NEWS SPOTLIGHT

Specialty Written for the Record

By E. M. Chastler

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Prime Minister Attlee's thorough shake-up of the British cabinet, including removal of Ernest Brown from the fuel ministry, signifies a swing away from the extreme left and a victory for the more moderate elements in the administration.

The changes, notably appointment of Sir Stafford Cripps as minister of economic affairs, are announced as the new cabinet line-up is the team with which Attlee hopes to win the economic battle of Britain.

It is noteworthy that Winston Churchill, Britain's wartime prime minister who long has sharply attacked the Labor government's policies, welcomed the appointment of Sir Stafford Cripps as a high regard for the ability of the economic affairs minister even though they are far apart politically.

Some observers expected that Foreign Secretary Bevin would be in charge of the economic reconstruction drive. But now it is clear that he will remain generally responsible for external relations, including relations with other Commonwealth countries.

Meanwhile, two new moves have been made on the economic front, one of which is the appointment of Sir Stafford Cripps as minister of economic affairs, and the other is the appointment of Sir Stafford Cripps as minister of economic affairs.
