

Her Whole Life Seems Spoiled — A Canadian film that has won high acclaim both in Europe and the United States is "The Feeling of Rejection". In a striking manner it shows how a sense of being "unwanted" in childhood can affect the entire life of an individual, and what modern psychiatry can do to relieve this condition.

The Girl Who Felt "Unwanted"

This month in many Ontario counties people will have a chance to see a different type of psychological film, entitled, "The Feeling of Rejection". Produced by the National Film Board for the Mental Health Division of the Department of National Health and Welare, "The Feeling of Rejection" is the story of Margaret, the elder of children in an average Canadian family. Outwardly she ap-pears to be quite normal: in work and home life she is quiet but

But Margaret is not well. She is troubled by headaches, stomach upsets, dizzy spells and constant up any reason for them. So, in due course, she is referred to a psychithe "model child".

The psychiatrist has Margaret ell him about her past life. Lead ing back from the present into her the accumulation of incidents which

unded to make Marga ret what she is today. Today you see a Margaret unable o face up to the normal competition of every-day ilfe. At home, for example, although she has planned to spend the evening at a movie, she gives in to her younger sister who refuses to share the housework when it interferes with her plans for entertainment. Again, at the office, she consents to work overtime on another girl's job although she wanted to leave early to go shopping. Next day, the shopping trip is a failure since she lets the salesgirl override her choice of dress. These submissions to other

Going back still further, the psy chiatrist "digs out" incidents from her childhood which created in Margaret a crippling fear of failure, and the consequent fear of trying anything new. Her parents, through a fear of having the child injure herself, check many of her normal activities. Again, since her parents give most of their attention to the younger sister — Margaret feels she is unwanted. To get her par-ents' attention, she tries to show them her natura! talents as they are expressed in such things as dancing. But she is told that "nice girls don't show off." Gradually Margaret learns that the only way to save herself from the frighten ing sense of being unwanted is to

OUR FALL FAIRS ATTRACT GREAT ATTENTION. During the Autumn months last year a feature of these pages was a series of striking action pictures taken at various Fall Fairs held throughout the Province. At the Annual Convention was a series of striking action pictures taken at various rail rails held throughout the Province. At the Annual Convention of the Agricultural Societies of Ontario, held at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, on February 11th, 12th and 13th, a display of the original photographs from which those pictures were ma de caused a great deal of favorable comment. It was even said of the original photographs from which those pictures were made caused a great deal of lavorable comment. It was even said that so many of those attending recognized themselves or friends in the photographs that the display frames were almost stripped before the Convention ended. Above is seen just one small corner of the exhibit. In the past few years more and more towns and villages are coming to recognize the immense value to a community of a good Fall Fair, and it is hoped that publicity of this sort will act as an encouragement to all who help carry on the good work.

MAUDE NORMAN

The sound of a ragman's horn came in the open window of the room, where, with housewifely zeal, Nancy Winters was busy with spring hou cleaning.

A gleam came into her eyes. She thought, "I'll give him that pile of magazines Ted has in the garage and all those pop bottles he is al-ways promising to take away, but never does. I'm tired of having them around." The ragman looked around hopefully as he loaded the bottles and magazines on his rickety old truck.

"Any olda clothes, Ma'am?" he asked. "A. / old rubber or iron?" "No, that's all . . . wait a min-ute." She darted into the garage, returning with a pair of old grey trousers. Here, you may as well take these, too." She gave her husband a particularly warm kiss when he came home that evening. "I'm almost dead," she sighed as they were eating dinner. "At first I thought I would open a can of soup or something easy to prepare, by then I remembered how nice you were, so I made you this meat pie and upside-down cake." Thus she tri d to pave the way to tell him what she had done. "It beats me why you have to kill yourself, trying to do everything in one day," Ted answered. "The house always looks all right to me without you having to tear it apart every so often. Thanks for the swell dinner, Honey. Guess I'll work on the car for awhile.
