

"SALADA" TEA

Just try it

Synopsis
Chapter XIV: Michael Valdez sets out for Coronado to trace Flash Conroy, a notorious gambler. Valdez finds him at the poker table in his own salon, "Flash" Conroy's Palace.

CHAPTER XV
As Michael Valdez moved slowly across the barroom floor now, the gambler turned to face him, and for a tense moment neither of them spoke. Then Conroy flashed his white teeth in what might or might not have been a friendly grin and said: "How's tricks, cowboy? It's a treat to see you around here. Didn't know you often moved so far away from the border."

"Slightly off," Valdez drawled and slightly moved in chair to see that his well-filled money belt came into plain sight. "I've just come into a little dinero, and thought this was just as good a place as any for me to invest it so it would bring me in more."

"Invest it, eh? You'd like to run it up?" Conroy's full lips quirked and again his white teeth showed. "Certainly, certainly," he said affably. "Draw up a chair Conache yourself, a stack of chips. I figure we can give you a run for your money."

As Michael Valdez drew up a chair to the table and sat down he cast a swift, comprehensive, but apparently idle glance around the room. He wanted to single out Conroy's henchmen, and he did that with one sweep of his eyes. They were some of these half-breeds lounging at the bar, of course.

But he gave no single sign of interest as he sat down and carefully dumped the contents of the money belt onto the table in front of him. Flash Conroy began methodically counting out red, white, and blue chips.

Valdez called for a new deck and began to re-shuffle the cards. Flash Conroy accepted his cards for the out and deal as though this man who had just sat in at the game were no unusual visitor, instead of the spectacular one every man present knew him to be. The five other players in the game also accepted the bit of melodrama, but shortly realized that whatever was the reason for the unexpected entry of this man from the border country, they Materials: Pearl Cotton, Size 8, 1 ball each of Red, Green and Yellow. Steel Crochet Hook No. 1.

With Red, ch 14. 1st row: Double crochet (dc) in 4th ch from hook and in each ch across (18 dc on row, counting turning chain as 1 dc). Ch 6, turn. 2nd row: Slip 1st dc of last dc on previous row, dc in each 4c across, dc in top of turning chain. Ch 6, turn. Repeat 2nd row until piece measures 15 inches. Break off.
Make a Green and a Yellow piece exactly like the Red piece.
Finishing: Place the short ends of each piece over each other and sew them neatly together. Sew a piece of ribbon to both ends for ties.
This above is one of the many attractive patterns shown in the new "Complete Book of Crochet." Full instructions to be found elsewhere on this page.

The Way Of Love
1 John 2:7-11, 15-17; 3:13-18.
GOLDEN TEXT — Follow after charity.—1 Corinthians 13:1.
John, the apostle, has been termed the apostle of love. He was an affectionate man. It was he who lay close to the breast of Jesus at the last supper. It was he who left on record the best known verse in the Bible, "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." The words translated love or charity occur in his writings 150 times.

The lesson teaches us, "Love not the world, neither things that are in the world." We must use the things of the world but we must not get our affection upon these things which are doomed to perish. Money is necessary but the love of it is "the root of all evil, which while man pursues in pleasure is dead while he liveth."

Your Handwriting and You

By Alex S. Arnott

What Shall I Write About?

Many of my readers express regret in not knowing what to write about when requested to analyze their handwriting. Other readers write, "I do not know whether or not you will be able to read my handwriting from the picture." I do not know if I can read it or not. I can read it if I know what you write about. What you write about in your letter has little consequence in reading it. The important thing in analyzing script for character analysis is the strokes you use in making the script. It makes no difference whether you write with a steel pen or a fountain pen or even a goose quill with all his money missing, there should be no explanation of that forthcoming.

The other two men in the game besides Conroy himself and Michael Valdez were plainly Conroy decoys. That was definitely proved a few minutes after Valdez had pigeonholed them in his mind, when they and Conroy swung into action trying to whipaw Valdez. But they did not succeed. He was ready for them, and after that play he went on methodically raking in his winnings and pushing away his losses with cool indifference.

This stake had been whittled in half when Valdez decided that the show-down he had come here to force tonight might as well come now as later. He had a good audience too, now, for the other games had been suspended and all of the former participants were gathered around the poker table where the owner of the Palace himself played. Better still, the drifter had reached his limit and had dropped out of the game.

Valdez knew positively the time had come when, on Conroy's deal, the gambler hastily shuffled and flipped out the cards without offering them for a cut. Picking up his cards, one at a time, Valdez saw that his first four cards were three kings and an ace. It did not surprise him, therefore, when he picked up his fifth card and saw that it was his fourth king.

Valdez never blinked as betting before the draw opened up, and the players warmed up as it went round and round the table. A sizable sum of money, when the chips had all been tossed in, cluttered upon the table. Finally Valdez found himself running down to the last of the thirty-two-thousand-dollar fund he had brought with him for this enterprise.

Conroy, dealing, was seated to the right of Valdez. One of Conroy's players sat on the other side of the tall wanderer from the border country, and next to that man sat one of the ranchers. The other Conroy man was across the table from Michael Valdez.

Finally, as the betting became steeper and steeper, Flash Conroy dropped out. Valdez, who had opened the pot, checked the bet to the house player who sat at his left hand. The man bought more chips. A good portion of the new stack of chips went into the center of the table as the man opened the betting.

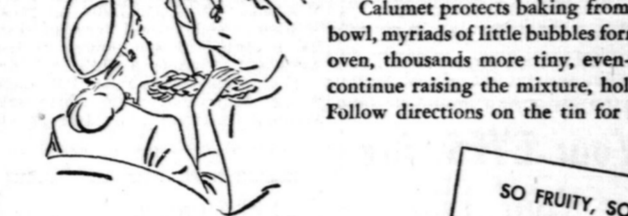

Again the bets went around, but the two ranchers had reached their limit, and the bet was off. The betting made they had also lost confidence in the cards they held. Apparently they would be no good, even bettered after the draw. Simultaneously they tossed their hands into the center of the table.

Conroy and his men had been waiting for that moment. Valdez was not surprised when neither of Flash's henchmen raised again. The gambler looked at Michael Valdez and lifted his eyebrows inquiringly.
"How many cards, Valdez?" he asked.
Michael Valdez thumb fanned his five cards as he appeared to study them a moment more. He whipped out two cards then and tossed them into the discard in the center of the table.
"Give me a pair to fill this house," he drawled.

On the other hand, to love one's brother is a basic requirement of a Christian. It is true that some profess to be Christians and yet are not on speaking terms with each other. We wonder how such ever get along in heaven. But let us not puzzle over the answer for John says, "Whoso loveth his brother is in the love of God, and he knoweth that he is not a murderer, and he shall have eternal life abiding in him." The one who doesn't love his brother will not enter heaven.

The love which John considers of such primary importance does not exhaust itself in emotion. It is practical. "Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us; and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren." He pertinently asks,

"So Tender, So Delicious-- That's Calumet's Double Action"

Tender cakes, little cakes and cookies... light, even-tended muffins and butter puddings—that's the story when you use Calumet Baking Powder! And consistently fine results with Calumet will make you join the thousands of Canadian women who, once trying Calumet, will use no other baking powder.

Calumet protects baking from start to finish. In the mixing bowl, myriads of little bubbles form when liquid is added. In the oven, thousands more tiny, even-sized bubbles are released to continue raising the mixture, holding it high, light and even. Follow directions on the tin for any recipe.
