THE GREAT HUNT

THE PRICES ENQUIRY taking place in the Railway Room of the House of Commons reminds us of the, now almost non-existent, fox hunts that used to take place over in England. Those engaging in the chase probably derived some measure of satisfaction when the kill was made but so far as the general public was concerned it made little difference whether the hunt was successful or not.

The Prices enquiry, directed mainly toward Bread and Butter, may have been deemed to have provided the basis for more general interest in the Ottawa hunt. But any preconceived hopes of arousing public interest, in the great concern of the Government for the public welfare, has been lost by the failure to reveal a culprit in the chase.

The committee members have been clumsily directing questions to those brought before the enquiry with what seems to be the obvious intention of discrediting the integrity of all and sundry engaged in the Baking and Butter making industry. They are supported by counsel, paid at the rate of $125.00 per day by the taxpayers. The counsel are the counterpart of the Hounds in the fox hunt. If they can outwit the fox the scarlet coated, silk hat sportsmen close in for the kill. The hunters in the Prices enquiry seem to be hoping to do the same. But the fox in this case seems to be so far ahead of the hounds (supported and maintained by the taxpayer) that it would seem to be the wise thing to call them off, and retire for tea in the parliamentary restaurant.

GETTING NOWHERE

THE REPORTS of the ever increasing sales of alcoholic beverages and the consequent influences on social conditions generally can only eventually, lead to another move toward prohibition.

The Ontario Government claims the Liquor Control Act as now set up is an improvement over conditions which existed theretofore. While the Government does not claim the present system is perfect, it does claim that it is a step in the right direction. That will not be unanimously approved. In fact there will never be agreement as to how liquor should be handled.

Is the increased consumption of liquor caused by the freer availability of the stuff? or is it caused by other influences? The will agree we are living in a shifting world, and generally people are adopting a day-to-day mode of living. The insecurity of established ways of life incited by the printed word, movies, radio and entertainment generally, all tend to retard the development of maturity in our individual thinking. In other words, we are too easily influenced by outside forces. We never take time to think for ourselves but depend upon the commentator currently analysing events for us.

But what has this to do with the consumption of alcohol?

Those who should be mature in their thinking, and therefore an example to the ever developing citizenship of our country are failing to provide that influence that one day was a real promotion of temperance in all things. When the growing crop of spirituous imbibers discover that intemperance is frowned upon by the better elements of society there will be some hope of attaining true temperance. But first of all the better elements of society will have to get their feet back on the ground.
