

SHORT STORY

There's a Light Somewhere

By M. CHRISTOPHER

Hal Miers took his time walking from the house to the stable. There was a light wind ruffling his hair. The air smelled clean, coming up from the river. He could feel the warm sun, feel it burn because during these long months of absence he had grown accustomed to it.

He reached the edge of the path and left for the corner fence post. Proudly he grasped it. It was like a door opening to a light. I've come this far, the rest should be easy, he thought.

He sought for the edge of the stable; the wide door pulled open. He figured that the hinges hadn't been oiled since he had left them himself months ago.

That was just before he had taken off on that crucial flight and crashed into a mountain. It had taken two lives - and almost his, too. It took his sight but left his memories.

He heard the horse, Michael! The horse remembered him. "Michael!" he whispered tensely.

The horse whinnied. Hal felt the nose touch his cheek. That's what he'd heard. "You of all! How you been, huh? How you been?" Hal sniffed appreciatively. He liked the smell of a horse. It should, for he had practically grown up with it.

"I'll never ride you again, Mike, old boy," he said softly. "I'd probably break my neck. That's what the doc said. That would be foolish, wouldn't it? I'd be a dead duck and not be able to touch, smell or hear you." The horse whinnied again and Hal choked. He hadn't realized how much that meant!

At the hospital, with the nurse on his eyes, he had thought of the wonderful days when he used to ride Michael across the meadow and leap the fence. Hal's father had purchased Michael as a colt for racing. Right from the first Michael had won. But a horse gets older. He must quit. Hal had made Michael quit, but he hadn't quit keeping him and loving him. And riding him, too—until now.

He humbled out of the stable and with groping steps started walking back to the house. "Hal, wait a minute!" It was his father. "I was wondering when it would hit you like this, son. I know how I'd feel."

"That's all right, Dad! Hal said. "Guess I'm just a kid at heart." His father chuckled. "I'll pass. Everything does."

Hal fell asleep late in the morning at disconsolately in the living room. "Hi, nice outside," his father said, quietly. "Why don't you get some sun. You need it in that skin."

Outside he could not feel any wind, but he could smell the stable. He could hear the twitter of sparrows, the faint sound of the river. And he found his way back to the stable and to Michael.

"You're coming with me, old boy!" Hal said.

He groped for the saddle. Could he be blindfolded, he used to say. No, to prove it.

He led the horse outside. The sun began to grip him tighter now. He swung himself upon the horse. "Steady, boy!" he whispered.

"Okay, Mike. Let's go. But easy, at first. Let me get the feel of it. Just around the meadow, boy."

The horse started off. Hal felt the graceful flow of his body and coordinated his own movements with it. Gradually, Hal made him go faster, each time clinging tighter to the reins in his hands. The wind whipped against his face, and a couple of times he felt himself away off to one side as Michael plunged to make a turn, his hooves flung against the hard ground.

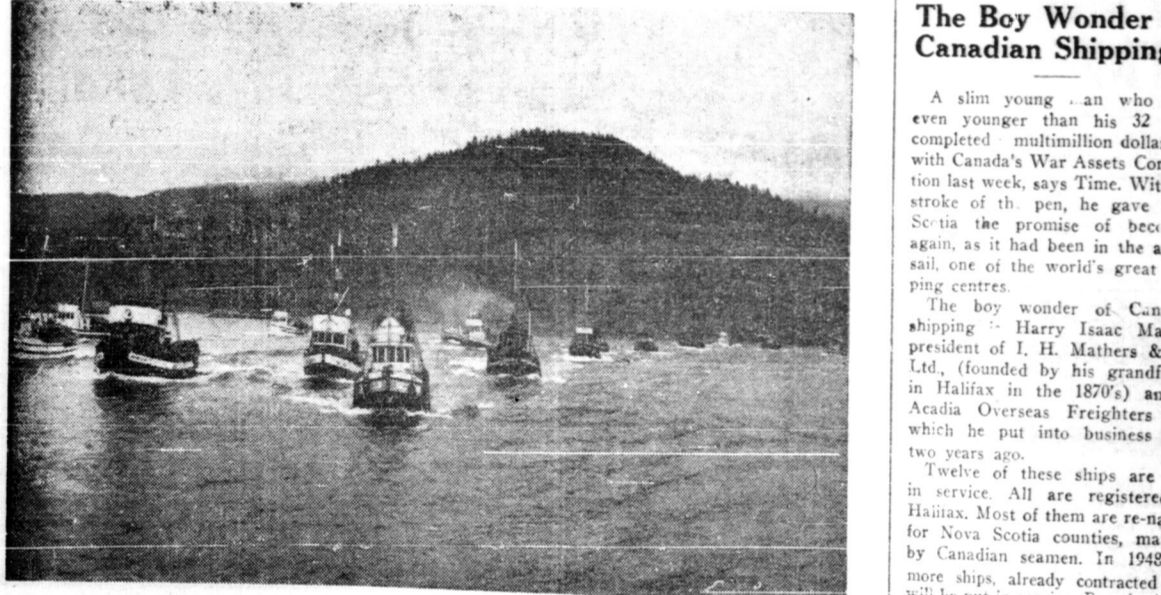

But he always righted himself and stayed on. Hal laughed against the wind, laughed loudly in the sheer joy of riding once again, and a same time proudly Michael to a faster and faster pace.

