COMMUNAL RESPONSIBILITY

PUBLIC COMMENDATION of the Canadian Red Cross Society's campaign for funds now in progress, has been made by many of Canada's leading citizens. In their statements they all emphasized the peacetime aims of the Society and our individual responsibility to contribute to the limit of our means.

At the recent annual meeting of the Hamilton, Ontario, Branch of the Society, the distinguished Canadian soldier General H. D. G. Crerar, C.B., D.S.O., interpreted our responsibility to the Red Cross in a new light.

"We have definite need in this country," said General Crerar, "for less emotional oratory on freedom, and a lot more consideration and development of the essential requirements of a democracy—the sense of general communal responsibility."

"In the important contribution to human welfare which is the best record of Red Cross, we have a practical demonstration of the essentials required for a democracy—a real sense of communal responsibility."

Community effort on a national scale, with every man and woman lending moral and financial support to insure the continuation of a necessary peacetime program, is the true life blood of the Canadian Red Cross.

SOCIALIST TEXT-BOOK FOR CHILDREN

By Lewis Milligan

A FATHER was examining his son's school report, and it was very bad. "This is awful!" said the father. "Can't you do any better than that?" "O yes," replied the boy, "I got 66 for an essay on 'Building a New World Order!'"

Walter A. Tucker, M.P., leader of the Liberal Party for Saskatchewan, recently wrote against the introduction of a text-book, entitled "The World of Today," into the public schools of that province.

Mr. Tucker charged that book glorified socialism and communism, and he demanded its withdrawal from the schools. I have read the book and have found it very interesting. It certainly covers the subject, so far as governments, economics, industry and social life are concerned.

The book starts out by likening the world and the two thousand million people in it to an "enormous motion picture," which shows "a never ending jumble of people working at a million different tasks, following a million different ways of living."

Those questions are by no means new. They have puzzled poets, philosophers and theologians down through the ages. But not so the authors of this text-book.

"The answer to some of these questions," they say, "is fairly simple. In spite of the amazing differences in appearance and surroundings, in living and habits of thought, with few exceptions, all have the same object in view: the good life, and a good living."

It is only fair, however, to add that the authors, in a note on the back of the title page, state: "It is the purpose of this book to describe some of the more important social, industrial and political aspects of the world since the Treaty of Versailles in 1919."

Every opportunity is taken by the authors of this book to compare the "injustices" suffered by Canadian people with the "good life" enjoyed by people under Socialism.

Then the youngster is asked to figure out "what is the difference in an amount of interest that will be paid on a loan of $4,000 in the two countries?"

Pen, Scissors and Paste-put

It is very seldom our editor friend B.M.P. of the Simcoe Reformer makes an absolute false prediction.

But the Monday issue of that great journal, which reached us on Tuesday, said that spring had at last arrived; that balmy spring air was intoxicating the human spirit; the kids were playing marbles and roller-skating; ah! at last. And who is there to deny that Tuesday dished up the best sample of winter weather we have experienced yet.

The Delhi News-Record comes forth with a thirty-six page special tobacco edition and exhibits once again that it is a qualified show window for the great tobacco industry which has its center in that thriving town.

ECONOMICS IN ONE LESSON

A BOOK REVIEW

By R. J. Deagham

A FEW MONTHS ago there came on the market a small book, entitled "Economics in One Lesson." "Small," did I say? Well it is a book of 222 pages and packed full of so much common sense and reason that almost I tempted to wish that it could be made compulsory reading for every voter but I can't do that. I do not believe in compulsion.

"Economics in One Lesson" was written by Henry Hazlitt, formerly on the Editorial Staff of the New York Times, a publication so outstanding that a few days ago an editorial friend of mine referred to it as the greatest University in the United States.

"The economic goal of any nation, as of any individual, is to get the greatest results from the least effort. The whole economic progress of mankind has consisted in getting more production with the same effort."

"Nothing is easier to achieve than full employment, once it is divorced from the goal of full production and taken as an end in itself. Hitler provided full employment with a huge armament program. The war provided full employment for every nation involved."

"Wages and employment are discussed as if they had no relation to productivity and output. On the assumption that there is only a fixed amount of work to be done, the conclusion is drawn that a thirty-hour week will provide more jobs and will therefore be preferable to a forty-hour week."

"It would be far better, if that were the choice—which it isn't—to have maximum production with part of the population supported in idleness by disguised relief than to provide 'full employment' by so many forms of disguised make-work that production is disorganized."

The voluntary saving of electricity in homes, offices, theatres, stores, and in industry, greatly relieves this condition. Your response was very helpful. To those who so willingly co-operated during this emergency period, Hydro says, "Thank You."

In many localities Hydro stations and lines are overloaded because of the delay in obtaining necessary new equipment. Therefore, do not waste electricity—use Hydro wisely at all times.
