

Delicious "SALON" TEA BAGS Convenient

Valley of Revenge BY JACKSON COLE

Chapter XV: Valdez engages Conroy in a poker game. Valdez, suspicious that the game is crooked, surprises the dealer by drawing cards when he had been dealt an apparently winning hand.

CHAPTER XVI
Flash Conroy stiffened perceptibly. His eyes flew open involuntarily, then his poker face took command again, and the slow lids dropped to veil the surprise. Except for that brief moment of sudden jarring astonishment, his face did not change expression. But there was incredulity in his voice as he repeated:
"Two, you said?"
"Right," said Valdez.
Just those few words passed, but instantly, as if some unaccounted-for danger had been transmitted, the watching crowd began to fade away from around the table. A sheepish grin quirked the lips of Valdez' nearest opponent as Conroy dealt Valdez the two cards he had asked for. He picked them up slowly and found a queen of spades and a seven of spades.

The first house player drew one card, looked at it—and promptly threw his hand into the center of the table. The other gambler on the opposite side of the table picked up the one card dealt him, barely glanced at it and followed suit. Valdez laid down his three kings, face up, and raked in the pot, stuffing the money that had been piled up on the table in his pockets.

Slowly he glanced around at the silent crowd, his lips grim, his eyes hard and icy cold.
"I believe all you folks should know something about what has been going on here," he said, with a dagger-flash of his dark eyes at Conroy beside him. "Flash dealt me four kings and an ace, knowing that I could see that four aces would not be out against me. He had the seven of spades and the queen of spades on top of the deck. This hombre on my left was holding the eight, nine, ten and jack of spades—which would have handed him a straight flush in any man's language. And that smug, self-satisfied fellow on my right is the kind of crooked work you have all been against when you gambled here at the Palace."
Then Valdez looked squarely into Flash Conroy's eyes, turned to face the gambler.
"Conroy," he said between his teeth, "according to plan, a man named Raymond Garvin wanted you to relay the money I've been playing with to the 'big boss.' It was to have been his whack out of all the robbery of poor peons and settlers from the Eastern states now in Paisano Valley. But Garvin's dead now and won't be able to pass on more—any more than he'll be interested in what's happened to his dime."
Valdez nodded, his jaw hardening.
"Yes," he repeated, "Garvin's dead. El Caballero Rojo paid him a little visit last night, so he won't be in on that new line of thievery deal that has been planned—oh, you know all about it all right. You needn't look puzzled."
"El Caballero Rojo has done me a good turn or two, as he has for many other people, so when he wanted me to do something for him I welcomed the chance. I have been plumb glad to come here to-night, as he asked me to do, because he is too busy himself right now to deal with snakes."
Slowly Michael Valdez rose, his eyes never wavering from the speechless gambler. He bent forward over the table to emphasize his words.
"So tonight I'm getting you for El Caballero Rojo. Conroy, just as he got Raymond Garvin, he'll attend to your 'big boss' himself!"
The very air in the Palace Saloon quaked as Michael Valdez shot out

Which Would Be The Better Wife?

Dear Mr. Arnett: I am a widower with two children and I am contemplating marriage. I have enclosed two examples of handwriting of women with whom I am corresponding. With his gun still covering the crowd, methodically Conroy tapped the till behind the bar, then stalked over and belittled Valdez of the cash the gambler had on him.

Though apparently unconcerned, he was fully conscious of the glowing looks, the muttered curses that followed him as he moved swiftly. Yet he was fully confident that no man there would venture to match his gun skill with his own, not after the exhibition of fast shooting he had just displayed. Moreover, none of them had ever seen Conroy bested before. The gambler's gun-speed had been supposed to be unbeatable, unchallenged.

At last, while silence held the room, Valdez backed toward the door, his pocket watch banging with loot. El Cielo followed him.
"I'm giving the whole lot of you exactly ninety seconds to get out of here!" he snarled. "The devil of Satan is going to be burned to the ground. Or—he shot one glance at Flash Conroy—'perhaps if you will say to me the name of your 'big boss,' so that I may let it to El Caballero Rojo, I might let you off—to some extent. Though Madre de Dios! What El Caballero Rojo will say to that I don't know!"

Consumers Launch Membership Drive

"By finding out the why's of shortages, ceilings, rationing, and by a united effort, Canadian women helped keep Canada economically sound in war."
So that this wartime experience may not be lost, the women of Canada through their voluntary organizations, are continuing their interest in consumer problems. Fifty-six national presidents met in Ottawa to form a self-supporting, independent Canadian Association of Consumers.

The Proof of a Christian
1 John 4:15-21; 5:10-13; II John 4-6
GOLDEN TEXT — He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath the Son of God hath not life. — I John 5:12.

"Whoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God." This is the basic belief of a Christian. Some modern teachers present it as a merely a great man. Then, of course, the miracles recorded of him become fanciful stories. John is very emphatic: "Who is the liar but he who denies that Jesus is the Christ? This is the antichrist, he who denies the Father and the Son."
A Christian dwells in love. The Greek word translated love in this lesson does not denote mere human affection. It is translated charity in I Corinthians 13. It is God-like "God is love." It is shed abroad in the heart of the individual who believes on the Son of God. This love may be perfected so that we shall have no dread of the judgment. Our mind is not perfect, hence our conduct is not perfect but our whole life can be motivated by perfect love. The child helping her mother bake, makes some blunders but all the while she is "helping mother." She is acting in love. "We love because He first loved us."
Another proof of the Christian is that he has this God-like attitude toward men. We may not admire or wish to emulate our brother but we must love him with a pure heart. This is natural for the Christian. "If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar, for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?"
"He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself." He that hath the Son hath life. "You need not tell an athlete that he is alive. He knows it. So the Christian has the witness in himself. He says, "Blessed assurance, Jesus is mine!"
John mentions one further important proof. "This is love, that we follow his commandments." We have noted that a Christian has a basic belief, a pure love dispelling fear, and embracing his fellow men. He has an inward assurance of acceptance with God. Finally, his outward life proves he is a Christian. He talks, does business, etc., in accordance with God's commandments. "There is a Christian."

Chronicles of Ginger Farm

November 15th—and a cold east wind blowing; there or four inches of snow on the ground—and that is our first taste of winter. It was enough to make Partner and I scurry around setting up furnace pipes. At least Partner did the scurrying at first because he didn't think he would need any help as the pipes were partly assembled—there were just a few new ones to put in and choose here and there to be connected. So I went on with my baking. But of course you never can tell with stove pipes. The pipes were in the oven when a voice from below called, "Can you come and help me down here just a minute?" Well, you know how it is—cookies or no cookies, when the Man of the House is wrestling with furnace pipes and help is required, one has to run—but definitely! So with hope in my heart but fear in my mind I gave what assistance I could, first to the kitchen and then up, and ending back to the kitchen whenever there was a lull in the wrestling proceedings. The result was only a few burnt cookies on the last sheet. Not as bad as it might have been certainly, and to have the furnace going was worth a little trouble and inconvenience. One can stand a certain amount of heat with a strong blowing from the east.

The Owl Pen
By Kenneth McNeill Wells
With Woodcuts by Lucille Oille

When Ken and Lucille Wells found an old abandoned log cabin up in Medonte Township, Ontario, they were delighted. When the farmer-owner told them they could have it for fifteen dollars if they would take it away, they jumped at the offer, and the township buzzed with the tale of their folly. While the Wells ranged desperately up and down the township roads looking for a piece of land on which to rebuild the cabin, the concession telephone lines shook with the laughter of the gossiping farm folk.

Just when they had given up hope, they stumbled on the spot they had dreamed of. Once again the telephone lines were buzzed with word that the two city idlers who had bought that old wreck on the hill had now bought four acres of waste land by the creek.

In The Owl Pen Ken Wells, a young Canadian newspaperman, tells how he and his artist-wife, Lucille Oille, moved and rebuilt the old cabin and realized their dream of living in the country. They bought chickens, ducks, goats and bees, and the reference books said they should. The behaviour of the goats caused heart of laughter, and the hens reduced them to tears, and the bees left them smarting. But they remained undaunted and now consider themselves seasoned farmers. The Owl Pen describes the duties and pleasures of country living in all seasons. It is a beautiful little book, which all country and would-be country dwellers will enjoy.

Christmas Cookies

Home-made cookies may answer the problem of what to give certain people on your Christmas list even though the pre-holiday schedule leaves little time for baking. Molasses may be used as a sweetener and the butter may be mixed right in the saucapan in which the shortening has been melted. Here is a recipe that follows the "saucapan" method of preparation.

Golden Fruit Bars
½ cup shortening
¾ cup sifted flour
¼ teaspoon each baking soda, nutmeg, cinnamon, salt
¾ teaspoon cloves
¾ cup molasses
2 eggs, unbeaten
1 cup each chopped nuts and chopped raisins
Melt shortening in three or four-quart saucapan over very low fire. Remove from fire and cool. Mix and sift flour, soda, spices and salt. Add molasses and nuts. Bake in greased and floured 10 x 6 x 1-inch pan in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) twenty to twenty-five minutes or until done. When cool, cut in bars or squares. Makes about twenty 1 x 3-inch squares.

What's In a Name?

What does the word "Ontario" mean? Ontario originally was the Iroquois word "kanadarie", which means "sparkling or blue water". It was used to describe the waters of the lake that is now known as Ontario.
Later, "kanadarie" was corrupted to "Ontario", and the white settlers gave the name to the land along the lake's shores for an ever-extending area.

Candle Hint

Every woman who delights in candles, and plenty of them, has had at one time or another the annoying experience of buying attractive ones only to find that they would not fit her candle-holders. The best way to deal with a misfit candle is to hold the base in hot water for a moment. This softened the pliable wax can be made to conform to the size of the opening in the candlestick.

Girls! Women! Try This If You're Nervous, Cranky, Tired-Out

On 'CERTAIN DAYS' of the Month!
Do female functional monthly disturbances make you feel nervous, jittery, cranky, no tired and "dragged out"—at such times? Then try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve such symptoms. This fine medicine is especially effective for this purpose. For over 70 years thousands of girls and women have reported benefits. Just see if you, too, don't report excellent results! Worth trying.

Lydia E. Pinkham's VEGETABLE COMPOUND
Tutti Frutti Crisps may be made by the same method. The ingredients are:
1 cup shortening
3 cups sifted flour
1½ teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon each salt, cinnamon and nutmeg
1 cup molasses
1 unbeaten egg
¾ cup each raisins and nutmeats
¾ cup combined orange and lemon peel and citron.