Presently, a voice shouted through the whistling darkness at him. "Son! or Heaven's sakes, what're you doing? Stop...!" Hal caught the louder, "I'm riding, Dad!" he shouted back. "Riding! Can't you see?"

Ears Open
A young girl was taken to her first football match. All the way through the game the onlookers raised their voices, criticizing or complimenting the two teams. When the girl returned home her father asked her which side had won.

Big Stacked in Front of a ski hut... hundreds of people enjoying their practice slopes... Happy Valley hill in the distance—it is one of the scenes at Collingwood, where two girls from McGill University finished one-two in the ladies' invitation meet. Girls from University of Toronto, Collingwood, Toronto Ski Club and Cobourg competed.

Full Speed Ahead on the Trail of the Salmon—This shot of a Pacific Coast fishing fleet going into action is one of the many vivid scenes from the National Film Board Picture CANADA WORLD TRADER—a film designed to bring home to Canadians just how much international commerce has come to mean to our country.

"Canada - World Trader"

What is the best way of illustrating a dramatic change in circumstance? This was the problem which confronted the particular producer, director and cameraman of the National Film Board when they were making the film, "Canada - World Trader," a film which is now playing on the circuit film programs in Ontario counties.

The movie-makers knew that most Canadians were aware that Canada had changed significantly during the war; that we are now the fourth industrial power in the world, as well as one of the great exporters of raw materials. But the movie-makers did not appreciate the implications of this change. A lot of people would say, "So what?" and never give the matter a second thought.

Some of the New Added
So, to bring the point home, the movie-makers used the technique of contrast. As the film opens, you see a night panorama of London in the nineteen-thirties. As you watch the night lights you become aware that you are looking at the capital city of the most highly industrialized nation in the world. And, by contrast, you see what the people of the world think of when they hear the word, "Canada."

Canada was famous then as an exporter of such raw materials as wheat, cattle, sheep, timber, pulp and fish. Indeed, her lead in these products was in no small way responsible for her victory in 1945. But look at Canada in 1945 or 1948. To adapt the old phrase, "something new has been added." This is no mean matter. It means that nations which used to send us manufactured goods in return for our raw materials can no longer do this, since we can supply many of our own manufactured goods. It also means that we are in a position to help war-torn countries in Europe

Progress of Coal For Britain's Campaign Marked on Map

There is a map in London, dotted with flags that mark the progress of a battle on which the fate of Europe will greatly depend. The flags mark the progress of the British coal campaign. The map shows the progress of the British coal campaign. The map shows the progress of the British coal campaign.

Britain's 216,000 miners are producing more than they have in 1940, and are voluntarily working longer hours in order to speed up production. For nine weeks in 1940, they produced 4,000,000 tons of coal, and higher than the normal rate for 1938.

