Arthur Carter is a very progres-sive farmer, now having forty-five cows being milked and expansive fields of prize winning crops.

On another day I visited Burford and Taynton where my father's family originated.

Roth are anoignt unapoiled communities, Taynton being one of the few English hamlets that is not even on any bus route. It is one of the Truck Tire and Wheel, betwee on any bus route. It is one of the most peaceful spots I have ever seen with a seven hundred year-old church and thatched cottages and barns, looking as if they were just as old. At Dorchester stands the famous Abbey, an impressive ancient building, in perfect condition, although the walls of the Nave were built about 1150. Before that was a Saxon Cathedral built about 650 and long before that a Roman camp stood on the site.

The Abbey is a long bullding over 200 feet in length, filled with interesting old features including a Jesse window, the figures of which are scuptured in stone at each intersection of a mullion. It is one of the most interesting abbeys in all England to visit.

It is bigger than the church and in this case is a building of thirty large rooms set in spacious grounds. The vicar rents more than half of the house to other families.

While here I visited Uffington, which is a beautiful village with a famous old church, and also Wootstone.

The latter was one of the most unique villages I saw in England. Nestling far from any bus or railway route, every thatched house was a perfect picture and there is an inn over six hundred years old.
