your own code of ethics. Above all else, be true to them."

DISCRETION of Speech is more than eloquence; and to speak agreeably to him with whom we deal is more than to speak in good order or in good order.

Five of the County Women's Institutes are and are scheduled to start in the near future at the Rural Youth and Agricultural Centre, Kohler. Those in charge have been fortunate to secure the services of two local instructors, namely Mrs. Paul Bucher for the needle work class and Mr. James Ross our Assistant Agricultural Representative for the wood-working class.

The second directors meeting of the Haldimand County Federation of Agriculture is to be held Thursday afternoon, January 30th at the Youth Centre. I hope to be able to give a definite answer to the County Hospitalization Plan question in the next issue.

The 11th Annual Meeting of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture (C.F.A.) is being held in January 28th to 30th in Winnipeg, watch the daily weekly and farm magazines for reports on this meeting.

The Project of Warble Fly Control is being considered by two townships in this County, Oneida and North Cayuga. Details will be given as soon as the project is in action.

Another project that requires a complete coverage for results is the treatment for smut. How about some farmers making their own action project this Spring.
