Site of Meeting—On April 2nd, Prime Minister Mackenzie King and President Truman will meet at the College William and Mary in Williamsburg, Virginia, and will probably have an opportunity to discuss the troubled world situation. The university will confer honorary degrees on the two political chieftains, also on Viscount Alexander, Governor-General of Canada. Above is the Sir Christopher Wren building before which the outdoor ceremonies will take place.

Three Minutes of Fiction Fun

SHORT STORY

Richer Harvest

By MICHAEL TIFF

Melissa Finch would have fainted from shock if Joe Sutton had told her she was a pretty girl or even smiled at her. His pa, Jake, did that right often, which was fair enough.

But Joe did like her cooking. Otherwise she'd have gone away before this; but today was definitely her last day as housekeeper for Jake Sutton and his son, Joe. Melissa hoped she had taken at least a part of the place Joe's ma had left some six years ago when she had passed beyond. She knew that Joe lived with the memory of his ma; acted as though she were in the next room. Melissa had never lost the idea of being an intruder.

"I'm leaving today," announced Melissa. Joe kept mowing toward the door. "I'm leaving today," Melissa repeated. Joe stopped, and she could see his great fingers clench.

Melissa was in the kitchen at the pump and sink. She began washing the dishes. At the same time she remembered that this was her last day. Three years ago she had started in this house of the Suttons—Jake Sutton and that son of his, Joe. She had nothing against Jake because Jake had the sense to look at her as if she was a human being. But that Joe—he was a born woman-hater if ever she saw one. Then she considered—wiping the damp towel over the plates—that Joe had lost his ma.

She watched Jake come in for a packet of carrot seeds. Jake didn't glance at her as he rummaged in the seed pile.

"Reckon as how Joe an' that Blossom Appenzeller gonna be hitched come fall," Jake announced quietly.

Joe wouldn't marry any girl, not even Blossom with her fancy ways, Melissa thought. And, as for herself, she had stood about all she could. If Joe hadn't noticed her for three long years he sure wasn't going to change overnight.

Her suitcase was packed and she sat down on it to close it tight. Then she wondered what Joe was doing. She could see him through the window plain as day. She had to admit that he looked mighty like a man as he heeled that tractor round the field. He'd make any girl a providing husband.

So Jake thought Blossom Appenzeller was for Joe. Maybe Blossom would have liked to nab Joe but Joe had no eye for painted-up lips and chalked-up eyes.

That blue dress on her suited her blue eyes. Melissa stood straight up in front of the dresser glass. Her hand halted midway to her face powder box. She was looking at Joe's ma, an old photo encased in a frame of gilded wood. For the first time, though she had seen that picture every day, Melissa could see why Joe remained aloof from girls; how could any girl come up to Jo-s ma?

On her way down, carrying the suitcase, she wanted to cry for sobbing eased that sickening feeling of departure. As she came out into the afternoon sunshine she could see Jake looking at her from the chicken yard.

"Joe!" Jake shouted. "Ain't you goin' to say good-by to Melissa?" And then she saw Joe stop the tractor and turn to stare at her.

Melissa felt another lump in her throat as Joe stood near her, like a great pine tree. She was awfully small; she was a speck of dust that had blown here by the wind and now was being blown away.

"Why don't you look at me," he said, very low, and his voice came from a distance. She looked up and winced because he was aloof. "I wasn't certain," he said, "but now I known. It's the way you kept house. Ma had a blue dress like that. You're like her."

He took the suitcase from her. Without knowing it, she walked at his side, back to the house. The sun was hot on the fields, a white butterfly floated toward the cabbage patch, and Joe's arm felt good around her waist.

IN OUR TIME. By Howie Hunt

..Scouting..

A new Boy Scout Troop is being organized at Tuke, 5ktuk, North of Aklavik, on the Arctic Ocean. The Scoutmaster, who is also the Guide Captain, is Miss Dorothy Robinson, and the Scouts, three in number, will be Eskimo boys attending the new school. Up until now Canada's most northerly Scout Troop has been at Aklavik.

Awarded Scout V.C.

For having undergone great suffering in an heroic manner, Scout Peter Bullock of Ste. Anne de Bellevue Troop, Montreal, has been awarded the Cornwell Badge, the Boy Scouts' Victoria Cross. He is suffering from Leukemia following an accident in September, 1946.

