Synopsis.
 CHAPTER XXV: Pete Haskell, head of the cattlemen, holds a meeting for his men who are angry at Bartle's plan to fence in more land for tobacco farms. Haskell goes to Bartle with an offer to buy the property.

CHAPTER XXVI
 "Why not?" he drawled. "But it'll cost you exact 't' a hundred thousand dollars—cash."
 Haskell—aved is hands angrily. "Twenty times what its worth! You must think you've got the whip hand, eh?" He got up from his chair, bitter, belligerent. "All our ranches and stock put together won't fetch that."
 "Why, I always thought you lords of all creation were worth millions," Bartle sneered.
 "Haskell" tried to keep his temper, but it was difficult. He felt the hot blood of resentment suffusing his face.
 "Listen to me!" he made a final plea. "We ranchers can raise maybe twenty-five thousand cash between us. We'll buy—"
 "Three hundred and fifty thousand or nothing," Bartle's smile was infuriatingly triumphant.
 Haskell could stand no more of the banker. He turned and trudged heavily to the door.
 "I've had my say," he growled over his shoulder. "I'm telling you that no top cow man sets himself up in the north end of Deep Water Valley—and that's flat. Now go on with your blasted plans!" He stormed downstairs and out, slamming the outer door after him until the glass in it rattled.
 Bartle smiled. He knew the immensity of the war between cattlemen and tobacco farmers, but what matter? Let them fight! Nothing could fit into his own plans better. For under the smoke screen of

What We Know About Jesus: His Nature
 John 6:35-40; Colossians 1:9-10.

GoldenText—Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.—Matthew 16:16.

Last Sunday the humanity of Jesus was noted in the reference made to his birth. To-day we face the fact of the deity of Jesus Christ. This doctrine is the cornerstone of Christianity.

What mere man dare make such statements as, "I am the bread of life; he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst"; "I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of Him that sent me"; "This is the will of Him that sent me, that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life; and I will raise him up at the last day." These words are credible only on the lips of Christ, the Son of the living God.

The Saviour gave many gracious invitations but perhaps none has given comfort to more despairing hearts than the one, "Him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out." Men and women, their minds distracted, their bodies broken by sin, literally outcasts

Girl In Love Fools Parents

Month after month, year after year, I go along warning young girls how foolish they are to slip out and meet boys of whom their parents do not approve. Yet week after week, month after month, girls write me and tell me they are doing just that foolish thing, and ask me to please help them.

Well, sometimes I forget that there's another generation. I'm writing for, since I started this column 20 years ago. Maybe these girls read it for the first time, or perhaps I helped friends who suggested they tell Anne Hirst about it. "She'll fix it!"

At any rate, here goes for the umpteenth time in the past few months. If other readers are bored, I hope they'll remember who I am. I'm addressing this one girl who writes me.

Q. Who are the first to leave the church when the wedding ceremony is over and the bride party has departed up the aisle?
 A. The ushers escort to the door all the women who are in the first pew, the bride's mother, the bridegroom's mother, then the other side of the aisle.

Q. When a man is accompanying a woman on the street, should he take her arm when crossing the street?
 A. Yes, it's poor manners for one to sip coffee or tea while food is in the mouth?

Q. Is it all right to wait until the mouth is clear of food?
 A. Yes; it is much better to wait until the mouth is clear of food.

Q. Is it all right to use "Respectfully" or "Respectfully yours" as a close to a social letter written to a person of social position?
 A. No. This closing is usually reserved for a business letter.

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM

By Gwendoline P. Clark

And how did you weather our little sub-zero winter? It was pretty sudden, wasn't it? I suppose if the truth were told this paper could be filled with anecdotes of pipes that froze; of cars that wouldn't start; and how low the thermometer dropped at this place and that. But I don't think anyone could think up as strange a story as I have to tell.

That night, that bitter twenty-below-zero night, one of our cows had a calf—and the calf performed the almost impossible feat of drowning itself in the water tank at the barn.

Partner had been watching the mother of this calf very carefully, as she was over her time. Every night this week, just before he went to bed, he would get on boots and overalls and pay a final visit to the barn. If the boys were out late they should get a look at the calf cow before turning in. But it was always the same story—no calf. It was the same thing Thursday night. But on Friday morning when the boys went to the barn there was every evidence that the cow had had a calf—although no calf was nowhere to be seen. Presently Bob came to the house for a flashlight and to tell Partner they had a baby in the middle of the river with her bow sticking out of the water. She presents a picture indeed! Steam rising from the river shrouds her in mystery as the ice and water flows over her deck and past.

Well so much for skimming and winter travelling.

Do They Make You Sick, Too?
 Have you been listening to the political talk of late, since King has decided to retire from the field and since the war on prices has begun? You should, providing, of course, that you want to be sick. We have been listening to these radio speeches lately and they make us laugh. Talk about kids fighting over marbles; brother, they are left behind a mile. How educated men, men of supposed dignity and distinction, can talk and act so childishly and so stupidly is a matter to be wondered at. Very scenic spot of Ontario. Farther east, just out of Morrisburg, you can see the oil freighter that sank in the St. Lawrence last September. Still lying in the middle of the river with her bow sticking out of the water she presents a picture indeed! Steam rising from the river shrouds her in mystery as the ice and water flows over her deck and past.

Well so much for skimming and winter travelling.

Winter Wonderland

While on the subject of winter, we would like to mention what we think is the most picturesque winter spot in the Province of Ontario.

Two weeks ago we left home at 7 a.m. on the coldest January morning in many years (around 20 below, remember?) for Morrisburg, Prescott and other points. Well, on the way we shot north to Hawkeville. From there we went east to Marmora and Madoc—and that few miles to Marmora is something to see in winter. The road is winding and hilly, but what scenery! Here is truly a cameraman's paradise. As you come over a short rise you find a small house nestled at the foot of a hill, a tall spiral of smoke ascending from its chimney. Travelling along between the two high walls of snow you meet a man with horse and sled. His dog jumps and rolls in the snow as it tags along behind or bounds on ahead. Yes, sir, here is a

Gather your favorite Valentines about you this February 14th and treat them to a real "hearts and flowers" Valentine party!

The entertainment, appropriate games and prizes, of course—the refreshment, a simple, dainty supper climaxed with this delectable apple dessert—Apple Butter Stacks, shaped into hearts with a cookie cutter or a cardboard heart pattern.

Apple Butter Stacks
 1 recipe All Bran pastry
 1 cup apple butter
 1 4-ounce package cream cheese
 1 teaspoon lemon juice

Prepare pastry. Cut with large cutter into circles or squares. Press and bake in hot oven (450 degrees F.) about 10 minutes or until light brown. Cool. Put circles together with apple butter between, using a tack of three for each serving. Spread cream cheese mixed with lemon juice on top. Stack. Serve at once.

Bran Pastry
 1/2 cup All-Bran
 1/2 cup sifted flour
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 1/2 cup shortening
 4 tablespoons cold water (more or less)

Crash bran into fine crumbs; combine with flour and salt. Cut in shortening. Add water a little at a time, until dough is moist enough to hold together. Roll out on lightly floured board 1/8 about one-eighth inch in thickness.