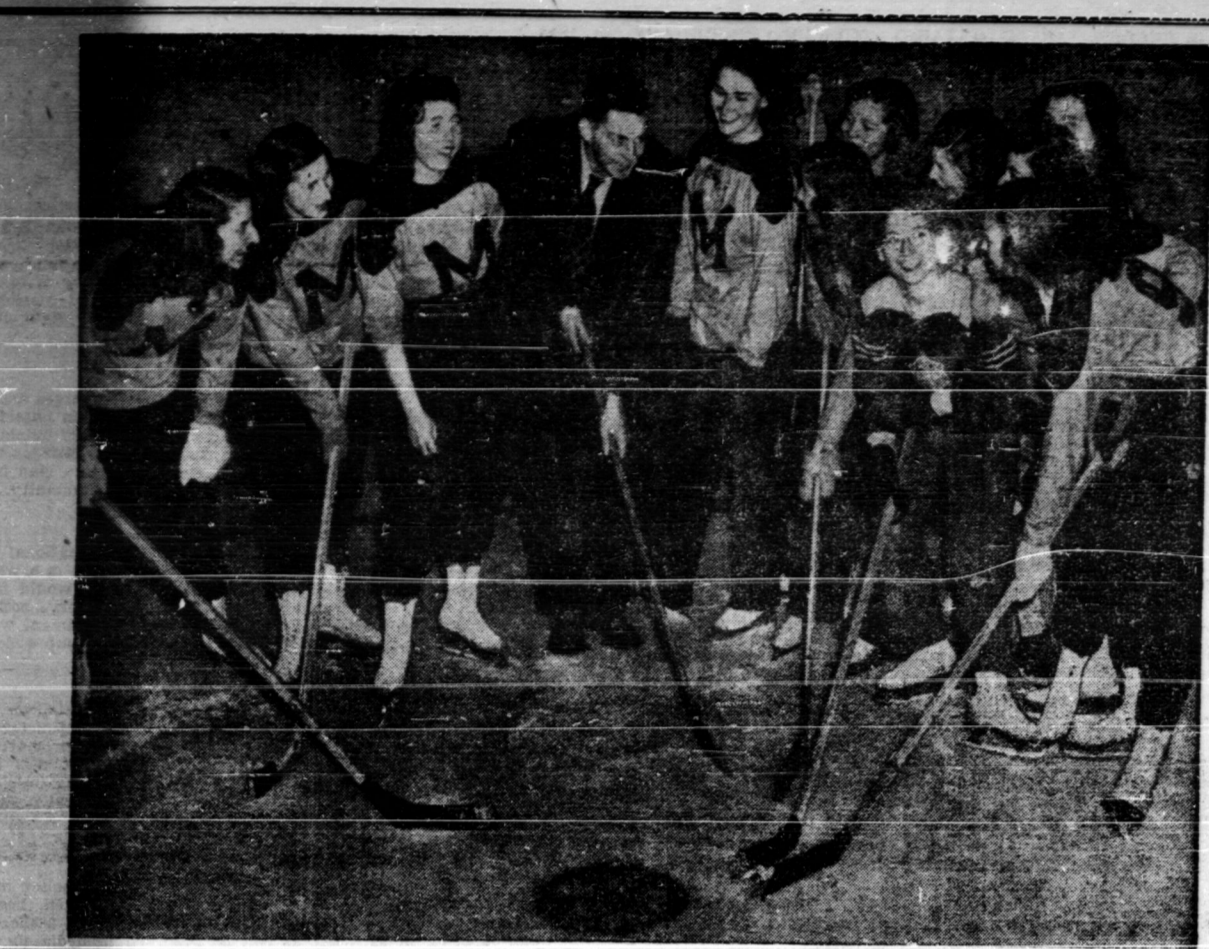

Coal production in the United Kingdom is now being increased by the Minister of Fuel and Power, Mr. Hugh Gaitskell, has announced that Britain will be able to export coal to the United States under the Marshall Plan in 1948.

Bachelor and Hocky Bobby Soxers—Marlboro's Johnny McCormack, leading scorer in the OHA senior race, has other worries besides bagging his quota of goals for Joe Primeau's team. They're obviously pleasant worries, however, as they Vicky Borchert, Ann Malcolm, Betty Markle, the coach, Francis Conlin, Rita Bauer (sister of Bobby, ex-Boston Bruin), Helen Martel, Babe Coughlin and Barbara Smith. Back row: Nancy Gates, Jean Rutherford and Mamie Flynn.

Sports - And One Thing or Another

By FRANK MANN HARRIS

"A Slight Critic"
One of our feminine readers—well, she's not a feminine reader, she's a violent supporter of the Montreal Canadiens. She writes regarding a certain well-known member of a bank company. "I understand that many years ago there used to be a song entitled 'BIG BAD BILL IS SWEET WILL I AM NOW.' I wonder if you could get a copy of it, and send it with my compliments to the mine leader in Montreal. I have no obligation to think too much about the spectators but I'm fighting with professionals, who if they put on a game exhibition are cheating those who make their living possible."

Here, we seem to have got slightly off the trail of Bill Eznicki and whether or not he's lost some of the battling spirit that has characterized him for the past couple of seasons. Our personal feeling is just the same as it has always been—that Eznicki is a colorful and potentially-great hockey player who was being exploited by the type of "sports" promoter who takes a little advice which really opens his eyes.

We had been bewailing to Mr. Nelson the fact that "Our" team—if memory serves a right it was the old Tecumseh Lacrosse Team—was getting the worst of it from some of the "sports" promoters who were in the great danger of losing its last chance for the Championship.

"Don't worry about it too much," advised Mr. Nelson. "Just remember this—if you were to go into those dressing-rooms, right now at half-time, and switch the uniforms on Magazine 'Facts' Need a Recheck"

In a recent issue FORTUNE—the magazine that sells for a dollar a copy and seldom mentions anybody but r down in the social scale than a millionaire—published something of a "blast" at Canada. The article, among other things, said that "in an even race Kansas without grown men put Canadian growers out of business"—the reason being that our farm research was so greatly behind that in "God's" unity.

Canadians who pay any attention to this kind of thing are having a quiet smile to themselves over such nonsense. According to the C.P.R. "Agricultural and Industrial Progress in Canada" the world's wheat championship—decided annually at the Chicago International Grain Show just 29 months out of 35 shows held since 1911. More than that, all four of the wins by non-Canadians were on wheat from Montana, which lies along the Canadian border; and the prize-winning grains were all varieties either originated in this country or from a descendant of Canadian strains.

It would seem as if FORTUNE might do a little checking on its staff. A week or so ago we wrote something in praise of the British Boxing PILES—Modern medical attention has given us a lot of new ideas. Formerly thought of as a disease, piles are now considered to be a condition of the blood. It is estimated that there are 100,000 cases of piles in the United States.