Jackson Dodds, C.B.E., Dominion Scout Commissioner, presented the award to Scout Bullock in the Royal Victoria Hospital on March 6th. Two days later Canada's Chief Scout His Excellency Field Marshal the Right Hon. Viscount Alexander of Tunis, K.C., made a special trip to the hospital to visit the 15-year-old Scout.

Alpine Club Invites Scouts

Older Boy Scouts from British Columbia and Alberta have been invited to take part in the climbing camp of the Alpine Club of Canada next July at Peyto Lake, about 25 miles north of Lake Louise. Scouts from 16 to 18 years old will be selected for the two-week camp.

Marking the first time Boy Scouts will be mountain climbing under the direction of the Alpine Club, the venture will be one of a series of exploration trips now being planned for older Canadian Scouts this summer.

This invitation is also being extended to Saskatchewan Scouts.

Ontario's First Settlement — 1780

The first actual settlement in Ontario was on the shore of the Niagara River in 1780, when Governor Haldimand proposed that persons should be encouraged to settle around the forts there. His aim was to produce for the use of the garrison. By December, 1780, four or five families had settled and built themselves houses. The large immigration did not come until 1784, but by the end of that year 10,000 United Empire Loyalists had entered that part of Canada which lay west of Montreal. A new British colony had been formed. The American Revolution and resultant Loyalist immigration changed the official attitude.

War Criminal?—Shizuko Tsutsui is the first woman charged with war crimes atrocities in Japan. The 31-year-old former chief nurse at Kyushu University Hospital is accused of performing experimental operations on captured Allied prisoners.

If the present abbreviating tendency persists, one will soon be talking of a morning tea break as follows:

"GOB. HAY?"
"FOF. HY?"
"FAD. WYG?"
"MOOC. AY?"
"SOP. WAW."
"WIBSY"
"SLOT."
"SLOP."

Translation: "Greetings, old bean. How are you?" "Fine, old boy. How's yourself?" "Fine and dandy. Where you going?" "My office, of course. Just a same old place. Work, work, work!" "Well, I'll be seeing you." "So long, old top." "So long, old pirate."

What MAKES a good citizen?

A good citizen respects himself . . .

and respects the rights of others.

He avoids bigotry and intolerance.

He puts the welfare of his country and his community before his own advantage.

He is moderate in his thinking and moderate in his actions.

He is moderate in his use of luxuries.

When an occasion calls for the enjoyment of whisky, the good citizen knows, as The House of Seagram has so frequently pointed out, that he has a personal responsibility to himself, to his family and to his country.

It is to "drink moderately" . . . or not at all!

Sports – And One Thing or Another

By FRANK MANN HARRIS

("A Sixbit Critic")

Baseball Spring training camps are famous for the "fanning bees" that take place in the evenings, when gangs of players and newspapermen sit around on the verandah of some Southern hotel, recalling incidents of the past. One name which almost always crops up is that of Hans Lobert, former Phillie manager and now connected with the New York Giants as a coach. The Dutchman, as he's generally called, had a peculiar sense of humor and many tales are told of screwy things he did.

* * *

Once he was walking along a street in certain Florida city and happened to notice a colored boy mowing a lawn. "That doesn't look like much of a job," said Lobert, "how would you like to earn yourself five dollars a day, for the easiest sort of work?" The lad was keenly interested, and asked just what sort of work it was.

* * *

Wearing a deadpan expression Lobert told him that he was owner of a circus, and wanted help in catching alligators. "There's nothing to it," he went on. "We go out in a group until we find a small island. Then we chain you to a tree while the rest of us go and hide. The scent of human flesh attracts the alligators, of course; and when they climb out of the mud, we catch them with the boy, though still interested, was a trifle dubious and inquired if Lobert had ever done this sort of catching stuff before. "Certainly I have—in fact we tried it the day before yesterday." "And what happened to the boy you chain to that tree?" was the next question. "Oh, him?" answered the Dutchman. "Why that was just a trifle unfortunate. You see, right when he was ready to grab a great big one, the rope with the net happened to slip!"

* * *

* * *

And those who were present, listening to the discussion, always say that a great pity nobody happened to have a stop-watch handy. For there's no doubt that, as he disappeared in the distance, that colored kid broke the world's records for speed afoot.

