

Austerity Says No Trousseau For The Princess

In Britain, where austerity is the rule, one must have ration coupons to buy clothing. Each Briton last March received thirty-two clothing coupons—all that will be issued until this October. The ration does not permit wild buying sprees. For example, twenty-six coupons are required for a man's suit; eleven for a woman's woollen dress. Such pre-war luxuries as wedding trousseaus are usually out of the question. Many brides-to-be do not even buy them or rent them.

Last week Buckingham Palace announced that, because of "present-day conditions," Princess Elizabeth—who is to marry Lord Philip Mountbatten on Nov. 20—will "not be having a trousseau." The announcement, however, made it plain that Princess Elizabeth would not have to borrow or rent her wedding gown. It disclosed that Norman Hartnell, one of Britain's leading designers, was working on a royal wedding gown for which, presumably, the Princess will be able to dig up the necessary coupons.

Court circles last week said that, in place of a new trousseau, the Princess would make do with the wardrobe she accumulated for her visit to South Africa early this year (at that time a special award of clothing coupons had been made to the royal family).

Budget-Saving Upholstering Job

Have your much-worn chair that needs repairing on the seat and arms like ours did.

Our barrel chair was covered in a striped fabric. Rather than pay for the reupholstering of the entire chair, when only the seat was badly worn, it occurred to us to remove the material, which was the same stripe and was in good condition, from the outer back of the chair. From this piece we salvaged just enough material to make a new cover for the seat and arms. Although the fabric from the back was faded a somewhat different shade, it quickly blended in with the rest through use and by shampooing the entire chair.

A plain, neutral piece of material, which was found on a remnant table, was then placed around the back of the chair. The whole project cost but a fraction of what one would pay to reupholster or even slipcover the entire chair.

Whether the fabric is flowered or striped, the same pleasing effect can be achieved by combining it with a plain, neutral back and sides. Upholstering can be fun? Why not try it yourself?

"Remains" to be Seen
After early service at Sutton, Eng., Parish Church one day recently, a little procession came out of the main porch and made its way to a 200-year-old tomb in the churchyard. The heavy iron door was unlocked and a brick inspection was made of seven coffins inside. Then the tomb was locked again.

The ceremony was the annual opening of the tomb of James Gibson, a wealthy 17th-century City Merchant, and his family. Body snatchers were busy when he died, and a daughter, Mary, left a large sum for the tomb's upkeep and annual inspection, which has been done for 160 years.

Tea History Packed With Romance

Ever since tea was first used as a drink it has been the centre of big events, the Vasconover Sun reminds, and its history is packed with romance. It was not until the latter half of the 18th century that tea began to obtain a footing in England. Eggs records, under the date of September 25, 1667, "I sent for a cup of tea (a China drink) of which I had never drunk before."

Three years later the East India Company brought a package of two pounds, two ounces of tea as a present for King Charles the Second. By 1842 the home consumption of tea in the United Kingdom had reached 37 million pounds, while a century later it stood at the staggering total of 520 million pounds, valued at £31,000,000. Until 194 years ago, the tea trade was monopolized by the East India Company. There were so many scandals over prices that in 1833 a Bill was passed to allow any individual to import tea. In 1852, the average cost of tea to consumers of 54 million pounds of tea in Britain was just about $1 per pound, which was the original production in China got for 20 cents. Thousands of people used to arrive on British decks for the arrival of tea ships. This was the "golden age of the clipper ships." Gold, tin, rubber and oil booms fade into insignificance when compared with tea as a speculative commodity on the London market.

And, of course, it was British imposition of an unpopular import duty on this commodity which did much to crystallize discontent in the American colonies, brought the first organized resistance in the Boston Tea Party of 1773 and provided a rallying issue for the colonies.

Of all non-alcoholic beverages in the world tea is by far the most popular. Coffee is second, and cocoa third.

Healthy Old-Age

Laugh to be healthy, say those versed in medical science. There's a warning, stimulating, uplifting quality about cheerfulness, just as there is a sense of coldness and depression in gloom, says The Brandon Sun. There's nothing as infectious as laughter, and it's one type of contagion which the doctors welcome. The happy soul in office, in classroom or in the home, is the fountain-head of a tonic better than any which comes in bottles.

Lightning
Almost everyone has heard the admonition, "Don't stand under a tree during a thunderstorm." Life insurance statistics recently compiled show how important that advice is. They reveal that about one-third of all persons killed by lightning were struck while under a tree. The warning, it would seem, is a good one and one to be rigidly observed.

Big Mouth
A youth with a very large mouth walked into a music shop to buy a mouthorgan. He was shown every make of mouth-organ in the shop, but still was not satisfied.

"Look here," said the assistant. "We shall have to measure you for one. Just try your mouth along this piano."

Women Use Mouths Emergency Pockets

Struck by the damage women do to their teeth by stuffing bobby pins into their mouths, a Colorado dentist has invented a tooth guard. This marks a scientific advance, perhaps, but at the same time it smacks of defeatism. The dentist has no cure for the habit. He merely is trying to make it less destructive, says The Windsor Star.

No doubt he knew there is no cure. Women have been using their mouths as emergency pockets for so long that this has become a reflex action. The literary confusion of the handbag, and their usually pocketless attire, have driven them to it. Now it has become instinctive.

Glance around at the women waiting at a bus stop, and many of them, especially the ones loaded down with parcels, will be seen holding a coin, ticket, or perhaps a transfer between purses. Mind you, we're not condemning the practice. We doubt if the transit companies could operate without it.

In making a salad the main course in a meal, it should be built around a protein food, such as meat, fish, cheese or eggs. The experts say, too, that eye-appeal is important. To make a salad colorful as well as nutritious, they suggest that it be garnished with crisp radishes, celery curls, carrot strands or parsley.

Cause of Death
Insurance companies often come across untrue evasions on the forms applicants fill out. One man, in the space asking the cause of parental death, wrote, "Father was taking part in a public function and the platform gave way, ending his life." Subsequent investigation disclosed that his father had been hanged for cattle rustling.

TEEN-TOWN TOPICS

We are now well into September and the most of you will have settled down to the fact that there is a long school year ahead of you. But school can also mean fun—and plenty of it. At the moment we are thinking of football. The gang school and you (if you are not a player) can probably be seen standing on the sidelines giving the boys the once-over and watching they will be ship-shape for the first game of the season. Corn roasts on coals fall evenings can add up to the fact that even if fall does mean back to the grind, it can also mean good times with the old gang.