* * *

One of the great mysteries of the present hockey season, to a lot of the fans, is just what has been making the New York Rangers click. Aside of O'Connor and two or three of the others, Frankie Boucher's boys don't appear to be in the same class with teams like the Maple Leafs, the Red Wings, or even the Boston Bruins; and while some of their intricate passing plays are very pretty to watch, they somehow always look as if a good hustling team should break them up without too much trouble.

* * *

But there they are, in for a helping of the playoff gravy—and don't be too much surprised if they should happen to take The Cup. It's hard to call them to beat teams such as the ones mentioned, but stranger things have happened. Of course, by the time this appears, they may already be on their way to elimination. Still, we have sort of hunch this might be their year—although we wouldn't advise you to wager too heavily that we're right.

* * *

If you're a horse-player—which we hope and trust is not the case—you probably know all about Form Charts, those closely-printed, small-type affairs which the students pore over with such earnestness in their efforts to dig up a winner. But only a very small percentage of the devotees have any idea of how those Charts are made, and how much speed and skill goes into their manufacture. We personally get about as big a kick from watching and listening to an expert Chart maker and his "call taker" in action as from anything else connected with the sport of kings.

Often there will be a dozen or more starters in a race; and in the brief space of time it takes to run it, the names of each of that dozen—in addition to his position and the distance he is ahead of the next in line—must be called no less than six times. There's a call at the start—at the quarter—the half and the three-quarters. Then comes the "stretch call"—a sixteenth of a mile from the wire, then the one at the finish.

* * *

With the horses constantly shifting positions—and racing colors often practically indistinguishable from one another—it takes not only knowledge but lightning-like speed; and it is a marvel to us that so few mistakes occur. It's highly-paid work, and deserves to be. Yet, strangely enough, of all the Chart Makers we have had the pleasure of knowing, we never met one who could beat the races consistently—in fact, at the end of the day, they were generally just as broke as you or I, who select them by stabbing a program with a pin.

And here's a real "oldie" which, until the other day, we hadn't heard in many years. It's about the country girl, who during a railway journey, had to change trains at Toronto. Before leaving home she had been warned against the sly city slickers. So when a young chap at the Toronto depot—noticing that she looked bewildered—asked her if he could help in any way, she was properly discreet, finally telling him that she was going to catch the next train for Montreal.

"That Montreal train leaves in just two minutes," he assucered. "You've just time to make it Come on, I'll carry your bag." By putting on speed, he just managed to get the young lady aboard as the train was pulling out. Standing on the rear platform she waited till the train was making good headway before delivering the crusher. "I've heard all about your kind, taking advantage of girls" she cried. "But here's one that fooled you. YOU SEE, I'M REALLY GOING TO CHICAGO!"

The Green Thumb

Plan Layout of Your Garden

The foundation of any garden is good seed. It is a small item so far as expense goes, but all the care and preparation go for naught if the seed is not right. Descriptions in the seed catalogues are based on actual fact. The pictures are actual photographs and any gardener of reasonable experience can reproduce them faithfully in his own back-yard.

In addition, there will be found in most Canadian catalogues a lot of useful information regarding season, time of flowering or, in the case of maturity, time of reaching maturity. Experts advise also some of the government bulletins covering local conditions. Armed with this literature and good seed, satisfaction is guaranteed.

General Picture

For the average layout around the home, it is advisable to use a combination of vines, shrubbery, trees, perennial flowers and annuals. At the back against the house, vines and tall shrubbery, the latter planted in clumps, make the best background. In front of this, groups of smaller shrubs and larger perennial flowers can be planted with the room between, especially when the shrubbery is still small, filled in with clumps of annuals. Along the front tiny edging plants are used, then will come a piece of green lawn. Use clumps rather than straight rows and a wavy edge along the front of the bed is preferred to straight edges. In the foreground, of course, will be the lawn, the shrubbery acting as the main frame for the general picture.

Good Equipment Helps

With a small garden all the tools needed are a rake, a hoe and a spade or digging fork. These are minimum requirements. With a little more equipment much labor can be saved. Digging forks, cultivators, special weeders, dutch hoes, etc., will make the work easier and more interesting.

For larger gardens a small garden tractor that will cultivate, plow, etc., might be considered. They are not expensive and very cheaply operated. One can get all sorts of attachments to go with them — lawn mowers; cultivators, mowers for cutting tall grass and weeds — even snowplows.
